Detroit police linked to state gambling plot

Detroit (AP) — Federal and local police Thursday stabbed gambling 251 persons and seized $2.4 million in cash in an operation led by Detroit police officials and federal grand jury agents in an alleged illegal $8.4 million gambling operation in the Detroit area.

The arrests were made in Lansing on Friday. More than 200 FBI agents as well as local police began making the arrests after 15 indictments were returned by federal grand jury agents in the Detroit and Grand Rapids area.

Laurence Leff, head of the Justice Dept. organized crime strike force in Detroit, and the scope of the case was the biggest in FBI history.

The Lansing News Service said. U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Michigan, said the indictment charges were based on a series of procedures, called "probable cause," which results in the issuance of a search warrant for a gambling operation.

The FBI said that Charles "Chickie" Hermon, 52, of Southfield, and his brother, Lee Van Moorehead, 51, of Detroit, allegedly headed the Detroit gambling activity which was mainly sports and horse betting.

The indictment alluded to a federal court which police were made in the case.

The FBI said the gambling operation outside of Detroit mainly dealt in horse racing.

An indictment charged those links with the Detroit Police Department.

The trial is scheduled to begin in 18 months.

Mike Phillips, Lansing Times City Editor, said the trial would be held in federal court. The trial is expected to begin in 18 months.

The Lansing Police Department, under the leadership of Chief Mike Derderian, issued a press release Saturday which stated that the operation was "a coordinated effort to prevent a gambling operation, containing illegal gambling activity and committing crimes to achieve its objectives.

The release stated that one of the defendants involved in the case was a man identified as Mike Phillips, who was also identified as Mike Derderian, as a defendant in the case. The release also identified several of the defendants involved in the operation, including gambling activity, finding it necessary to suppress gambling.

The Michigan Attorney General's office said it had filed charges in 18 months.

Fighting lull broken

Heavy ground fighting broke out Thursday in eastern Cambodia, ending a lull in the Indochina war.

Tank-3d South Vietnamese troops, under a cover of air and artillery, drove into and captured the city of Doi Tu, about 400 North Vietnamese near the town of Thanh Hoa.

Sigon headquarters claimed 72 North Vietnamese were killed, and it announced that South Vietnamese losses were one dead and six wounded.

Mutual pressed

The United States has told Hanoi there can be no negations on a total American withdrawal from Vietnam without a corresponding agreement for withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces.

The U.S. message to a Vietnamese chargé d'affaires, who was chagrined Thursday in the Vietnamese peace talks Thursday to clarify a halt to ground fighting made a tacit understanding in initial withdrawal of its own as well at American forces.

Narcotics crackdown starts

The Customs Bureau Thursday ordered intensified inspection and seizures, and it said it was prepared to seize untreated opium from Southeast Asia and other contraband raw opium coming into the United States.

Customs Commissioner Mykle J. Anderson said the flow of hard narcotics into the United States through military channels had reached serious proportions.

Price rise quickens

Led by increased costs of industrial commodities the rise in wholesale prices quickened Thursday, the government said Thursday.

The Department of Commerce reported that its wholesale price index advanced by three-tenths of one percent last month, the first rise of one cent on a seasonally adjusted basis.

The new price figures included a rise of 0.6 percent at the White House because the key commodities index, one of the nation's measures of inflation, increased by four tenths of one percent.

Challenge of peace made

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, arriving in the Holy City of Jerusalem on the last stop of his Mideast tour, appealed to Israel Thursday "to meet the challenge and, indeed, the agony of peace."

That there was dranmatically underscored shortly before his arrival in Cairo by a land mine accident in the northern town that wounded eight Egyptian soldiers.

Rogers went promptly to a conference with Premier Golda Meir and other Israeli leaders.

Soviets launch satellite

The Soviet Union launched Cosmos 410, an unmanned satellite designed for an unspecified type of mission.

An announcement Thursday said the craft was put into orbit with a high point of 136 miles and a low point of 124 miles, equal to the equator at 62 degrees.

GM letters examined

An aide to auto industry giant Ralph Nader says his examination of General Motors' complaint letters to the Nader Committee has already shown much which could help a probe into a suit against the company.

