Lower legal age bill ok'd

By JEFF SHELER
State News Staff Writer

The state House of Representatives passed a bill Tuesday to allow 18-year-old minors to participate in jury trials. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Anthony D. Elverum, D-Detroit, would allow 18-year-olds to be sworn in as jurors in certain cases.

The bill passed on a 73-30 vote, with 13 Republicans and 18 Democrats voting against it. The three Democratic votes were from the Detroit area, including Detroit, Livonia and Farmington Hills.

The bill now goes to the Senate for consideration. It is unclear whether it will pass there.

Police disperse rallies; C. arrested top 9,000

A police officer said that about 100 people were present at the rally, which was held in front of the MSU Administration Building. The officer said that the people were protesting against the cuts to public education and the rise in tuition costs.

Student blasts actions of police at D.C. rally

By JIM SHELTON
State News Staff Writer

More than 15,000 people were arrested during the rally, which was held in Washington, D.C., on Saturday. The rally was in response to the deaths of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor and other African Americans who were killed by police.

The police department issued a statement saying that the actions of the officers were justified. They said that the officers were acting in self-defense and in response to threats made by the crowd.

The statement also said that the officers were acting to protect the rights of the people in the area and to prevent violence.

Some members of the community were upset with the actions of the police and said that they believed the officers were过度reacting.

The situation was de-escalated, and the rally continued peacefully.
Dollar takes pounding

The U.S. dollar took a pounding in European foreign exchange markets Tuesday and began to look like money no one wants in Canadian dollars.

In three hectic hours, the West German Central Bank was forced to sell $5.2 billion to keep the exchange rate of U.S. money from collapsing.
Counsel OKs elimination of required HPR credits

BY SYLVIA SMITH
Counsel members have eliminated the requirement for 9 credits in the area of physical education and health and to permit the approved credits to be used in the Alkemade Physical Education Center Tuesday.

The recommendation, submitted by Counselor John H. Hatcher (HPR) and approved by Counsel, was designed to relieve the pressure of enrollment in the gym and physical education classes, with enrollment at all times at the center running at or near capacity. It is estimated that the change will result in a saving of up to 300 credits each semester, or $90,000 a year in tuition fees.

The recommendation was made to permit the university to use the excess capacity at the center for other purposes, such as the construction of additional classrooms or the expansion of existing facilities.

The recommendation was made by Counselor John H. Hatcher (HPR), who said that the change would benefit both the university and the students.

The recommendation was approved by Counsel, which is the final step in the approval process.

Enrollment expands in tutoring program

By EVYLN ERIKSDOTTIR
Enrollment in the University's tutoring program for minority students has risen from 3 to 8 to 10 students since a 1965 spring program was initiated.

The program, which is supported by the college's office of minority student affairs, provides tutoring services to minority students in all areas of the college.

The program was initiated in 1965 with funding from the Ford Foundation. It was expanded in 1967 with funding from the National Science Foundation.

The program is currently funded by the university's office of minority student affairs and is directed by Dr. John H. Hatcher (HPR). It provides tutoring services to minority students in all areas of the college.

The program has been successful in improving minority students' academic performance.
Power's allegiance: to justice or to Daley?

Justice Chicago - style over the decades has certainly come under attack from politicians, citizens, and many others. The most intensively involved in Mayor Daley's political activities is Chicago's own Robert F. Kennedy. Kennedy is a man who has been a crucial factor in the city's political life, and his actions have often been controversial. His support for civil rights and his opposition to the war in Vietnam have made him a figure of great importance to the American people.

The current issue of The Daily News is devoted to a discussion of Kennedy's activities and their implications for the future of Chicago. The editors have decided to focus on Kennedy's role in the city's political life and the implications of his actions for the future of the city.

The article begins with a discussion of Kennedy's early political career and his involvement with the Chicago Democratic Party. It then goes on to examine his role in the 1968 campaign and his subsequent efforts to build a coalition of support in the city. The article concludes with a discussion of Kennedy's current political prospects and the implications of his actions for the future of Chicago.
xpert cites danger

from noise pollution

In recent years, the automatic- lcrs and garbages, perhaps disposal ments and the recocen! are here reported to be present in the air of the State of Michigan. These air pollutants are known to cause health problems, especially among the elderly.

“Since states have taken steps to study the problem of noise and have passed regulations to control noise levels in the environment,” he said.

The State Legislature has appropriated funds to handle most of the problem associated with noise levels.

