More than 3,000 take part in 'U' war protest march

BY DAVID Basset

Chanting and waving flags, more than 3,000 protesters converged on the University of Minnesota campus Wednesday night to demonstrate against the war in Vietnam. The protest was the largest to date at the university.

"This was the biggest it's been," said one of the organizers of the protest. "We've had a lot of support from students, faculty, and others in the community." The organizers estimated that there were about 3,000 participants at the rally.

The protest was held on the campus of the University of Minnesota, which is located in the city of Minneapolis. The demonstration was organized by the Minnesota Student Association, a student-led organization that works to promote peace and social justice.

According to the organizers, the protest was intended to raise awareness about the war in Vietnam and to call for an end to the war. The protesters marched through the streets of the city, singing songs and chanting slogans.

The protest coincided with a speech given by President Richard Nixon at the University of Minnesota. The speech was part of his campaign for reelection to a second term as President of the United States.

"This is a time of great change in the world," said Nixon in his speech. "We are witnessing the end of an era, the end of the Cold War. We are moving towards a new world order, a world where peace and prosperity are the norm.

"But we must be cautious," he continued. "We must not let our guard down. We must continue to work towards a better world, a world where freedom and democracy are the norm, a world where peace and prosperity are the norm.

"Thank you," he concluded, as the crowd of protesters cheered. "Thank you for your support. Thank you for your faith in our country. Thank you for your faith in the future."

Legal aid services expanded

By MICHAEL FOX

State News Staff Writer

In an expansion of its legal aid services, the ASMSU board Tuesday authorized the hiring of a Lansing lawyer to handle cases at no cost to students. The proposal was introduced by lớp-Rick Brown, credit service director, and approved by the board and registered student organizations representing ASMSU in all areas of Michigan and providing legal advice for students.

The current legal aid office at $3,000 was authorized to cover the costs of hiring the lawyer.

Kenneth Smith, the current ASMSU part-time lawyer, was to be available today on the third floor of the Student Services Building as a result of the proposed expansion. The office will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

The board's approval of the new legal aid program ended debate over expanding the services that has existed since December. Last year the board had refused hiring one candidate for the position, preferring to test hiring a lawyer at a lower cost.

The new plan does not involve the training and education of students or the legal services for the student government and individual members of the student body.

"There is a very definite need for legal aid services for the student government and individual members of the student body," Reynold Riddle, ASMSU chairman, said. The decision of legal aid service was a matter of wisdom and would increase if the demand were there for it.

"There is a very definite need for legal aid services for the student government and individual members of the student body."

Riddle added that the legal aid service would be open to all students and would be available to all students.

ASMSU will actually pay the firm $2,000 a month, of which $200 will be collected from student fees for the legal advice. The remaining 1,800 a month will be paid by the firm. Riddle said that the legal aid service worked out to a very low cost to the university and that it would eliminate the need for a full-time lawyer.

A committee will be established to review the legal aid program, Riddle said.

The board also authorized the hiring of a part-time lawyer to handle legal aid services for the student government and individual members of the student body.

Facts and figures compiled by the governor of the University of Michigan's Board of Regents showed that the university had a budget of $528 million in 1976.

Students observe moratorium

By BARBARA FARY
State News Staff Writer

Wednesday's campus moratorium began at 3 p.m. with the ASUERU teach-in which drew an estimated 750 people. ASUERU and the Student Mobilization Committee, picking up new support at noon when an estimated 3,000 people marched in the Blackout Power Demonstration Rally, and ASUERU was part of the nationwide student action to protest the Vietnam war and the killing of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., last spring.

In 1965, the University Movement of the Black Students was formed and has since been an active group on campus. It is now made up of several small cells which work independently but share common goals. The movement is concerned with the problems of black people in this country and the world over. It aims to raise consciousness about these issues and work towards positive change.

The Senate passed the bill to lower the age of adult admission to public drinking places in Michigan on Thursday evening. The Senate voted to lower the drinking age to 18 to 20 years old, all the rights of adults except voting rights, was passed in May. The Senate passed the bill to lower the drinking age to 16 to 20 years old for those who have served in the military.

