Temporary insanity plea asked for accused 'GIs'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressman who have reported there was a meeting of the charged American soldiers accused of killing two civilians in Vietnam have asked for the accused men to be tried by military court. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Sen. Hubert H. Harrison, D-Iowa, joined two students and the president of the University of Michigan in presenting a petition that campus protests will not continue until war in Vietnam is ended.

Hubert Harrison’s speech was delivered at the Michigan State University campus on Thursday, July 10, 1970.

Stevens gets support of MSU black faculty

The Black Faculty Committee has issued a statement supporting the University Brotherhood of Michigan State University, known as MSU, in its efforts to strike against the Vietnam war. The committee was formed in 1969 to support the students in the anti-war movement.

The statement reads, in part, "The Black Faculty Committee is proud to join with the students in their fight against the war in Vietnam. We support their struggle for freedom and justice, and we will do all in our power to help them in their efforts."

BRAUN MIDGET

BRAU MIDGET

BRIDGETON, New Jersey (AP) — Vietnam veteran Hoffman, who said he witnessed the assassination of President Kennedy, has opened a Vietnam-themed restaurant in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

The one-year sentence for his role in the 1968 assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. was upheld by the state appeals court.

Hoffman, a 70-year-old Vietnam veteran, had been convicted in 1968 of conspiracy to commit murder in the death of King in Memphis, Tennessee.

A state appeals court on Tuesday overturned the conviction, saying the evidence was insufficient to support a finding of guilt.

Hoffman, who was serving a life sentence for the murder of three people in the civil rights movement, had already been released on parole.

He was one of several people charged in the 1963 slaying of three civil rights workers in Mississippi.

The other defendants were acquitted, and Hoffman was the only one to be convicted.

Hoffman claimed he was a member of the New York-based Black Panther Party and had been involved in the assassination.

He was released from prison in 2001 and has lived in a halfway house since then.

The restaurant, called Vietnam Veterans' House of Refuge, is located in a former hotel in Atlantic City.

It is open to the public and serves a menu of Vietnamese food.

Hoffman said he wanted to use the restaurant as a way to raise awareness about the Vietnam War and its impact.

He said he also wanted to use the restaurant as a way to support veterans.

Hoffman, who served in the Vietnam War, said he hoped to use the restaurant to provide a space for veterans to gather and share stories.

He said he also wanted to use the restaurant to provide a space for veterans to learn more about the Vietnam War.

Hoffman said he had been working on the restaurant for several years and had raised about $50,000 to get it started.

He said he hoped to open the restaurant in late December.

The restaurant is open daily from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Hoffman said he hoped to see veterans come in and enjoy the food and the environment.

He said he was excited to see the反应

He said he had received support from a number of people, including members of the Vietnam Veterans of America and other veterans organizations.

He said he was also excited to see the reaction from people who were not veterans.

He said he was hopeful that the restaurant would be a success and that it would help raise awareness about the Vietnam War.

The strip of Grand River Avenue from Bagley Street to Hagadorn Road has been variously described as the "murderous mile" of Lansing's "strip" and "area." Regardless of the euphemism applied, this five-square-mile area remains one of the least glorious aspects of metropolitan Michigan.

It almost seems that the city fathers in areas like this are intent on the student in mind, i.e., get as many as you can. After suffering the indignity of standing in the rain or snow for a few minutes as day motorists go by flashing by, the hapless pedestrian is left with the choice of taking his life in his hands in a mad plunge for the other side, or waiting another hour until the traffic clears. There are no traffic signals, no sidewalks or crossing lights provided. These things are nonsensical when you have vehicles that are not exempt from the traffic regulations on Grand River. For example, is caused by the daily influx of traffic from and into Lansing. This flow could be rerouted from Bagley to Waverly, thereby direct ing it away from the highly populated central area. And while the Bagley to Waverly stretch of road would remain open, the fact that Grand River would no longer be a thoroughfare to serve the traffic flow on the "mammoth" mile, is more than adequate and safe trickles.

Further, the road would probably enhance, rather than detract from the business of concerns opposite the campus on Grand River. Many of most of our customers come on the campus that is more business doing business with these three business concerns, and that is the way more adequate than the student concerns.

The Lansing City Council gave the traffic plan serious consideration. In clear, plain, something might be done; done before the city already overstressed Grand River route will go; we will become worse in the number of vehicles in this area increase.

One of the main problems for the planners with the car traffic is the lack of adequate parking on campus. At any time during the day, traffic congestion would be material if adequate parking space is not provided. In this situation, traffic congestion could be material if adequate parking space is not provided. In this situation, traffic congestion could be material if adequate parking space is not provided.

The Lansing city fathers did something to correct this dangerous situation. The greatest suggestion to date is the proposed creation of a pedestrian mall on the part of Grand River Avenue between Abbott Road and Bogae.

