

Osteopathic College concept termed unique

By BOB ROACH
State News Staff Writer

"A unique concept in the history of medical education," was created by action of the board of trustees this year. The trustees officially established Sept. 17 the University's 16th college, the College of Osteopathic Medicine, as the nation's first such publicly-supported institution. Enhancing that uniqueness will be the coexistence of the University's second medical college with the allopathic College of Human Medicine. Through legislative statute and elaborate preparations by the MSU administration, the Michigan College of Osteopathic Medicine (MCOM), one of six private schools in the country, is now being incorporated into the University structure. Now located in Pontiac, MCOM admitted its first class in the fall of 1969. Students now in class at Pontiac are scheduled to complete their classroom training there, while new students will be admitted to the East Lansing campus next year. MCOM has now been integrated with the University structure and only technical problems of the incorporation now remain. Establishment of the osteopathic college within the University meets a long-standing need in the state: 16 per cent of the nation's osteopathic hospitals are in Michigan, as well as 18 per cent of the nation's practicing osteopaths; 15 per cent of the state's licensed physicians are osteopaths and the state has consistently ranked second in the country in residents studying osteopathy. To meet this need, the legislature passed Public Act 162 in July, 1969. The act required the establishment of a school of osteopathic medicine at one of three campuses in the state with an existing medical school - MSU, Wayne State University and the University of Michigan. In compliance with the act, MSU last September submitted a position paper outlining the conditions under which it would accept responsibility for the school. A month later the State Board of Education designated the University as the site for the proposed school. Although now greatly diminished, there has been much controversy surrounding the practice of osteopathy. The science was developed in the 19th century by Dr. Andrew Taylor Still, a physician and surgeon practicing in Missouri. He theorized that abnormalities of the skeletal, muscular and ligamentous tissues resulted in interferences of the normal nerve and blood supply with reciprocal effects in the body's organs. He developed a system of manipulation "to realign functional deviations and abnormalities." The establishment in 1892 of Still's American School of Osteopathy was followed by a proliferation of unregulated osteopathic schools which contributed to the profession's "quack" image. This condition has since been erased by the American Osteopathic Association's establishment of stringent accreditation standards, which left only five accredited schools in the country. While some controversy still exists concerning treatment practices between M.D.'s and D.O.'s, establishment of the College of Osteopathic Medicine at MSU holds great promise to ameliorate those conditions. Dr. Andrew D. Hunt, dean of the College of Human Medicine, describes the new college "as a great opportunity for everyone involved to establish effective working relations between the two professions." Dr. Hunt said he could not assess the response of his faculty and students to the new college, but said he was recently visited by two groups from the American Association of Medical Colleges who encouraged him to pursue cooperation between the two colleges. These sentiments were echoed by Robert D. Schuetz, associate director of the Institute of Biology and Medicine, who is coordinating the assimilation of MCOM into the University. Demonstration against Nixon

A group of students, demonstrating against Nixon administration policies, carry a banner saying "Nixon: war-maker, strike-breaker." Nixon decries terrorism in OSU campaign speech

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The campaigning President Nixon, decrying political terrorism and campus violence, said Monday, "It's time to draw the line and say we're not going to put up with this." He strayed from his announced path almost at the start of a two-day, six-state campaign swing with a side trip to Ohio State University, scene of frequent campus violence last spring. There he spent 25 minutes among 1,000 or more students shaking hands and exchanging remarks. His trip to the Ohio State campus, where National Guardsmen did two tours of duty before it was closed in the face of violence last May, was unannounced but students quickly flocked around him. One young man wearing a white T-shirt faced Nixon and said, "You can take my draft card." He added he did not want to die in Vietnam. "I'm winding down the war, boy," Nixon replied. He recited his record on troop withdrawals and told the youth, "You watch us, boy."

accomplishments and urged them to vote GOP Nov. 3. Most of the crowd cheered and applauded but one dissenting group standing to the side chanted: "One, two, three, four. We don't want your... war." The President took note when he told the gathering he knows the public is concerned when there are shouted obscenities "such as this crowd over here doing." Gesturing toward his hecklers, Nixon said: "They are not the youth of America today and they will not be the majority of the youth of America tomorrow." After Nixon finished talking, outgoing Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes took the microphone to decry the fact a number of youths found perches in "defenseless trees" on the Capitol grounds.

Canadian forces hunt for Quebec terrorists

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — Canadian security forces sealed off escape routes from Quebec Province Monday and mounted a massive search for the terrorists who killed Labor minister Pierre Laporte. Police confirmed they found the kidnapers' bloodstained hideout and possible scene of Laporte's execution.

The prime minister, his cabinet and about 100 members of parliament are to attend Laporte's funeral Tuesday in Montreal, traveling under tight security wraps. Acting under the wartime measures in effect since Friday, army troops and provincial and Royal Canadian Mounted Police fanned out across Quebec hunting two men named in warrants as wanted in connection with the kidnappings of Laporte and Cross, British trade commissioner in Montreal.

A hunt continued for the other hostage, British diplomat James R. Cross, despite a letter in his handwriting that said he would be killed if police closed in on the French-Canadian separatists who kidnaped him 15 days ago.

Police said they found the hideout where Laporte was kept — a frame bungalow in the suburb of St. Hubert. The house is three quarters of a mile from where Laporte's body, a bullet hole in the head, was left in the trunk of a car by the terrorists Saturday night. The body was found early Sunday.

Montreal, Canada's largest city, appeared on a war footing, military and police helicopters clattered overhead. Troops were in the streets.

Detective Sgt. Albert Lysacek said there was blood on the floor of the bungalow and signs of violence.

In Ottawa, the federal Parliament gave overwhelming approval to Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's use of wartime security measures against the terrorists, members of the Quebec Liberation Front — the FLQ.

Find hideout

The House of Commons met with echoing applause Trudeau's vow that the FLQ would not succeed. Trudeau said the front, which seeks Quebec's independence from Canada by means of violent revolution, has "no mandate but terror, no policies but violence and no solutions but murder."

