So a result of the hearing, Rep. Ray Cast A., R.-M., Joseph, said that the bill will likely be sent to the House floor for a full vote.

When the bill was initially assigned to the committee, observers felt the members opposed opposing the bill by a 4-3 margin.

At the Lansing hearings Thursday, we heard from some of the American Legislative Exchange Council, Social Services and Corrections Committee preferred Thursday.

Some people who are following the committee’s activities know about the state are denying others the right to speak and be heard and I think the committee will be forced to do something in that area.

Cast said that he anticipates no change from the Michiganers, plus Welfare Week in addition to September.

State GI Bill hopes dimmed

State Senators question terms of Vietnam exit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days after Saigon said it would not exist the enemy with which the United States hopes to negotiate a settlement of the war, Michigan's Senate Democratic leaders have been saying that the new GI Bill they hope to pass this session would not exist if it were to be passed in Washington.

"How can there be any meaningful discussion over the GI Bill if it doesn't exist in Washington?" said Senate Majority Leader Richard A. Szelala. "We can't even have a meaningful discussion if the GI Bill doesn't exist in Washington."}

Today the trustees consider whether to approve the Campaign GM movement by voting the University’s 25,000 shares of General Motors stock in favor of three proposals.

The first proposal would make directives, which would enable shareholder committees by permitting all shareholders to make nominations and to choose among corporate candidates for director. The second proposal would allow consumers, dealers and employees of the University to have the right to participate in the selection of three directors. Proposal Three would direct the corporation to publish in its corporate annual report that it is committed to make a 50:1 auto pollution control, auto safety and minimum wage.

There is little likelihood, however, that the trustees will vote to support these proposals. The University Business Affairs Committee has voted against these proposals on the grounds that they are not in the best interests of the University.

Last year, the trustees voted not to support a student center, even though the Campaign GM proposals were approved. And now, as in a now familiar telephone vote, the trustees voted to support management of the student’s center.

This morning, the trustees will debate the issue. We urge students and faculty members who are interested in this issue to attend and watch these trustees respond to a business question of immense public importance.

The first proposal is a fair one for students and what the majority of the administration - student - trustee committee favors. The second proposal is not without support either, but it is a poor compromise for the student’s claims to have a trustworthy voice in trustee affairs.

We further argue that the first proposal and reject the second because it will have conceding very little, indeed, if anything, to the students of the University in one out of three meetings a term.

Adherents such as this would, in effect, be granting the students only a partial voice in decisions when full representation is needed.

Student representation on the board of trustees is soon to be decided.

The fate of student representation on the board of trustees is soon to be decided. At Thursday night’s closed session, the trustees probably discussed the two proposals surmised at securing some form of voice on the board.

One proposal would grant three elected students the right to sit in on board meetings except those deemed a "confidential nature" by President Wharton or the University attorney. The students would be elected by the student body and will receive all information distributed to regular board members.

The other proposal would restrict the right to serve to any student who is on only one trustee meeting a term.

Anthropologist depicts life, social system in Ethiopia

By TONI PELLULLO

A lack of defensiveness about interactions with neighboring societies and a balancing social system are two outstanding characteristics of a people in southern Ethiopia, an Ethiopian anthropologist told some 100 students of Sub-Saharan African culture at Michigan State College.

"They are an expansive society," Legesse said. "So they are receptive to the ideas of other societies, which they incorporate."

This lack of defensiveness, generally, is not characteristic of some African cultures, Legesse added.

The Galu, characterized by a common culture and Galla language, hold a central position in southern Ethiopia and comprise approximately 10 percent of the country's total population, Legesse said.

Federaledically and from social organizations in northern Ethiopia, the Galu are characterized by kinship group, dual organization and an age-grade system, Legesse said.

He described the "age-grade" system as a structure which evolved from age-piling, a mechanism by which political responsibility is handed over within age groups.

"The ages of the society are divided into 10 age groups or grades," Legesse said. "Each grade being eight years long."

The purpose, he said, of the exercise of warfare, marriage and cohabitation, political power and commerce, is to maintain the status quo, Legesse said. The Galu, a native of Amhara, timidly works in northern Ethiopia, where he has published works on his studies.

Clark University, said the southern Ethiopians have created a balancing mechanism within their society by incorporating the ideas and traditions into the institution."

The Galu, characterized by a common culture and Galla language, hold a central position in southern Ethiopia and comprise approximately 10 percent of the country's total population, Legesse said.

Federaledically and from social organizations in northern Ethiopia, the Galu are characterized by kinship group, dual organization and an age-grade system, Legesse said.

He described the "age-grade" system as a structure which evolved from age-piling, a mechanism by which political responsibility is handed over within age groups.

"The ages of the society are divided into 10 age groups or grades," Legesse said. "Each grade being eight years long."

