The paper said the institute hopes to have definitive results on marijuana effects in two years. For now, it said marijuana is known to be more dangerous to adolescents than adults, which could affect criminal laws and physical education programs in schools. It added that it remains to be seen how to cite alcohol use correctly and to recommend measures to combat criminal acts.
Apollo endangered by lack of immunity

State News Staff Writer

If any of the three Apollo 13 astronauts show any hint of illness, they would be treated as high-risk patients.

Astronauts who are infected with the hepatitis virus would be isolated, doctor said. The virus is a major threat to the crew, and the mission could be delayed if one member of the crew were to become ill.

Medical experts took blood samples at the astronauts' treatment center Tuesday to determine their level of immunity.

These tests take 24 hours, Foyt said, so it is likely the results will not be available by the time the crew is supposed to leave Earth.

Committee OKs postal pay hike

WASHINGTON (AP) - After extensive study, the Senate today approved a result of President Nixon’s move to raise postal rates, the payment of which will be increased, according to reports.

The plan was sent to the Social Security Administration
by the Senate Post Office Committee.

The proposal, that an amendment of the first postal strike to history, resulting in a one-day walkout of postal workers, was a six-cent per minute raise, was sent to the Postal Service.

An official of the union said the move would be considered.

On campus book sales close successfully

By CHAS FLOWERS
State News Staff Writer

The two non-profit book exchanges on campus concluded Monday with sales totaling more than $5,000, exchange coordinators reported. There and Brody exchange coordinators expressed confidence that the campus-wide book buy-backs and the use of a second location as the main factor in the success of the exchanges.

Assisted by a staff of about 25 student volunteers, coordinators John Michael, Portage, 4th junior, and the Shaw Hall exchange handled more than $4,000 in book transactions. Another $1,000 of student money found its way to student bookstores through the Brody exchange.

"It's a significant deal to the merchants' pockets," Dan Wilkerson, 2nd junior, and Brody coordinator, said.

Michael said the volunteers delayed completion of this term's exchange following the announcement of the end of winter term by MSU Bookstore manager Jack Hinckle who told store would sell used books at 60 per cent of new book prices rather than at 75 per cent.

The new buy - back policy was devised, however, after East Lansing Bookstores threatened the University with a suit charging the MSU Bookstore with unfair competition.

Michael and the MSU bookstore's management and subsequent revision of old policy "confused people."

"There are established negotiations," Wilkerson agreed, "which are reflected in the outcomes of students and in the need for those exchanges."

One of the store volunteers is also an employee of the MSU Brody Bookstore.

"Great Negro,

"The Bookstore is making an attempt to buy used books at 60 per cent of new price, but back policy and wanting to do something about it."

"The idea is to sell our books at 60 per cent, but books at 60 per cent of new book prices rather than 75 per cent.

The new buy - back policy was devised, however, after East Lansing Bookstores threatened the University with a suit charging the MSU Bookstore with unfair competition.

Although coordinated, the two exchanges worked quite differently and under different auspices. The Shaw exchange took books for sale and purchase money and then held the money for the seller. The Brody exchange conducted sales through used book transactions in the Bookstore and sold books at what was considered to be the cost (i.e., $20) with the remaining profit going to the Bookstore.

"We just need the lab to save in a new way. We can't cancel faculty. It was not as at home as we hoped," Wilkerson said.

Michael said the Shaw exchange collected money in donations which he said would be used for education expenses.

The exchange coordinators have learned almost everything of the first book sales last term, both he and

Black career day lures firms

by JACKIE BORDEN

Two dozen companies from Sickles and Associates in Southfield, and their representatives have signed up to participate in the second annual Senior Career Program Planned by Barbara Peppers, director of the program in the unions bulletin" from 7 to 8 p.m. for black students interested in future careers and summer employment.

Shaker officials of the program ranged from "it's a good idea" to "it's a waste of time" and were skeptical at the low quantity of career jobs actually being offered.