Lysacek said police believe the house was used by Paul Rose, 27, one of the two FLQ members being sought. The other wanted man is Marc Carbonneau, 37-year-old taxi driver. Cross was kidnaped in a cab.

Lysacek said they found a pillow whose design and fabric matched one found with Laporte's body. Also found were crumpled notes similar to FLQ communiques. He said chicken bones were scattered about and there were bloodstains on the garage floor.

Lysacek said known FLQ members had occupied a deserted house next door until a month ago.

Student body president, prof booked at Kent State

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP) — The student body president and an associate professor at Kent State University were among the first of 25 persons to be booked Monday in a special grand jury probe of the Kent State riot last May. Two young men already in jail on drug charges also were served with indictments. Craig Morgan, 20, a senior and student body president, was arrested in student government offices on the campus. He was charged with second-degree riot during disturbances on the campus May 1-4. Details of the charge were not given. Dr. Thomas S. Lough, 42, an associate professor of sociology and anthropology, surrendered on a count of inciting to riot May 4, the day four Kent students were killed in a clash with Ohio National Guardsmen. Morgan and Lough were named in secret indictments handed down Friday by a special state grand jury that investigated the campus rioting. The grand jury, in a report issued Friday, also exonerated the guard with regard to the deaths and said a major cause of the campus disorders was administration permissiveness and laxity in discipline. Portage County officers began serving papers Monday. Names of those indicted were not released before their arrest. Among the others indicted was Richard Felber, 21, of Akron, a former Kent student, charged with first-degree rioting, attempting to burn a campus ROTC building, striking a fireman and interfering with a fireman at the scene of a fire. Felber was already in Portage County jail awaiting transfer to Mansfield Reformatory to serve a 20-40-year sentence

Chicanos consider 'U' unresponsive to needs

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer
President Wharton's Commission on Admissions and Student Body Composition heard a group of Mexican-Americans say Monday that MSU unresponsive to their needs. Addressing the commission's fourth public hearing, representatives of La Raza contended that the University is not living up to its land-grant philosophy in respect to migrant workers. Although they have made agriculture the second largest industry in Michigan, grants have been unable to gain admission to MSU and other universities, the group said. Four Mexican-American mothers from the Lansing area told how their children were prohibited from taking college prep courses in high school and refused admission to college. Joseph Garcia, vice president of the Michigan chapter of La Raza, insisted that the groups' demands were "just and long overdue." Among the recommendations the group presented were: more flexible admissions standards, increased financial aid, Chicano staff members including instructors, more effort on the part of the Center for Urban Affairs to deal with the problems of urban Mexican-Americans and a goal of 400 new Chicano undergraduate admissions by the fall of 1971. Of the 400, the group suggested that 50 be directly drawn from the migrant worker population and all be given complete financial support.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt said Monday his country would accept an extension of the 90-day cease-fire with Israel, provided serious negotiations aimed at ending the Middle East conflict get under way, Cairo radio reported.

The new Egyptian leader warned, however, that Egypt would accept only one extension of the original cease-fire, which is due to end Nov. 6.

"But that does not mean we will keep the cease-fire going indefinitely," he said. "We must show the world the true face of Israel and the imperialist assistance it is getting."

American troop strength in Vietnam was reported Monday at 378,900, the lowest level in nearly four years.

Ground fighting remained scattered throughout Indochina, but U. S. planes pounded the Ho Chi Minh trail, flew interdiction missions in Cambodia and provided combat support for government forces in Laos.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund filed suit against the Nixon administration Monday, charging widespread and willful failure to enforce federal law requiring nondiscrimination in the use of federal education funds.

The defense fund's suit, filed in the U. S. District Court here, is in behalf of 25 public, elementary, secondary and college students in several southern states. Defendants are Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and his civil rights chief, J. Stanley Pottinger.

The defense fund accused HEW on several counts including: Complete inaction against racial discrimination in southern colleges and universities.

Abrogation of its enforcement responsibilities in districts under court order to desegregate.

A hands-off attitude toward state departments of education that approve federal outlays for discriminatory purposes.

A group of militant Young Lords, several armed with rifles, occupied an East Harlem church for a second day Monday, keeping vigil over the body of a 34-year-old member they said was murdered in a city jail.

Few police were in sight as the youthful Puerto Ricans guarded doorways to the First Spanish Methodist Church while supporters and newsmen milled outside. About 200 persons were reported inside the church.

"We don't want a confrontation, but if we must defend ourselves, we will," said a spokesman over a loudspeaker.

"We're not going to give up this church."

The church was seized Sunday after members of the group invaded a funeral home and took a casket containing the body of Julio Roldan, who police said, was found hanged in his cell in Manhattan's Tomb's prison.

Automobile repairmen say the General Motors strike is depleting the supply of parts, particularly body parts, and some garagemen are scrounging through junkyards for substitutes.

An Associated Press survey of auto repair shops across the country showed that the motorist who has an older model GM car is by no means immune from the effects of the six-week-old United Auto Workers strike against the nation's largest automaker.

"Customers just don't realize that this strike involves parts as well as new cars," the general manager of a Western Chevrolet dealership pointed out.

"We just turn them away on minor repairs now — like fenders — and tell them to come back when the strike is settled," said one parts manager for a GM dealership.

Meanwhile, GM Monday sent letters to all members of United Auto Workers Local 160 appealing for a reconsideration of their vote not to allow 306 skilled workers to return to work on essential air and water pollution and safety projects.

Campus News

Union members in service departments ignored a Circuit Court restraining order and continued picketing and striking over an impasse in contract negotiations at Ferris State College Monday.

A spokesman for the college in Big Rapids said operations at the school are continuing despite the handicap of the strike that started last Thursday and there are no immediate plans to curtail academic programs.

Lindsay endorses Dem for governor

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor John V. Lindsay, an enrolled Republican, broke with GOP Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller Monday and endorsed Democrat Arthur J. Goldberg for governor.

But, he told a news conference, "I am Republican and I intend to remain a Republican."

Lindsay has long been at odds with Rockefeller over state aid to the city, mass transit and what he considers the governor's failure to pay enough attention in time and money to urban problems.