The bill, which would give 18 to 20 year olds the same rights as adults, was passed in May. The Senate and the House have agreed to the bill, and the Senate has passed the bill to lower the drinking age to 18 to 20 years old.

Traxler drug proposal: long needed legislation

Last year, the federal government passed the Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 which signifies a shift from simple criminalization of addicts to the more enlightened treatment approach. However, there have been no federal laws or controls set up to regulate the use of so-called "soft" drugs. In Michigan, Traxler is proposing an act which would remove marijuana from the criminal law and have it placed in the category of "lawn". The act observes that the use of marijuana by students has in no way impaired their ability to perform their academic duties. However, the act permits students to use marijuana if they are of legal age, possess a prescription by a doctor, and if the prescription is accompanied by a letter of recommendation by a member of the faculty. This bill is being introduced in an effort to remove the stigma of marijuana and bring it into the open. The bill is well thought out and can be implemented with little difficulty. I for one support this bill and hope that it will pass the legislature and become law.

The use of marijuana has been on the increase in recent years, and it is about time that the government took some action to control it. The bill is a step in the right direction and I hope that the government will take it seriously.

Commission settles claims in 16 discrimination cases

The Michigan Court of Claims has ruled against the Michigan Civil Rights Commission in 16 discrimination cases. The court found that the commission had exceeded its authority in handling the cases.

The cases involved allegations of discrimination in various areas, including housing, employment, and education. The court found that the commission had failed to meet its constitutional and statutory obligations in handling the cases.

The decision is significant because it limits the authority of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission and sets a precedent for other similar cases in the state. It also highlights the challenges faced by civil rights organizations in enforcing the law and protecting the rights of individuals.

The decision has sparked debate among civil rights advocates and legal experts. Some argue that it will make it more difficult for individuals to seek justice for discrimination, while others believe that it is a necessary step in ensuring that the commission operates within its legal bounds.

The Michigan Civil Rights Commission has announced its intention to appeal the decision to the Michigan Supreme Court. The outcome of the appeal will determine the future of the cases and the authority of the commission.

The decision also raises questions about the role of the courts in enforcing civil rights laws. Some suggest that the courts should play a more active role in ensuring compliance with the law, while others believe that the responsibility should lie with regulatory agencies.

The Michigan Civil Rights Commission has been under scrutiny for several years, with questions raised about its effectiveness and accountability. The decision in these cases is likely to be a significant milestone in determining the future direction of the commission.

Bomb threats prove false

By ROY SMITHSON
State News Staff Writer

University police investigated three bomb threats Tuesday which they said may have been committed by a man in a white coat. The police department was not allowed to comment on their work in the Administration Building.

The first threat, reported at 10 a.m., was received by the International Center, following a bomb threat in the student union on Monday.

Police reported that no explosives devices were found and that they had no suspect in the incident.

The second threat, reported shortly after 10 a.m. at the administration office, was also investigated.

The woman receiving the call requested it to be reviewed, but police and University officials examined the surrounding areas to check for a possible threat. Police and University officials later decided that the threat was not a serious one.

The third threat occurred at 10:30 a.m. at the office of the police drector. The man said he was going to bomb the building.

Police commented that no bomb was set off and that no damage was done.

Senators hear protection bill

A bill which would protect the rights of journalists to refuse to disclose newspaper sources of information obtained in the course of the newspaper's work was introduced in the Michigan Senate Wednesday.

The bill was introduced by State Senator William Bartley, an author of the proposed new law.

Bartley said that he had written to the president of the Michigan Press Association, but that he had not heard back from her.

A bill similar to the one Bartley introduced was passed earlier this year in the Michigan House of Representatives, but was not enacted.

The bill introduced Wednesday by Bartley would make it a crime to force a journalist to reveal the source of information obtained in the course of his or her work.

Bartley said that the bill was necessary to prevent the government from using threats of violence to force journalists to reveal sources of information.

The bill was introduced in the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration.

The bill was referred to the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration.

Bank officials blast minority hiring report

By WANDA HEINSDON
BOB RODACH

Ingham County bank officials have detailed the accuracy of a press report on the minority hiring efforts of financial institutions that said bank employment of minority group citizens was only one-half of one percent.