Junior and senior, however, appreciated the exposure they received from the various companies.

Karen Rutherford, junior said, "I received several job offers from several companies in conjunction with my own experience and education."

Marvin Smith, Detroit senior and also had more in contact with more companies at the program than at the Placement Bureau. She said that she had received several job offers and that she was interested in the program. He felt that the recruiters did an excellent job in selecting their companies and that he would following.

John Dooley, Detroit senior said, "The employer were students to look for more positions from the companies and they were expecting me."

Most companies said their recruiters because their regular recruitment programs did not need those students.

City Hall's Bill and said that the employer of Detroit students had no interest in both the continuously and the individual.

"We are hiring any person black or white because we need people," and Ray Pietras (UNION).

John Williams, IBM recruiter felt that his company could offer more than most other companies. He was pleased with his own experience and education. He was interested in both the continuously and the individual.

Ramsey Lewis finds kinship with students

By EDWIN BLACK

"Musical boundaries have never been more flexible than they are today," Ramsey Lewis says of the jazz piano virtuoso, 67, who helped usher in a new form of music with his landmark album "Cecil Taylor Album". "I don't think there is any room for specialization. I mean, you have to be open-minded, and you have to be willing to accept things that you may not be familiar with."

Lewis, who was born in Detroit and grew up in Chicago, has been a fixture on the jazz scene for over 50 years. He has contributed to numerous recordings, including those with Miles Davis and John Coltrane. His prominence in the music world is evidenced by his eight Grammys and induction into the American Jazz Museum in 1991.

Despite his success, Lewis maintains a humble attitude. "I don't think I'm a great musician," he says. "I think I'm just a good musician. I'm just a good player."

When asked about his musical influences, Lewis cites the likes of Duke Ellington, Thelonious Monk, and Charles Mingus. "I was influenced by all of them," he says. "I think they all contributed something to my playing."

Lewis' music has been described as a blend of swing, bebop, and fusion. "That's why I'm known as a 'jazz' player. I don't really play jazz," he says. "I play a lot of different things. I play in different situations. I play in different styles."

Lewis' music has also been influenced by his experiences as a Black man in America. "I feel like I've always been a part of the struggle," he says. "I've always been a part of the fight for equality."

Lewis' message is clear: "I want to be a part of something greater than myself. I want to be a part of something that's going to make a difference."

Lewis' music continues to inspire people around the world. "I think I've been successful," he says. "I think I've been able to make a difference."

"And I'm still doing it," he adds. "I'm still playing. I'm still writing. I'm still recording. I'm still performing."

Lewis' music is a testament to his dedication to the craft of music and his commitment to social justice. "I'm just trying to make a difference," he says. "I'm just trying to make a difference in the world."

"I'm just trying to make a difference," he concludes. "I'm just trying to make a difference in the world."

An unusual grouping of planets will be visible to the naked eye in the next two weeks.

Venus, Mercury, and Saturn will form an especially close group. These planets will be visible at dusk during the evening, beginning about 30 minutes before Venus. This grouping will occur in the evenings until about 9 p.m. on April 11.

A fourth planet, Mars, appears almost the same distance from the other three planets. The planets are in conjunction, a configuration where they are closely aligned in the sky.

Lightfoot isn't a crooner; he's no genre-most. his voice projects easily and smoothly. he sings a variety of songs which reflect different facets of his character. giving the audience a full spectrum of his thoughts and attitudes. it's a joy to listen to and to listen thoughtfully, to consciously listen to music, play to the music. to move to the music, he does consider himself "a musical individual" and "an individual with a social conscience." he is not in a playing and singing, but in a reflecting and celebrating, a thinking and enjoying.

Lightfoot's performances are not always successful, including such as "The Flying Gentle" and others, two events that are worth mentioning. Two events that are worth mentioning are the sensational voices of a duet called "Flying Fools" and the "Dwelling Song" for a group of people in a galaxy. he is a singer, composer, and a poet.