He said earlier in the campaign that his endorsement would depend on what ticket he felt would be best for New York City.

At his news conference, Lindsay also endorsed Basil Patterson, Goldberg's running mate, for lieutenant governor and said "they have expressed the strongest commitment to urban problems."

Goldberg was present at the news conference at Gracie Mansion, the mayor's residence, and told Lindsay he was "performing an act of political courage" by endorsing the top of the Democratic ticket.

"It means a great deal to Sen. Patterson and me," he said. Patterson represents Harlem in the state senate.

Goldberg said the endorsement "illustrated a basic fact of what politics should be about — that country, state, city and the welfare of the people come before partisan politics."

Lindsay stressed Goldberg's views on urban problems. He said the Goldberg-Patterson team "offer the best chance to end our annual role as a beggar for survival in Albany" — the state capital.

Lindsay, elected as a Republican in 1965, lost that party's primary and won re-election on the Liberal and Independent lines.

Both Goldberg and Patterson, first black to seek statewide office, are running on the Liberal as well as Democratic tickets.

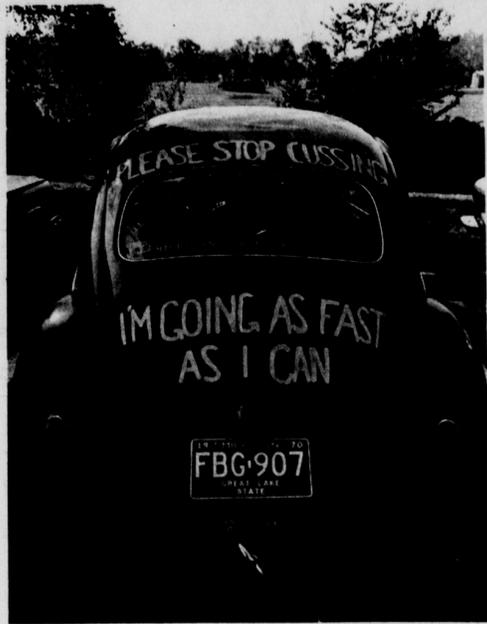

Goldberg endorsed Lindsay in 1969 while Rockefeller supported the regular Republican candidate, state Sen. John J. Marchi.

"The dominant forces in Albany have been anchored to the past," the mayor said as persons at the news conference applauded and cheered. "They have resisted change every step of the way. Now they must yield to new leadership more responsive to local governments."

Lindsay denounced what he called a national swing to the right, said New York State must be heard against that trend and added that Goldberg-Patterson "is the one gubernatorial ticket that stands against that trend."

He emphasized that except for Goldberg and Patterson, he was supporting the Republican ticket statewide, and mentioned especially Sen. Charles E. Goodell.

Goodell, like Lindsay a strong opponent of the war in Vietnam, has been denounced by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew as a "radical-liberal." Lindsay seconded Agnew's nomination, but said last May he regretted having done so.

Astronaut to talk at meet

Astronaut Alan L. Bean, the fourth man to walk on the moon, and Harold C. Urey, a Nobel Prize-winning scientist, will head the list of speakers at the first Conference of American Planetarium Educators beginning Wednesday at Kellogg Center.

Over 400 representatives from 700 planetariums in public schools, universities and museums throughout the United States and Canada, are expected for the conference, which will run through Friday.

Bean was lunar module pilot for the Apollo 12 mission, the second U. S. lunar landing expedition. With Charles Conrad and Richard F. Gordon, the Apollo 12 crew completed the first precision lunar landing, performed the first lunar traverse and executed other scientific tasks.

Bean will describe his experiences on the lunar surface at Wednesday's dinner meeting.

A world-renowned scientist and educator, Urey is now professor - at - large at the University of California. Best known as the discoverer of deuterium and Nobel Prize winner in chemistry, he is also considered an authority on the problems of the origin of the earth, meteors, solar systems and the moon.

Urey will present some conclusions from his work on the structure of the moon at the Wednesday luncheon session.

At the invitation of the College of Natural Science, Urey will speak this afternoon on the origin of life and the possibilities of extra-terrestrial life-forms.

The public is invited to attend the presentation at 2:30 p.m. in 322 North Kedzie lab.

Prof criticizes new law for 18-year-old vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1970 federal law giving the vote to 18-year-olds was attacked in the Supreme Court Monday as frivolous legislation that "does violence to the Constitution."

Speaking for the state of Texas, Prof. Charles Alan Wright said "this legislation flies in the face of the Constitution" and would have been rejected out of hand by the court "were there not respect for the body across the street — Congress."

Wright, a University of Texas constitutional authority, said the issue is not whether 18-year-olds are mature enough to vote. They are certain to get the vote some time, he said.

Rather, said Wright, the question is "whether the historic concept of this country, a federal union with sharing powers, is a failure."

U.S. Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold defended the new law at the all-day hearing, though he relayed the reservations of President Nixon and other administration officials about the 18-year-old provision.

The provision applies to all elections and primaries held on or after next Jan. 1, unless the court declares it invalid.

The Court agreed Monday to rule on the 1968 gun control law and on state laws that make it a crime to cast contempt upon the American flag.

The 1968 law requires manufacturers and transferors of certain kinds of firearms to register with the federal government. The court will hear an appeal by the Justice Department from the decision by U.S. District Judge Warren G. Ferguson of Los Angeles that key sections are invalid.

At the same time, the court granted a hearing to a New York art dealer who was convicted in 1967 of violating that state's law against flag desecration. The dealer, Stephen Radich, contends the law conflicts with the First Amendment's free speech guarantees.

The gun control law amended provisions of an earlier firearms registration act found by the court in 1968 to be unconstitutional. It was tested when the government indicted Donald Freed of Los Angeles and Shirley Jean Sutherland of Beverly Hills, Calif., on charges of conspiring to possess unregistered hand grenades.

Dismissing the indictment last March, Judge Ferguson said registration would have required them to furnish information to the federal government that would have been incriminating under California laws.

Radich, owner of a Madison Avenue art gallery, was prosecuted for exhibiting seven constructions by Marc Morrel, an artist and protester of the Vietnam war who used the flag in his sculpture. The one found most objectionable by New York state courts displayed the flag as a male sex organ.