The speech and hearing clinics and research laboratories on campus can provide positive programs of hearing loss.

The public school systems in the area can provide educational rehabilitation services.

And there are a number of well-established centers for the hearing impaired.

But, with all of these resources available, we have specific needs,” Oyer said.

“We need a revitalized commitment on the part of informed and concerned citizens to take action on behalf of the environment. And we need specific needs,” Oyer said.

“We need a revitalized commitment on the part of informed and concerned citizens to take action on behalf of the environment. And we need to be aware of the specific needs of those who are affected.”

To help those who are not yet aware of the problem, Oyer proposed a seminar, funded by the city of Lansing, to discuss the issue of noise pollution in East Lansing.

Rights groups
to discuss role

Nearly 150 members of Michigan’s hearing impaired are concerned about their community’s relationship with state agencies in a conference next Wednesday at the Michigan State University.

Two views of the help which the State can provide are being offered by Milton Verder, director of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, and Walter Cohen, executive assistant to the mayor of East Lansing.

Workshops will focus on the problem of how state and community efforts can overlap in providing assistance to people with educational, auditory, and rehabilitation needs.

Some 100,000 people have been affected by noise levels, according to the Michigan Environmental Council.

The Michigan Human Rights Working Group, which promotes the Michigan Civil Rights Act, is in cooperation with the Michigan State University and Michigan State University-Kalamazoo College.

TV preferences surveyed

If the viewing preferences of college students are any indication of success or failure in television programming, then there may be a few surprises in store for television executives.

Research conducted by the University of Michigan's Mass Media Research Center has shown that college students prefer a wide variety of programs over the limited selection available on major networks.

Research director John D. Weil, who conducted the survey, said that college students are more likely to watch programs that they perceive as being educational or entertaining, rather than those that are simply popular.

The survey found that college students are most interested in programs that are educational, such as documentaries and news programs. They are also interested in programs that are entertaining, such as soap operas and crime dramas.

The survey also found that college students are less interested in programs that are simply popular, such as sitcoms and reality shows.

Honorary aids blind on campus

A group of MSU students spreads more than 500000 dollars

They are members of Tower Guard, a group composed of service organizations, and the money is for 25 of MSU's blind students.

Hoyt T. Williams, Madison, Ill., superintendent and principal of Tower Guard, said that the money is for students who are members of the school's blind student group, and the money is for the tuition of five students who are members of the group.

While the group's programs are open to the public, the money is for the tuition of students who are members of the group.

Charles Darwin

Book reveals scientist as man of many talents

By Jonathan Kaufman

Charles Darwin, father of the modern theory of evolution, was a speed reader and a fast writer, a skilled photographer and a patient observer, a skilled botanist and a meticulous fossil collector.

He was a man of many talents, but his most significant contributions were in the field of evolution and natural selection.

Among his other accomplishments, he wrote "The Origin of Species," one of the most important works in the history of science.

Darwin was a man of many talents, and his work continues to influence the scientific community today.

DETERS VIOLATORS

Helicopter spars on motorists

By JIM SLEDDON

State News Staff Writer

You're driving on the I-96 freeway, and there's a cop car tailing you. Suddenly, out of nowhere, a helicopter appears, propels the accelerator pedal and lands on the roof of someone's car. You don't believe it, so you turn your head to the window, only to find a State Police traffic control officer on the scene. You probably didn't realize the maneuver was planned, or maybe you thought it was a traffic jam too far.

This is just one of the tactics State Police use to deter traffic violations. The 24-minute exploitation, a high-speed chase involving helicopters, is slowing the traffic for the benefit of the troopers.

The story begins in 1971, when the helicopter program was launched. It was a joint venture with the Michigan State Police traffic control officer, resulting in the Michigan State Police traffic control officer. Operating since December 1969, the helicopter was financed by the federal government through the Michigan Highway Safety Act, which allocated $40,000 to the State Police for the purchase of the craft.

In recent years, State Police have expanded the program, and now it involves over 300 pilot hours per year. The 24-minute exploitation is the most common tactic, but there are others, such as the helicopter assisted in apprehending violators.

Driving down the highway, the helicopter spots a violator and takes off in pursuit. The helicopter is equipped with night-vision goggles and thermal imaging cameras, allowing it to observe and apprehend violators even in the dark.

The police vehicles are equipped with sirens and lights, allowing them to zoom down the road at high speeds, pursuing the violator. The helicopter also provides a remote and unobtrusive means of observation, allowing the police to keep an eye on the violator without disturbing them.