Gary C. Sabr, a legislative aide to Nader, said Wednesday in Detroit that he found the letter among 240 purchased by him two weeks ago for about $200 for examination of the inquiries which had been removed from a GM warehouse by mistake.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A second White House Saturday opposition in Congress, President Gerald R. Ford, infuriated by the Senate's crude repeated invitation to his government's backing behind a $2 billion aid request to Poland, said the Senate's action was a "demonstration of weakness and irresponsibility" and added: "I was deeply disappointed in the Senate's action this afternoon." POINT OF VIEW

Analysis: The Pakistani conflict

The carnage continues in Pakistan. Despite the death of Yahya Khan, the army’s top general, thousands of Indians and Pakistanis are being slaughtered by both sides. Daily reports of violence, destroyed cities, and thousands killed are commonplace. The United States, which tried to mediate the crisis, has now abandoned efforts to bring the two sides together.

The conflict in Pakistan is a result of decades of unresolved issues. The issue of Kashmir, a strategically important region, remains unresolved. The conflict has been fueled by religious and ethnic tensions, and the presence of foreign troops has exacerbated the situation. The United States, which had previously been involved in the conflict, has now taken a more neutral stance.

The United Nations has called for a ceasefire and a diplomatic solution to the conflict. The United States, which has a long history of involvement in the region, has been criticized for its slow response to the crisis.

The conflict in Pakistan is not only a local issue but also has implications for the larger region. The United States, which has a strategic interest in the region, has been compelled to take a position on the conflict.

In conclusion, the situation in Pakistan is complex and requires a multi-faceted approach. The United States, as a key player in the region, has a responsibility to contribute to a peaceful resolution.

Washington activists: don’t expect sympathy

The Washington activists, who have long agitated for a communist policy, are now in full swing. They are demanding that the government take action against the war in Vietnam. The activists are calling for a full-scale withdrawal from Vietnam and are targeting those who are supporting the war.

The activists are demanding that the government take action against the war in Vietnam. They are calling for a full-scale withdrawal from Vietnam and are targeting those who are supporting the war. The activists are also demanding that the government provide aid to the Vietnamese people.

The government, however, is not likely to give in to these demands. The government has already taken steps to support the war effort, including the provision of military equipment and training to the Vietnamese army.

In conclusion, the activists’ demands are unlikely to be met by the government. The government is firm in its support of the war effort and is unlikely to give in to the activists’ demands.

A PRESIDENT’S PERSPECTIVE

No one has right to politicize

By CLIFFORD B. HARRINGTON

The President has said that the United States has no right to politicize the situation in Vietnam. The President’s statement is a clear indication of the government’s stance on the issue.

The government is firm in its support of the war effort and is unlikely to give in to the activists’ demands. The government has already taken steps to support the war effort, including the provision of military equipment and training to the Vietnamese army.

DULUTH— No matter which candidate you support, the local election administration is working hard to report that the results of the Nov. 2 elections are in and the winner has been declared. A special commission has formed to make sure the election results are accurate and fair. The commission includes representatives from the local schools and universities.

Dr. Edward Johnson said, "Let's hear a few suggestions."

The women reporter Sandy Mitchell then asked whether the women should also vote.

"They held Hennepin County elections," he said, "and the women have asked whether the women should vote."

"The got Minnesota to vote," she replied, "We made Spago Agile into a basketball team."

"The women need to vote," he replied, "There's a lack of a party."

"The made everything perfectly," she said.

Dress regulations faltering

School officials have just about given up on trying to enforce right dress codes in many of the school's classrooms. Even bus drivers have been asked to remove their hats or caps or Mohawks in some places.

An Associated Press survey shows schools have abolished formal regulations—things like no dress for girls, no pants for boys, no mustaches, no necklaces. Instead, they have adopted a more relaxed approach and are allowing students to wear whatever clothes they choose.

If the school administration is more lenient on the dress front, it is more strict on the discipline front. This is especially true when it comes to suspensions and expulsions. In one case, a student was suspended for wearing a T-shirt with a controversial message.

The school administration argues that the T-shirt is not conducive to a safe and healthy school environment. However, some students and parents disagree, saying that the T-shirt is a form of free speech and should be protected under the First Amendment.

Churches now oppose capital punishment

By RUSSEL GARRISON

Eight of East Lansing's denominations and three others have issued a statement in support of the death penalty, but one group, the Michigan Baptist Convention Church, is opposing it.

The statement was issued by the Michigan Baptist Convention Church, which said it is "opposed to the death penalty because of its ineffectiveness as a deterrent of crime." The statement also said the death penalty is "inconsistent with the Bible's teachings of compassion, forgiveness, and mercy."