Radich contends the law suppresses free speech. He said artistic expression may not be punished even if found to be contemptuous of the flag. He was convicted and sentenced to 60 days in jail or a $500 fine.

Also granted review was Vincent Francis McGee, Jr., a former divinity student convicted of draft evasion. The Baltimore-based antiwar worker contends he was entitled to conscientious objector status.

A Roman Catholic, McGee had told his draft board he intended to study for the priesthood. He enrolled as a divinity student at Union Theological Seminary in New York City in 1967. Reclassified 1-A, he returned the notice unopened. The government contends he did not challenge denial of his request for CO status until his trial and therefore cannot use the denial in fighting his 1969 draft evasion conviction.

In a separate action the court agreed to decide whether the government may deport refugees from Communist China who have been given asylum elsewhere but wish to live in this country.

Another appeal granted review was one by an airman, Herbert P. Schlanger, who claims he should be released from the Air Force because the service did not allow him to complete his education. The education program, at Arizona State University, was part of Schlanger's contract with the Air Force.

NEW DEAN SOUGHT

Selection method set

The Communication Arts College Advisory Council will meet with Provost John E. Nixon next Monday to discuss procedures for selecting a new dean of the college, council chairman William Rintelmann, professor of audiology, said Monday.

Jack M. Bain, dean of the College of Communication Arts, announced Oct. 13 his intention to resign as dean and return to full-time undergraduate teaching.

Rintelmann said the advisory council was not meeting earlier because of scheduling problems. "We're very anxious to move ahead on this thing," he said.

Rintelmann said it would be difficult to speculate on who the new dean might be or where he would come from.

"People from within the college will very definitely be considered," he said. "It's still uncertain whether we will also consider candidates from outside the University."

During a reception for campaign workers, one woman brought a two-year-old photograph of the first lady and herself to be autographed. About 1,500 women, active in Republican Party politics, gathered at the Raleigh House in Southfield to meet the two campaigning ladies.

"It certainly takes women to bring new insight into government," Mrs. Romney told them.

Mrs. Nixon explained that active volunteer all her life. I just hope she has a chance."

The appearance of the President's wife was sorely needed by the Romney forces, who have seen their candidate slip far behind incumbent Democratic Sen. Philip A. Hart. A Detroit News poll published Monday showed Hart receiving 67 per cent of the support, 24 per cent for Mrs. Romney and 10 per cent undecided.

At Southfield High School, the 1,000 students assembled in the auditorium rose and applauded when Mrs. Nixon accepted a replica of the school flag. Mrs. Romney had accepted an invitation to appear there to answer questions by Lisa Roth, a 15-year-old school newspaper reporter.

At Harper Hospital, doctors, nurses, staff members and patients crowded corridors and stairwells, craning to get a glimpse of President Nixon's wife.

Mrs. Romney wants to be part of the President's team, then said, "With all the woman power in this room, I know we can put her there."

Gov. William G. Milliken also directed his comments to the assembled women.

"I see the real power of this state in your faces. We are fighting and fighting hard and we intend to win," Milliken said.

At Southfield High School, which was cleared before their arrival because of a fake bomb threat, Mrs. Romney said the problems facing society today are "social and human."

"Tune in so that you can be more alive . . . become involved," she said. "I think we talk too much about the generation gap. There is a gap only because we turn our backs on others."

Later, as Mrs. Romney and Mrs. Nixon moved down an aisle to leave the auditorium, Sandy Barron, a 16-year-old junior, told Mrs. Romney he liked her opponent, Sen. Hart.

"I think his record is pretty good. He voted to get out of the war," said the teen-ager as he raised his fingers in a peace symbol salute.

"So would I," said Mrs. Romney.

"We didn't hear from you in 2 years. Where were you? Were you brainwashed like your husband said he was on the war?" Barron said. He referred to former Michigan Gov. George Romney's 1968 presidential primary campaign remark that he had been "brainwashed" on a visit to Vietnam, a comment which brought him considerable opposition.

Mrs. Romney continued on without answering Barron.

Sooty mold attacks American elm trees

Black sooty mold, a fungus thriving on Michigan's wet fall weather, is attacking MSU's American elm trees.

James Hanover, associate professor of forestry, said the grimy-looking substance is caused by a fungus and is related to the powdery mildews.

"Some people, seeing the sooty appearance of leaves infested by the mold, may be inclined to blame the condition on air pollution," he said. "But pollution has nothing to do with it."

William Wallner, MSU entomologist, said the condition could reduce the vigor of a tree, thus exposing it to other maladies.

"Usually, however, there is no danger of a tree being killed by this type of infestation," he said.

"The President and the Press: The Case of Mr. Nixon" will be discussed by John D. Molloy, associate professor of social science, at the Thursday meeting of the MSU American Studies Assn.

Molloy's talk will be taken from a paper he delivered to the Midwest Political Science Assn. in Chicago last May.

Prior to joining the MSU faculty in 1966, Molloy spent 13 years on the editorial staff of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. in 340 Case Hall.

Right to attend class on trial in New York

Judge Patrick Picariello, in a decision at New York City's Small Claims Court, may have set off a chain reaction of fiscal turmoil for colleges and universities that suspended or canceled classes because of student strikes or disturbances. His ruling stipulated that New York University (NYU) must pay the partial tuition refund sought by a fireman from Queens, N.Y.

The fireman, who paid the tuition for his 19-year-old son's spring semester, sued NYU for a $277.40 refund because the university canceled classes for 19 days during extensive student disruptions last May. NYU will appeal the decision.

If the appeal fails, a wave of suits may follow. The fireman pointed out that this "was a test case... If people see this, it could open the floodgates." The possibility of numerous suits being introduced implies that the decision should be inspected to uncover any flaws in judgment which would render the ruling invalid.

Apparently NYU President James Hester had just this in mind when he responded to the judge's decision as one made "without full and accurate knowledge of this institution."

For instance, does the suspension or cancellation of "formal classes" due to a high incidence or potential for violence mean that the student is deprived of receiving an education?