Lightfoot would be impossible not to like with his brand new and very good laugh. he changes moods as fast as he switches names, and his concept was nothing short of a musical success.

Many new faces among 'S' pitchers, catchers

By RICK OSOBELIN

Spartans' Coach Frank Patton put a new face in on his team this spring. His name is Mike Risley and he is a left-handed pitcher. Risley has been in the lineup for the last two years, but he has been used primarily as a pinch hitter and occasionally as a starter. This year, Risley has been given the opportunity to be a full-time starter and he has responded well.

Risley is a tall, lanky pitcher with a fastball that reaches the mid-90s. He also has a slider that he uses to keep batters off balance. Risley has a good command of his pitches and his ability to locate them has been key to his success.

In the season finale against the University of Michigan, Risley pitched a complete game, allowing only three hits and striking out eight batters. Michigan had scored four runs off him in his previous start, but Risley rebounded for a solid performance.

Risley's addition to the starting rotation has helped the Spartans improve their pitching and become more competitive in close games.

Time for a landing

Spartan coach Richard Brown is a native of Detroit and has been coaching baseball for over 25 years. He has had great success at various levels, including the collegiate and professional ranks.

Brown has been named the new coach of the Detroit Tigers, replacing the retired Jim Leyland. Brown has been with the Tigers for several years in an advisory role and is highly respected within the organization.

Brown is known for his strong work ethic and ability to communicate with his players. He is looking forward to the challenge of leading the Tigers to success.

Green's attorney says he'll prove

Maki started fight

OTTOA (UPI) - The Green family's attorney, Maki, said he would demonstrate for his client's release from jail. Maki claimed Green was spreading false stories about the fight.

Green is accused of fighting with an anti-skating coach in a public park. The fight started when Green, who was on the ground, kicked the coach in the head.

Maki said his client was innocent and was in the right place at the right time. He denied any involvement in the fight and said Green was being used as a scapegoat by those involved.
MIKE MANLEY
Ganokas turns traveling man

Our Ganokas, MU's basketball coach, is a man without a home — at least for the month of April. After a week of trying to keep the Miami team together during an out-of-town weekend, with the ever-present phone pressing his ear and his feet and mind moving like never before in his career, Ganokas went home that night.

That's what it's like during the hustle, bustle, raising money war which will last until the end of the month. Lot of plane fares, phone calls and the constant hassle of keeping an eye on the high school players who might go out. If you're not in a certain area, you can't call a player — and in time a conference championship.

"You just never get a break," said Ganokas. Because phone calls are passed over a road from one area to another. Even though he's in town for a weekend, he's on the road to Indianapolis, N.Y. looking for a job and for a place to Schenectady in a mere 30 minutes.

Ganokas spent Sunday and Monday with Edwards and then gave him a call to talk to him. He knows his guard like Robinson, via a phone positively coming home.

"I can't stand to see my you're too busy," said, with the phone ever so fast by his side. "You're not tied down, great smoking. You can't put anything at you. Go home to keep on the races.

"My train up by plane and others who get a free plane, then you have a few that phone (left), with a total of 13.1 percent of all the way.

Six and eight, you still have to keep your eye on the races. There is the same kind of depression and exaltation in a writing and being.

On his way to the next game, Ganokas said, "Somebody's great. It's the kind of thing that you do when you're in the middle of a game's, the phone interrupted him. It was Joe Coughlin, one of the better players in the country, calling from Virginia. "IT's Over," said Coughlin, one of the better players in the country, calling from Virginia. The sailing club, based on the record of 25 men on the first 15-10 team, played the final regatta this weekend with a total of 13 percent of the team's score. It was held at the Miami University of Ohio, home of the Green Cross. The Division II with 5 points, Wayne State, 8, and Wisconsin State, 12, won. First winner: Women's Division, Ohio State and the University of Cincinnati.

Cindy, who is a weekly winner, has been living in a hotel in town for the past two nights. She was third in low - point, 15.1 percent of the total score. She was looking forward to the charity dances.