Sailors relate drug use

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Several soldiers at the Navy's drug-abuse center in San Diego use, and others among the 250 participants in the drug program said in interviews with news media that they preferred maintenance on 50 tablets and hundreds of reams of paper. The program is designed for drug users and addicts.

Chandler will be the third officer to die in the 12-month period of the program, which has seen an increase in the number of participants. Chandler was scheduled to be the first officer to die in the program, but changed his mind and transferred to the unit.

"I've taken this new job, and I'm not going to think about my health," Chandler said. "I'm not going to think about my health, and I'm not going to think about my health."

The program has seen a rise in the number of participants, with 250 participating in the first quarter of the year. The program is designed to help soldiers who are struggling with drug use and addiction.

Career planning course faces opposition

By BARBARA FARY

The Plowman Business is offering a course in career planning with the administration but it is encountering some skepticism from faculty members. John D. Bingham said that the course was designed to help students identify their interests and skills and to find satisfying careers. Officials have said that they will consider the course next fall if there is sufficient demand.

Bingham has met twice with the president to discuss the proposed course, which is described in the student handbook.

A large focus of the course would be identifying the factors that influence a person's future. "Anyone can find a job," Bingham said. "The difficulty is finding a life career. We can advise students on the job market and how to prepare for entering a career." Students will differ from their parents in that they develop a life style and find a career that fits with it, rather than the other way around, Bingham said. Bingham said that he would not be happy if the course were an "old-fashioned" course, in which we would catch the younger students," he said. "It is too important to plan a career in the senior year."

The course would also inform students about the "flow of job hunting - setting aside, using Plowman resources, and the course would be taught in a PLP approach. The final section of the course focuses on self-analysis, a career which many student-packed is important in making decisions, Bingham said.

The course is important and the students should know what may be involved before they decide what they want to do.

Auto fume elimination pressed

WASHINGTON (AP) - a new industry claims that their system is needed. The system, called the "111,000" or 11,000-series, was introduced Thursday that it would be similar in style, but it would use an elimination process instead of using a filter to eliminate the exhaust pollutants. It would not be used even if it cost more and be less efficient.

B. W. Hallmark, an official at the Environmental Protection Agency, says his agency authorized the test program because the 11,000-series system has proven successful in fuel cells.

SPEAKERS for several major manufacturers and distributors of emissions equipment were at the test site of the Eastern Electric System, which is setting the standards. The tests will continue for the year.

Gov. Milliken said Thursday that the Michigan State Housing Authority has said that it would use the system in their buildings, which would require the authority to initiate a program of house replacement and mortgage insurance.

The system will include redrawing and painting of parts of public and private homes as well as improving parts of M78 and M-36. Cost of the work, which is estimated at $165,000. The cost of the work, which is estimated at $165,000.

Two manufacturers, Ford and Volkswagen, expressed strong support for the system. Their standards are not yet ready to be accepted, but the manufacturers have asked that the standards be adopted as soon as possible by the state. The systems in use will be used to determine the extent and nature of the emissions.

Government authorities have estimated that automobile emissions are responsible for about 20 percent of the nation's air pollution. Environmentalists have called on states to adopt the standards as soon as possible in order to meet federal standards. The manufacturers have asked for adoption of the standards as soon as possible.

"It is not a new system that must be necessary," he said. "The system does not provide the solutions which are currently proposed," said J. F. D'Afflante, the firm's vice president for engineering and design.

The province must be set for a career that is in the province of the individual.

Under questioning, officials of the state's labor federation said that the standards are not yet ready for implementation. The state of the standards is not yet ready to be used for the standards.

H. L. Black Ford, president of the National Association, and further research for Volkswagen, appeared with representatives of American Mothers on the first night of two days of hearings by the EPA.

Swordfish found harmful

The FDA said Wednesday that swordfish, a popular fish, should be avoided by pregnant women and children due to mercury contamination.

The FDA's announcement comes as part of a broader effort to regulate seafood safety.

The FDA is considering similar restrictions on other seafood products, including tuna and shrimp.

The agency is urging consumers to avoid swordfish and other high-mercury fish during pregnancy and lactation to protect the health of infants and young children.

The FDA also recommends that pregnant women choose fish low in mercury, such as tilapia, catfish, and salmon, and that women of childbearing age limit their intake of fish and other seafood to 12 ounces per week.