What type of class, course or educational alternatives were initiated by NYU administrators or faculty when "formal classes" were canceled? Did the student seek out such alternatives? Can tuition be correlated with classes and class sessions as alluded to by the student's father and the judge? Perhaps tuition is more closely correlated with total credits, allowing a looser interpretation of class sessions by both faculty and student?

The judge ruled that the university had breached its contract by canceling classes before the semester's intended close. NYU's appeal may elucidate whether tuition obligates universities for education or simply a block of classroom time.

Laos-y fleet

Once in a rare while we come upon an editorial that virtually writes itself. To wit:

One of the least known fighting forces in the world is the Royal Laotian Navy. Perhaps it's better that way.

A Wall Street Journal reporter states that the royal flotilla has five "ships," one of which actually has a motor - a woodburner.

There are apparently many problems involved in sailing the Laotian waves. The three major hassles seem to be - to quote the sailors - ten-foot catfish, whirlpools and river dragons.

Be this as it may, the Laotian Royalists are still the titular allies of the United States. Thus, when the U.S. naval attaché to the Royal Fleet (he is stationed in Bangkok, Thailand) was questioned about Laotian seaworthiness, he declined, stating that such information would be of "direct benefit to the enemy."

only adequate solution

The threat of political kidnappings by domestic radical groups has been raised by a U.S. senator in the wake of the recent kidnaping of two Quebec officials. Sen. William Saxbe, R-Ohio, has reported that government officials had been alerted to the danger of kidnaping and Congressmen were being warned to be "very careful."

William Sullivan, assistant to FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, told a conference of editors last week that radicals might attempt political kidnappings during the election campaign.

Whether or not actual plans have been uncovered by the FBI or Justice Department, the spiraling number of worldwide kidnap attempts poses a serious problem for the U.S. government. Above all, a hard-line stand must be proposed, adopted and adhered to before a governmental crisis occurs. Perhaps Sen. Saxbe has arrived at an adequate solution.

He suggested that the law make it a crime for government officials to accede to the demands of terrorist kidnappers. Passage of such a law would notify all prospective kidnapers that demands - especially those asking the release of political prisoners sympathetic with their cause - could never be met because adhering to the kidnappers would constitute a Federal crime in itself. This is not a full-proof scheme. Terrorists might kidnap U.S. officials, hoping the actual kidnaping would cause a suspension of the law. In addition, the passage of the rigid law would not alter the fact that kidnappers could kill the officials captured even after agreement to the demands.

Nevertheless, the law could act as a deterrent to political kidnappings. If kidnappers knew a Federal statute prohibited their demands from being met, perhaps they would see little point in kidnappings.

Further, discussion of such a measure would provide a framework for future law. An effective statute can be hammered out only by testing and revision, and Saxbe's proposal could be a realistic starting point. If Congress waits until political kidnappings increase, the Democratic process may prove too slow to handle the volatile situation.

POINT OF VIEW

Women strive for humanity

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following point of view was written by two collectives from the Women's Liberation Front on Campus.

It is unfortunate and demeaning that a man with Dr. Thomas' apparent intelligence should direct such specious and negative remarks at a revolutionary movement that he apparently only has superficial knowledge of. With all due respect to Thomas' credentials in psychology and black awareness, we would like to point out that he is not an authority on women's liberation or on women period.

That he should launch such a vicious attack with no justification or documentation to back it up is indicative of the contempt men have for the women's liberation movement, and that the State News should give it such play is also indicative of their contempt ("Aha! Someone else thinks they're as ridiculous as we do - let's give it a full page spread!") We think it is important that such flagrant misrepresentations be clarified lest people, especially our sisters, believe them. So, for the re-education of the doubting Thomas' of the world and for our sisters who are perhaps confused by the "straight press" image of women's liberation, we offer the following information.

Number one, the women's liberation movement has never and does not now advocate or demand that women burn their bras. For one thing, bras cost money - money that women work long, dreary, degrading hours to earn. The subject of bra-burning has been constantly with us since the first Miss America Demonstration in Atlantic City. Bras were burned along with other accouterments of torture in an attempt to explain that women were tired of being exploited as consumers ("I dreamt I floated down the Nile in my Maidenform bra") and that they would wear what they considered comfortable with no direction from male manufacturers.

The point is, if it is comfortable to wear a bra, you wear one, if it isn't you don't. It is a trivial point but one which male critics have done their best to keep in the foreground - possibly because of their fetish for breasts (pencil tests anyone?).

Number two, women's liberation is not a group of bored, white, middle-class housewives. To begin with, what is generally called a middle-class woman is actually a female who is economically dependent on a middle-class male. Women do not have, as the popular phrase goes, "a piece of the pie." As consumers, money passes through our hands (from husband to grocery store, etc.) but in a society in which money determines value, women are a group who work outside the money economy.

Our work (as housewives) is not worth money, is therefore valueless, is not worth even real work. Our participation in wage labor occurs but, as a group, we have no structural responsibility in this area and such participation is ordinarily regarded as transient. As Juliet Mitchell points out, "In advanced industrial society, women's work is only marginal to the total economy. Yet it is through work that man changes natural conditions and thereby produces country that fight oppression on every level, from welfare mothers to secretaries. We are jailed, beaten, harassed and raped for our aggressive denunciations of the existing order. Women do not bear hardship and pain out of boredom.

But part of our social plight (one that we confront every day in every way) created by our revolutionary brothers and black and white who shout and wave the arms and waste energy denouncing women when they should welcome us and work with us in the spirit of revolution - in the creation of a society fit for human beings. But our brothers who have rejected the concept of innate superiority in the form of capitalism, imperialism and racism refuse to deal with sexism. They tell us to become "revolutionary wombs" or that the only possible position for us in an organization prone or that we are irrelevant.

The facts that led Thomas to decide that the women's liberation movement doesn't deal with "social realities or social plight" are inexcusably absent from his accusations. Women's liberation recognizes as social reality that white women are oppressed because of their sex; those who are workers are oppressed because of class and sex. Black women are oppressed because of race, sex and class.