The positive aspect of this scheme is many. Traffic on Grand River, for example, is caused by the daily influx of traffic from and into Lansing. This flow could be rerouted from Bagley to Waverly, thereby directing it away from the highly populated central area. And while the Bagley to Waverly stretch of road would remain open, the fact that Grand River would no longer be a thoroughfare to serve the traffic flow on the "mammoth" mile, is more than adequate and safe trickles.

Observatory ready for use

The new $640,000 observatory is now ready for operation, Albert F. Lowend, chairman of the Astronomy Dept., has announced.

The observatory, located two miles north of the campus at Forest and College Roads, has a 24-inch reflecting telescope. The $430,000 instrument is housed in a steel and concrete building 50 feet in diameter and 15 feet high.

Dr. Lowend explained that light movements of the building from the wind will be reflected by the telescope so that it will be in constant motion. To the building was a giant reflector around the telescope which will be used to catch the light from the telescope which will be used to catch the light.

Lowend said that he is looking forward to the use of the telescope in observations of galactic barred stars. The new telescope is being used in the process of work on the Michigan Observatory.

Campaign seeks to quell nationwide VD epidemic — NEW YORK (AP) — A new campaign against venereal disease — now a nationwide epidemic — was announced Wednesday for New York City. The campaign is being launched in small groups in the area, according to the director, Dr. V. J. C. Van Gruen. The campaign is being sponsored by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and the director of the new campaign, Dr. V. J. C. Van Gruen, is also responsible for the telegraph campaign launched in the past for the eradication of polio, the director said.

"Let's come up close and talk this out, that it's ought to be the talk," said Dr. W. A. L. C. Van Gruen. The New York City Department of Health is collaborating with the Foundation in the program.

The "Institution," VCU, the director said, is a nationwide disease causing an epidemic in all states of the nation. It is feared that many people who have not had venereal disease will be infected by it.

Speaker cites Cambodia as 'brutal' U.S. precedent

Joyce spoke to about 100 people in the auditorium at the University of Arkansas.

"The United States was incapable of understanding the political circumstances in Cambodia," Joyce said. "The Vietnamese were not only a military force, they were a political force.

Citing alleged contradictions in the government's claims about the Cambodian campaign, Joyce said that the U.S. military could only have been 'delusional' if they claimed that they never engaged in the war.

"The level of brutality is something that is not seen in the United States," Joyce said. "The Vietnamese have been fighting this war for many years, and they are not only fighting for land, but for their way of life.

Although the entire country of Cambodia was destroyed by the campaign, according to Joyce, the Vietnamese were able to maintain their internal peace and their movement for their military victories.

"In a country that was destroyed by war, they were able to maintain their internal peace and their movement for their military victories."

"They have a strong will, and they are not easily intimidated."

"The Vietnamese are not just fighting for land, but for their way of life."

"They are fighting for their survival, and they are not going to give up easily."

MSU scientists study fish using cyclotron, computer

A group of MSU physicists are using their cyclotron and computer facilities to explore the nature of nuclear decay.

"We're trying to find more reliable and accurate methods of analyzing traces of heavy elements in biological compounds," William H. Kelly, professor of physics, said in an interview. "Kelly, along with Ray Warner, also of the Physics Department, and William McFarren, associate professor of physics, have been investigating the "activation analysis with charged particles" technique.

A specimen of fish is placed in a stream of charged, helium particles from the cyclotron. Mercury atoms contained in the fish sample are "activated" or changed by the particles into radioactive isotopes of helium or lead. The decay occurs when the atoms return to their original state of being non-radioactive.

This technique, according to Kelly, is more precise than the gamma-ray techniques normally used for activation analysis. Kelly said that the new technique can detect the presence of various trace elements, such as hydrogen, iron, calcium, and potassium, in fish samples.

"We're just at the very beginning of our studies," Kelly said, "but the results obtained so far are quite promising."

Two other analysis processes using the cyclotron are being done. One is elastic scattering and decay fluorescence. In elastic scattering, particles accelerated by the cyclotron are fired into the sample to be tested and when they strike atoms in the specimen. The energy of the particles as they hit the specimen is known, and their energy after they have been slowed down by the atoms is measured. From this, the energy of the particles after the collision can be determined. The results can be used to determine the energy levels of various parts of the particles.

The second process being investigated is electromagnetic and decay fluorescence. In this technique, a beam of gamma rays is fired into the sample, and the energy of the gamma rays is measured. The results can be used to determine the energy levels of various parts of the particles.

Kelly said that these techniques are particularly useful for studying the effects of accidents on fish. For example, Kelly said that the techniques could be used to determine the levels of radioactive substances in fish caught in a particular area following a nuclear accident.

Kelly also said that the techniques could be used to study the effects of environmental factors on fish. For example, Kelly said that the techniques could be used to determine the levels of poisonous substances in fish caught in polluted areas.

Other data compiled from the cyclotron and computer facilities is expected to be used in studies on the effects of nuclear decay on fish and other marine organisms.