The helicopter also provides a unique advantage in observing the traffic violations, allowing the police to gain a better understanding of the road conditions and to better determine the best course of action for apprehending the violator.

The helicopter program has been successful in apprehending violators, leading to fewer traffic violations and improved safety on the roads.

Urban planner to discuss public administrator's role

Anthony Davis, one of the nation's most respected urban planners and political economists, will speak at 9:30 a.m. Thursday in the Kellogg Center Auditorium at Michigan State University. Davis, a professor at the University of Chicago, is a member of the National Academy of Sciences and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The author of "An Economic Theory of Democracy," "System of Economics and Social Thought," and "The Economics of the United States," Davis will discuss the role of public administrators in the delivery of services and the importance of economic considerations in the design of public policies.

Davis has served as economic adviser to a number of national and international organizations, including the United Nations, the World Bank, and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. He is also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The lecture is part of the Loosemore Center's Loosemore Lecture Series, which is sponsored by the University of Chicago's School of Social Service Administration and the Department of Public Administration.

Tickets are available at the door, and the event is free and open to the public.

is a sight to behold. With the sound of the drums and the beat of the cymbals, the room is abuzz with energy. The dancers move in unison, their movements synchronized to the rhythm of the music. The room is filled with the sounds of clapping and shouting, as the audience is drawn into the performance.

During the show, the dancers perform a variety of traditional Burmese dances, each with its own unique style and technique. The dancers wear colorful costumes, which add to the vibrancy of the performance. The music is provided by a live band, who play a mix of traditional Burmese instruments and Western rock and roll.

The show concludes with a final dance that features all of the performers. The audience erupts into applause as the dancers take their final bow.

The performance is a celebration of Burmese culture and tradition, and a testament to the skill and talent of the dancers. It is a perfect example of how music and dance can bring people together, and how they can celebrate their shared experiences. The show is a must-see for anyone interested in experiencing a unique and authentic cultural event.

Socialization, roles linked

By JOY YATES

Taylor Arena, one of the 10 Miguel and Antioch College, said what a far-reaching effect these roles have on men and women. She was presented at a seminar on the role of women in American society. She said that men and women often have different expectations for each other. For example, she said that men expect women to be supportive and nurturing, while women expect men to be strong and protective. She also noted that these expectations can lead to conflicts between men and women, and that understanding and respecting these roles can help to reduce these conflicts.

"It is important to recognize the differences in the roles that men and women take on in society," she said. "Men and women have different strengths and abilities, and it is important to acknowledge and appreciate these differences. By understanding and respecting these roles, we can work towards creating a more equitable society for all."

Michigan student, 20- and 10-year-old double was knocked out of the state by a Spartan hit that led to a 16-15 finals score for MSU. This was the first time the rival teams had met since the 1960 season, which saw the Spartans win the Big Ten. The game was held at Spartan Stadium, which was packed with fans cheering for both teams. The Wolverines took the lead early, but the Spartans came back in the second half to take a 15-11 lead. However, the Wolverines fought back to tie the game at 15-15 in the final moments. The winning goal was scored by a Michigan player who punched in a rebound after a save by the goalie. This win puts the Wolverines ahead in the Big Ten standings and gives them a boost in confidence for the remainder of the season. The next game is scheduled for Saturday against Ohio State.

Student blasts actions of police at D.C. rally

the court ruled. "It was his opinion that the demonstrators who littered the street were not eligible to vote for any退税."

Although he said the National Guard and the police "overdid it," Sturman said "the reaction was not an outburst of violence on the part of the demonstrators." He said Davis denied that any of the demonstrators were arrested for any reason other than littering and "it is not 100 percent true that the demonstrators were all white.""I think the police acted in good faith," he said. "I think the police were right to disperse the demonstrators."

But despite the police action, the demonstrators continued to march and chant "freedom for Vietnam." They also sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The demonstrators were succeeded by a group of antiwar marchers who were also stopped by the police.

(Henry) Goodnow, a civil liberties lawyer, said he was "very disappointed" with the police action. "I think the police overreacted," he said. "I think they should have used more restraint." Goodnow said he would file a complaint with the Department of Justice.

"Police are not concerned with the demonstration itself," said C. R. Davis, attorney for the demonstrators. "They are concerned with the method by which the demonstration is carried on."

Davis said the police had "acted too quickly" in breaking up the demonstration. "They should have allowed the demonstrators to continue their activities," he said.