We are not trying to play the "I'm more oppressed than you" game because we know that the worst reality of oppression comes down on those who must fight racism and sexism. Women's liberation is struggling to deal with the problems that confront women of all backgrounds.

This is a list of some demands which speak to those problems: 1) Free 24 hour

We are not trying to play the "I'm more oppressed than you" game because we know that the worst reality of oppression comes down on those who must fight racism and sexism. Women's Liberation is struggling to deal with the problems that confront women of all backgrounds.

STEVE ALLEN

Develop communicative lines

I was in President Wharton's office the other day to pick up my weekly column, when I saw a fairly good-looking, long-haired, sorta-bearded fellow who wanted to see the head man for some reason or other. As I picked up the weekly presidential pearls of wisdom and left the president's office, I noticed that the long-haired fellow had held an elevator for me. I don't exactly remember the brief conversation we had as we walked towards Circle Drive, but it went something like this.

This guy had been very active in the strike last spring. A couple of weeks ago he had run into Wharton on the Administration Bldg. elevator where they had a brief talk about opening up the channels of communication between students and administrators. He asked the president if it would be possible for them to carry the conversation further at a later date. Wharton said to get in touch with him in a couple of weeks. This was why the long-haired fellow was in the office earlier. Now many conservatives are not going to believe this, but the long-haired guy was being very polite while he was being told that he could not see Wharton today; that no, Wharton has a full schedule tomorrow; and that the president will be out of town Monday and Tuesday. Finally, he settled for a chance on Wednesday, taking a full dose of MSU moo-ocracy in the process.

Take into consideration the fact that the strike central committee is one of the most radical groups on this campus (which means that East Lansing is not Berkeley). Supposedly your typical campus rebel would demand to see the President immediately, then settle for five minutes ago.

Not so for this young man. As I talked to him, I noticed he sincerely believed he would get to see the president, even if it took a while. Wharton had given him his word that he would talk to him for a few minutes, and this guy was going to hold him to it.

Communication problem

If the two ever should meet, the topic will be the establishing of better communications, which is the biggest problem at MSU. There is no way for students to communicate with the men at the top unless a major crisis breaks out. Wharton would have talked to this guy immediately if he had looked out his window and saw the charred remnants of Demonstration Hall. But it doesn't work that way. Unless there is a crisis, meetings take precedence over students.

On the other side of the fence though, there was a different story. The student was going to continue to get to see the president, before he had to see the president and before all hell breaks loose.

And all hell will break loose if Wharton does not get out of his quiet office and into the community controlled child-care center; 2) End to sexist tracking in the education system; 3) Establishment of Women Studies programs; 4) Free legal abortion on demand; 5) End to forced sterilization, birth control and abortion; 6) Free self-defense classes; 7) Open up medical, dental and law schools to women as well as trade schools and unions.

These demands are just the beginning of a protracted struggle for women to regain their humanity. In the meantime, Thomas, we suggest that you check out the Third World Women's Alliance and see how bored they are.

Typical statement

This student, I have been talking about, is think, typical of the student movement (such as it is). This is autumn, a brand new ball game from last spring. For most, this is not the time to be stirring up the University. Now is the time to get back into things. See your friend who has moved off campus to get that date with that someone who wouldn't go out with you last spring. If you are really into political action, you work for Milliken or Hart.

But as the year progresses, you find the faults of the University are still there. President Wharton has promised to see you next week for sure (just like last week), and all of a sudden the results are all over the front pages of the paper.

This can be avoided if the administration will react now. The student "niggers" are restless. The peace movement, which is pretty defunct at the moment, taught students to be aware, and they are aware of all the b.s. in this University. (Defining the b.s. is another column entirely).

I hope President Wharton talks to the long-haired student soon. The two will talk someday, undoubtedly, but it would be much better if their discussion occurs at 10:30 a.m. at the Administration Bldg. over coffee than at 1 a.m. some April night at Cowles House. Students, like any other suppressed minority group, can only take so much from University bureaucrats; recent springs have proven this. It should not have to be proven all over again this spring.

OUR READERS' MIND

Dorms not dens of sin

To the Editor:

Dear "Trustee Hopefuls" Diehl and Ernst: You have made your position clear that you are "unequivocally opposed" to the liberal policies of this university. You speak of the "lack of University responsibility" with regard to the approval of co-educational living, open house regulations, visitation hours, and the alcohol policy. May I remind you that these policies were all proposed as frameworks within which each residence hall may set its own policy.

You have accused the university of "experimenting with the lives and moral values of young people in an atmosphere contributing to moral degradation." When was the last time you were in a residence hall? University dorms are not the dens of iniquity that you would have the voters believe. You will not find couples fornicating on the lounge furniture, nor drunks running rampant down the corridors, nor hash parties in the grills.

For the most part, students on and off campus are responsible young adults. There have been no major changes in the life styles of the majority of these students since the passage of recent "liberal" social policies. Most of them are carrying on now, as before, only breathing a little easier knowing they have the right to regulate their own lives as they please. We are facing no more of a morally degrading atmosphere than the great percentage of young people who do not go on to college, but must find jobs, and places to live and learn to be responsible for themselves.

It is unfortunate that when a student elects to further himself by attending a university he must face the necessity of surrendering his individual freedom and many of his civil rights. Many universities are now working with their students through legitimate channels to correct this injustice and I am proud to say that MSU is among them.

UAW rep asks help with strike

Supporting the strike and discussing the issues are the best ways college students can help workers obtain their demands, a Lansing union president told a special colloquium on the strike Sunday night.

Victor Egres, president of UAW Local 652, said the audience should "assimilate what you've learned here tonight. The media does not tell the whole story."

"The whole war we have in Indochina," he said. "All our problems are directly or indirectly connected with it."

"30 and Out" and unlimited cost of living are the main issues of the GM strike, Egres said.

"Government employees work 30 years or less to draw a pension. We want that, too," he said.

Egres predicted that the strike against "Generous Motors" would run into November and might last until January if GM takes a hard-line position on union demands.

The colloquium was sponsored by the Worker-Student Strike Support Committee.