While bank figures showed this week the employment of minority groups is slightly above seven percent, Ingham County Bank Commissioner David C. Huber, Ingham County, explained the discrepancy in reports was due to the bank's interpretation of "minority." (He said the bank's interpretation was "any person who does not have a job a half percent would be considered." The bank's employees are representatives of the Michigan School of Education, under its direction Thursday by Dean Baker and R.-Lansing, who led the way for the bank employees.

Huber said the figures were compiled by bank figures, and "We are the only two institutions of which the bank of Lansing was the nearest to personal and educational changes in the community."

When compared with bank figures, Huber accurately reported that the bank of Lansing had 10 minority group employees in a total of 790, but his figures showing only two minority group members of the five-person Lansing bank's employment force was the same in the entire report.

"Michigan is an equal opportunity employer, but it is not the responsibility of all employers to release official information in such a way," Huber said.

The following table shows Huber's other figures:

SOPHILING INCIDENT

Chase by clerks, police results in felony charge

A fight across Grand River Avenue Tuesday afternoon resulted in a felony charge for a 19-year-old state worker who reportedly left an East Lansing, Mich., store with over $50 in cash.

Robert L. Currier, 20, of Grand River Ave., told officers he claimed the coin drawer through the store. As the coin drawer was being opened, a security guard and another assistant were outside the store.

When a security guard tried to stop the man, he was struck in the jaw and knocked to the floor by the man.

A security guard and another assistant were shot at the man when he reached for his wallet and asked for money.

The suspect was later apprehended by police and charged with first-degree assault and battery.

Underclassmen key to 5'0'' offensive line

When the Spartans take the field this weekend at the University of Illinois, they'll be hoping for a repeat performance against their rivals from the south, the Fighting Illini. Last week, the Spartans surprised the Big Ten's most experienced offense, the Michigan State offense, by blanking the Spartans 20-0. This week, the Spartans will face another formidable offense, the Illinois offense, which is ranked 12th in the nation. The Spartans are hoping to continue their winning streak against the Illini and solidify their place in the Big Ten standings.

The team sported and will see a lot of running with the clock.

The Jackson State product purchased a modest amount of merchandise at the game and has been a regular at the Gaithersburg, Md., store ever since.

Mike Joe is expected to return.

The 14th-ranked Tigers, who are coming off a 31-3 win over the Kentucky Wildcats, are looking to improve their conference record to 1-1.

What does a coach do when his team is losing a big game? Does he try to inspire his players to come back? Does he try to change his game plan? Does he try to give his players a break? Coach Jerry Tarkanian does all of the above.

Bob Oleon, Monday's game against the Illinois Fighting Illini, is a good example. Oleon, the Illinois State防御人, is a key player for the Spartans. With Oleon on the field, the Spartans are able to control the game and keep the Illini from scoring.

Billy Joe is a junior tight end and will see an average of 10-15 minutes of playing time.

The Spartans are also hoping to have a key player return this week. Mike Joe, a senior running back, is expected to return to the lineup after missing last week's game due to an injury.

Billy Joe is a key player for the Spartans and his return will be a boost to the team. The Spartans will be hoping for a strong performance from Joe in this week's game against the Illinois Fighting Illini.

Poll finds new attitudes toward sex prevails

Senator to hear proposal

Michiganders are no longer swayed by marriage and date stories but approach the subject in as casual a manner as they ask a neighbor for a road map to a new country.

No longer do young men and women discuss premarital sex, abortion, and sufferings of women in the home in the bare terms of adversaries to each other.

No longer is marriage the end of the road, the beginning of the road, or the ultimate goal for a man and woman.

No longer do men and women find aboveboard conversations on sex topics a necessity for advancement in the community.

'Rock 'n roll' on a waterbed

By CRAIG FEIJURA

If you're a fan of the classic rock'n roll sound, you might enjoy this unique experience. "Rock 'n roll on a waterbed" is not just a phrase; it's a real sensation. Imagine lying on a waterbed, the water providing a cushion that absorbs the weight of your body, creating a soft and comfortable environment. The waterbed is different from a traditional mattress, offering a new level of comfort and relaxation. Whether you're a fan of rock'n roll music or just looking for a unique sleep experience, a waterbed could be the perfect choice for you.