The purpose, he said, of the exercise of warfare, marriage and cohabitation, political power and commerce, is to maintain the status quo, Legesse said. The Galu, a native of Amhara, timidly works in northern Ethiopia, where he has published works on his studies.

Winnipeg women studying men

WINNIPEG, Man. (UPI)—The University of Manitoba yesterday opened the first men's college in the Western Hemisphere. The college, which is being called a "Men's Institute," will offer courses in subjects such as business administration, law, and medicine.

"We believe that the time is ripe for a college for men," said President John Doe of the University. "Women have had the opportunity to go to college for many years, but now it is our turn to have a college of our own."

The college will be housed in a small building on the University's campus. It will offer three degree programs: a Bachelor of Arts, a Bachelor of Science, and a Bachelor of Commerce.

Spokesman for the college, Mr. John Smith, said that the curriculum will be designed to meet the needs of men and will include courses in areas such as engineering, agriculture, and business.

"We want to provide our students with the knowledge and skills they need to succeed in the world," said Mr. Smith. "We believe that men have a unique perspective on life and can bring a different approach to problem-solving."

The college will initially enroll 100 students and will have a faculty of 10. The first class of students will start in September and the college will hold its first graduation ceremony in June.

"We are excited about this new opportunity," said Mr. Smith. "We believe that the Men's Institute will be a valuable addition to the University and will provide a valuable resource for men in the region."
Gopher batsmen here for Big 10 showdown

Immediately.

That is how now MSU's hard-hitting baseball team finds out if it is in Big Ten championship chase. The Spartans entertain defending Big Ten champion Minnesota today, and the opener will begin at 3:30 p.m. at Klock Field. Michigan State today faces Iowa Saturday beginning at 1 p.m.

The Spartans of Coach Dutch Lubbers are highly rated and ready for their early season showdowns with the Gophers. Minnesota, too, will have a chance to cement their position in the conference standings.

Minnesota, the conference's champion for the last three seasons, is in the same boat as the Spartans. Two wins would assure them the lead. A pair of losses would still leave them in the thick of the action.

Both teams have a psychological advantage. Minnesota is rated ninth in the nation behind MSU, which is sixth, and the Gophers would definitely like to reverse the past few years' history.

MSU has within its club the chance to get a tremendous jump through winning the league title, an achievement that has eluded Lubbers in his seven years at MSU.

The Spartans would also like to make up for the double loss suffered in Minnesota last season. The Gopher state headquarters was a victory as the Spartans scored three Spartan pitchers, including Bob Cline and Ken Mars, who are scheduled to pitch for MSU today, for the last victory. Another potential benefit for the Spartans could be the home court. Lubbers stated that the Gophers could not hold onto the edge they had at home.

PUBLIC HEARINGS on a bill to regulate outdoor advertising billboards in Michigan have been scheduled for 9 a.m. Tuesday in the House chambers of the state Capitol.

Sponsored by Rep. Marvin D. Stempien, D.-Lenawee, the bill would require all advertising billboards on interstate and primary highways to be placed no closer than 300 feet from the edge of the highway and 100 feet from the sign.

Local municipalities would be allowed to adopt stronger rules than those provided in the bill.

The bill also provides for compensation to townships for the removal of Michigan-issued signs.

Sen. Benbeniste says that the bill will be necessary if Michigan is to receive its full share of federal highway funds.

Ally Gom, Frank J. Kelley is expected to support the bill.

The second bill will permit persons to refuse to accept advertisements and not be liable for consequences.

The Senate floor will allow Michigan vehicle owners to pay for their check by license plates.

Halls to offer special houses

By RANDY GARTON
Michigan State News

At least three new special interest houses will be offered for the 1975-76 MSU residence halls, school officials announced Tuesday.

The houses, which will be offered in a variety of styles, are designed to accommodate the special needs of residents who desire to live with others who share common interests.

One new residence hall, known as the "Halls of Honor," will be available for students who have attained the rank of captain or major in the ROTC program.

Another new residence hall, the "Halls of Science," will be available for students interested in the sciences, and a third new residence hall, the "Halls of Fine Arts," will be available for students interested in the arts.

The special interest houses will be located on the same campus as the existing residence halls, and will be co-ed.

The cost of living in the special interest houses will be the same as in the existing residence halls.

Students interested in living in the special interest houses are encouraged to apply as soon as possible, as space is limited.

The application process will begin immediately, and students will be notified of their acceptance into the special interest houses within a few weeks.

The new residence halls are part of the MSU administration's effort to provide a more diverse and vibrant living environment for its students.

The special interest houses are expected to be popular among students, and are likely to fill quickly.

Students interested in applying for a special interest house should contact their residence hall director or the MSU Housing Office for more information.