Misnomers?

Dr. Dhirenda Sharma speaking before the David Hilbert Society called capitalism and democracy two incompatible opposites. The U.S. has become a threat to world peace stated Sharma and groups like the SDS have to be encouraged to overthrow oppressive threats.

'DANGER TO FUTURE'

Prof hits U.S. capitalism

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
State News Staff Writer

Dhirenda Sharma, associate professor of philosophy, said Sunday that the United States is "the greatest danger in man's future" because of its gross misuse of world resources.

Speaking to some 40 members of the David Hilbert Society, a mathematics-oriented group, Sharma said Americans, six percent of the world population, now use 40 percent of all resources.

"Clearly," Sharma said, "capitalism is the antithesis of democracy where all are benefited. The profit system is not interested in humanity.

"If world peace is to be saved, our economic system must change from the profit system."

Sharma said not one world leader outside the United States has ever endorsed capitalism.

"Even Jesus Christ was a Communist," he said.

"As proof of the world's disillusionment with capitalism, Sharma cited the increasing socialism of Western Europe.

"America cannot rule the world," he warned. "Her control is simply not valid outside U.S. borders."

According to Sharma, election of a socialist president in the United States would mean world salvation.

"But the power is retained by the 'over 60's' who view the world as they did 40 years ago. Their fear of losing power oppresses new ideas," he said.

After 40, Sharma said, man begins consolidating all his assets.

"He is trapped. No courage, no freedom, no innocence. Youth still has these things, though. It is up to you to destroy all things oppressive to man," he said.

"But here on campus, with 40,000 students, there is no real social opposition. There is no left wing in the U.S. — only varying degrees of the right.

"I sympathize with the SDS. Youth can and must throw out the old system by writing, preaching and opposing it," Sharma said.

Aide to president named

The former associate director of the Center for Urban Affairs (CUA), Nolen Ellison, has been appointed an assistant to President Wharton.

Ellison's appointment, effective immediately, was approved by the board of trustees Friday. His responsibilities include researching and developing materials to assist the president in his administrative tasks, and assisting in the internal functioning of the president's office.

"I looked upon the opportunity to move to the president's office as a tremendous challenge in a period of time when the University is engaged in a critical struggle to rechart its course to address itself more adequately to the needs of the University community and minority citizens," Ellison said. "I felt the new position would give me additional perspective as to how this might best be accomplished.

"I certainly hated to leave Robert Green and the CUA staff, but this opportunity to work closely with President Wharton and the total University could prove to be an asset in building a more viable structure for creative relevance in the University," Ellison continued.

"I'm looking forward to this challenge as part of my new job," he said.

Ellison, who is now completing requirements for a doctorate in administration and higher education, received his bachelor's degree from the University of Kansas in 1963.

At Kansas, he was a standout on the basketball team, selected as a member of the Big-8 All Conference Team, and named honorable mention All-American.

After graduation, he spent four years as a high school teacher and basketball coach, and he later served as chief planner for the Kansas City Planning Dept. Ellison also served on the board of trustees of Kansas City Junior College and as a member of the Human Relations Commission.

In 1968, he became a graduate assistant in the College of Education here and was appointed administrative assistant to Robert Green, CUA director, in July of 1969. He was promoted to associate director this summer.

Ellison is married and has two children and resides with his family in East Lansing.

Kelley advises pact for return of Collins

Att. Gen. Frank Kelley Monday cautioned Gov. Milliken that if convicted slayer John Norman Collins is extradited to California, he may never be returned to Michigan.

In a letter on the legality of the extradition papers, Kelley suggested to Milliken that he make a formal agreement under the Uniform Extradition Act with Gov. Ronald Reagan to insure Collins' return to Michigan after his California trial.

Collins was convicted of first degree murder on Aug. 19 in Ann Arbor for the slaying of Eastern Michigan University coed Karen Sue Beineman. The conviction carries with it a mandatory life imprisonment. A new trial for Collins is being appealed.

According to Kelley, such a formal agreement between the governors would be legal under Michigan law. However, he intends to contact the California attorney general as to its legality under that state's law.

Kelley said his comments on the legal circumstances involving Collins' return "should not be construed as impinging in any way upon the basic question of whether or not John Norman Collins should be extradited, since this is a matter solely for your (the governor's) discretion."

The extradition is now being reviewed by the governor's legal staff. Milliken is expected to decide in favor of the extradition.

Man returns overdue book 27 years late

BALTIMORE (AP) — Robert T. Hall of Houston has returned to the Enoch Pratt Free Library a book he borrowed 27 years ago, getting it there during an amnesty declared on overdue book fines.

A library spokesman said a volume of "America: Its History and People" with a letter which read in part:

"I as an irresponsible teenager, borrowed the book without authorization . . . in 1943. I would like to take advantage of your amnesty offer."

Many students are unable to afford the increasing costs of their college educations. The MHEAA program has helped many of these students by enabling banks to offer interest-free, fully-guaranteed loans for educational purposes.

But the MHEAA does not provide banks with the capital to make these loans, and students are refused loans daily due to the lack of funds available.

We now proudly offer Student Aid Savings Bonds; all money invested in the bonds will be used to extend loans to students. Bondholders earn a healthy 5% interest while helping others finish college. Can't you afford to save $25?

'THE OWL' PAC to perform Manhoff's comedy

The box office is now open for the Performing Arts Company's second production of the year, a revival of Bill Manhoff's comedy, "The Owl and the Pussycat."

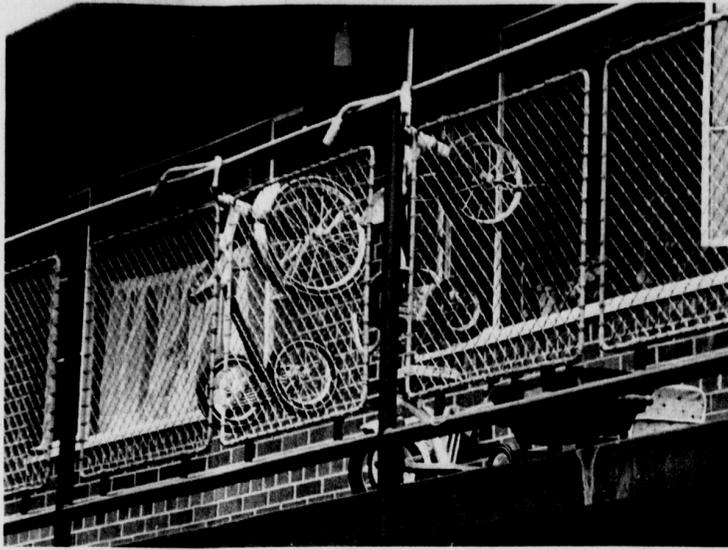

Manhoff has had a long career as radio and television writer, producer and gagman, and "The Owl and the Pussycat" which opened in 1964 was his first attempt at Broadway. The show received mild approval from the critics, who found the situations to be trite and the writing slick. The main reason for the comedy's success was the numerous talents of its two characters, played by Diana Sands and Alan Alda. One thing that was unanimously applauded was the fact Diana Sands was black, and that her color made absolutely no difference in her role. In 1970, however, we seem a bit more sophisticated to let something like that be a crucial focus of attention.

The comedy is mainly concerned with the fighting and loving between a pseudo-intellectual writer (the owl) and a pragmatic prostitute (the pussycat). It seems that the writer, who "is convinced that he is going to cause a stir in the literary world with such items as a short story entitled "Scream" which starts out with the line

"The sun spit morning into a man's face", is also a voyeur. Through his binoculars, he spies the goings-on over at the prostitute's apartment and manages to get her evicted, since his also somewhat of a prude. The prostitute however, smart girl that she is, finds her way into the writer's pad and from then on we have the familiar boy meets girl, boy loves girl, boy fights with girl syndrome. "The Owl and the Pussycat" (the name comes from Edward Lear's verse) will play at 8 p.m. from Oct. 27 through Nov. 1 at Fairchild Theatre.

The box-office at Fairchild is open daily from 12:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. and one hour before each performance.

Osteopathic college

"This situation is unique in the history of medical education," he said, "and will provide ample opportunity for M.D.'s and D.O.'s to critically examine various issues in medical practices and determine the best answers for all concerned."
Dr. Myron S. Magen, new dean of the College of Osteopathic Medicine and former dean at MCOM, amplified the same feelings while describing the MCOM response to incorporation.

"The format of the College of Human Medicine and the College of Osteopathic Medicine," he said, "may go a long way to foster greater understanding, and to resolve the real and imagined difference between the two professions."

There will be jointly administered departments such as those currently shared by the College of Human Medicine and the College of Veterinary Medicine. These departments include anatomy, physiology and others. One area of concern on the Pontiac campus, Dr. Magen said, is the integrity of the MCOM curriculum approach, which he termed "innovative."

"The innovation is based on integration, not on individual specific courses," he said. "We take and introduce the student to medical biology through both basic science and clinical approaches. Then we expand into a systems approach covering an entire system, like the cardiovascular system. We take the whole system and teach it from the standpoint of anatomy, physiology and pathology."

As this approach is better suited to non-department structure at the Pontiac school, University requirements for departmental organization may offer some difficulties, Dr. Magen said.
"I've recently talked with some of the department chairmen," he said, "and I'm impressed by their flexibility and willingness to remain open minded."

Dr. Magen said the unification with MSU has been generally well accepted by the MCOM faculty, although there is some concern over their status. They have all received temporary appointments as MSU faculty members, he said, but they do not have to be placed in the tenure process, an involved procedure and so their concern is not natural, he said.

AT ADMISSIONS HEARING

Chicanos call 'U' unresponsive

"We are not going to be standing still waiting you out," Garcia said. "We will be making some noise."
The Mexican-Americans were joined by representatives of American Indians in saying that they are tired of being lumped in with "minorities" and getting lost in the shuffle.

An Indian spokesman said there is a need for a University program, including financial aid, specifically for American Indian students. He called for a minimum $50,000 yearly Scholarship allotment for Indian students.

"There are only ten Indians enrolled in his vast school," he said. "And there are 20,000 in the state. We should have at least 200 at this particular college." Also addressing the commission Monday at Kellogg Center were representatives of various community colleges, several associations and clubs.

Richard Whitmore, president of Kellogg Community College told the commission that students who complete the two-year community college program are increasingly frustrated by courses and credits that will not transfer to the four-year institutions.

complete a four-year program are police administration and journalism. "In some cases," he said, "our teachers are the same people who taught those courses (that will not transfer) when they were graduate students at your institution," Whitmore told the commission.

Occasionally, he said, students cannot move from the community college to the university "without starting from zero."

Kent State arrests

on conviction on three charges of sales of hallucinogens.

Jerry H. Rupe, 22, of Ravenna, serving a three-month sentence in the Stark County jail at Canton for possession of narcotics and narcotics instruments, was indicted for arson, first-degree riot, striking a fireman and interfering with a fireman at the scene of a fire.

Both Rupe and Felber were charged in connection with the May burning of a Kent ROTC building. School officials said Rupe had no record of enrollment at Kent State, at least since fall of 1969.

Kent State President Robert I. White Monday rejected a student demand that the school oppose any indictments handed down by the jury, saying that indictments "are part of our judicial system."

In an apparent reply to a radio and presentation of the demands last week by the Youth International Party (Yippies) at Kent Liberation Front, White said the school was "witnessing the same old tired scripts which could lead to violent action and disruption."

Campus Yippies were rebuffed in plans to have attorney William Kunstler, who reportedly has agreed to coordinate the defense of those indicted, speak on the Kent campus Monday night. Kunstler was scheduled instead to speak off campus Monday night in a private club.

He added that "no one in the university community has a special privilege of consideration in terms of law enforcement court action."

White also turned down demands that ROTC, defense research and a police training program be removed from the campus. He warned that students should not expect formal reception or prompt response from his office on future "demands."

"Every experience and advice from elsewhere shows the futility of attempting to receive such demands formally, most particularly when presented en masse," White said in a prepared statement.
