Senator recalls briefing during committee hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton said on the 25th anniversary of his admission to the Senate that the news of his mental illness made him more understanding of how patients feel and what it is like to be in his position.

Eagleton was speaking to the Senate on the day before his retirement, which he will announce on Monday.

Eagleton's admission to the Senate in 1969 was the first that a senator had been treated for mental illness. He said he was a member of the Democratic Party and the Senate's only senator to have been diagnosed with bipolar disorder.

"I have been able to act as a senator for 25 years because of the support of my family, friends, and colleagues," Eagleton said. "My family has always been supportive, and my friends and colleagues have been understanding."

"I have had a lot of help from them, and I am grateful for their support."

Eagleton was a member of the House of Representatives from 1965 to 1969 and was a former mayor of St. Louis. He was also a member of the Missouri Senate from 1959 to 1965.

Eagleton's career was cut short when he was hospitalized for a mental illness in 1969, and he was not re-elected to the Senate in 1970. He served as Missouri's attorney general from 1971 to 1973 and as governor from 1973 to 1977.

Eagleton graduated from the University of Missouri and received his law degree from the University of Missouri School of Law. He was a member of the Missouri Bar Association and served on the board of directors of the Missouri Bar Foundation.

Eagleton was married to his wife, Ruth, who was a nurse, and they had two children, Thomas and Elizabeth.

Eagleton died in 2006 at the age of 82.

Tax panel seeks data on finances

The Senate Taxation Committee has refused to consider any bill lowering the state income tax until it gets "some straight answers" out of budget experts on where the state stands financially.

"I think it's time we get some straight answers out of those people on whose money is being taken, how much is being taken and why we need all of these taxes any way," said Senate Taxation Chairman Charles DeWitt, a Buffalo Democrat, at a stormy committee meeting Tuesday.

"When the solution to the state's fiscal problems is looking for an easy solution," Mr. DeWitt said, "then the budget committees are either going to be brilliant or not."

"If we don't get any straight answers, I'll move the adjournment of the committee until we do," he said.

A group of tax experts and officials, including state revenue officials, will meet next week as the date for meeting with the Senate Taxation Committee. Mr. DeWitt said.

"These people are not going to provide the information," he said. "The tax bill the committee was working on today would have increased the state's income tax by 5.2 cents per $100 revenue.

"The same bill furnished by the Revenue Bureau would raise corporate taxes from 3.5 per cent to 7.5 per cent and financial institutions taxes from 7 per cent to 10 per cent.

"The state is estimated to be in anywhere from $10 million to $100 million in state income tax in 1971, but revenue sources are being altered and considered.

"Today's meeting on the bill by budget bills for fiscal 1971-72 that would cost the state $47.97 billion, that figure represented an increase of $252 million over the current budget figure needed for this June 30."

EDITORSIALS

Did any country learn from the money crisis?

Amid the hysterias of last week’s so-called “crisis,” one public voice could not be heard at all. That voice would have been the American public. The tragedy of America’s news cycle could not understand nor control America. Americans were being perpetrated by the intricacies of international finance, a field which America’s self-supporting stature had to be of the highest awareness.

In the short run, Americans can almost completely disregard last week’s events. The consumer will be no different in the next few circumstances which created last week’s conflagration. The cause has been corrected.

In the long run, there has been a favorable balance of payments with western Europe, the crisis probably would have occurred. Over the past 10 years, the number of dollars leaving the United States for Germany has more nearly equaled the number of marks leaving Germany for dollars. This has created a monetary surplus. This gave Germany more dollars than she needed for her existing reserves, thus infusing the German money supply, and, in turn, the German economy.

As Germans discussed raising the value of the mark to stop the flight of dollars, the crisis was catalyzed. Speculators buying mark, would then buy dollars, causing a devaluation. Dowagering more assets would then increase demand for dollars. The result was the currency inflation of the then-weak Latin countries.

Inflation

To prevent this inflation from adding dollar flow, European banks simply stopped buying dollars. They no longer reflect lack of confidence in the dollar, although the dollar was an emergency measure, the best alternative available for all involved, including Communist Markets. The country of course meant to handle the situation.

Some nations simply retaliated their money upward; others decided to let their currency seek its own level on international money markets. The net effect of all these solutions was continuing currency depreciation, with higher-valued European currencies, European dollars declined, and a weakening dollar, and an expensive abroad, making their less competitive. It also increased the dollar stream for the time being.

Still no need for SST

The SST was supposedly grounded early last week as the New York Times reported, Monday 31 to 40. In an attempted last-minute experiment, the SST was downed 58,500 from the $6.9 billion levels of compensations in order to keep the $1 billion for the purpose of continuing operations (16,000). The hope was that the SST bill is now scheduled to finance transportation and public welfare.

On the surface it looks like a good solution to the current problem on the SST instead of tearing it down, it’s a brilliant move. The SST’s backyard remains behind the movement to re-assess the SST for good. SST backers feel some congressmen may be having second thoughts about their SST votes in the light of French President Pompidou’s recent articles. Congress has already spoken decisively one way this year on the SST, today, there’s a deliberate attempt to catch anti-SST forces in their tracks. A Linda’s great use of legislative power.

There is, however, no better reason now for supporting the SST than there ever were. The SST costs only a few small groups and could potentially wrench things on the ground. The SST still rates too far down the list of national priorities to merit any additional funding.

When "Tom Paine" opens on campus Thursday, the MUJ New Players will become the first amateur theater company in the country to perform both Paul Fentz's biographical dramatization of the nation's most famous revolutionary.

Amidst cheers and shouts of "Paine!" the play will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and again at 7 and 10 p.m. Saturday in the Shoelace Hall Little Theater. Beginners John Wallis is the director. The action takes place in the Western Hall Kios and May 27 - 29 in the Michieil Hall Kios before returning to the Shoelace Hall.

"Tom Paine" is in the vanguard of the contemporary theater, a New Players project said, one instance in expected to participate as well as others. The production is an attempt to meet the demand for theater as a part of the national scene.

The revolutionist Paine, portrayed by Brian Schaus, Christopher, Tompkins, is presented as history has recorded him - a大约y optimistic mused dead with the land and dedication to help form a revolution based on these.

The play attempts to give an early jump to a man who has become a hero in his own right, and to bring alive his world, his ideas, and his political career, which have been honoring the play and the Paine on stage there is an attempt to establish an understanding of the revolution as it really was, and to feel the mood of the impressionable productions.

A specially constructed set that permits the actors to be blended into the stage. The stage will be used to mark the intensity of an emotional and physical scene. This will be especially true in the play and people will also ask that to enhance the mood.

Cuckoo's' fails in staging

Paul Foster's biographical dramatization, "Tom Paine," will be presented by the MUJ New Players at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday and 7 and 10 p.m. Saturday in the Shoelace Hall Little Theater.

I suspect that if you have already read Fentz's book "Why Paine Believed the Cuckoo's Nest," you might think that the play is not only disappointing, but is the ultimate criticism.

But it is a sad truth, not that the plot of the play is the same, but that the context of the play is the same.

The play is not a historical piece, but an attempt to understand the times.

The world is, in a sense, it is an issue of the issue.

This environment continues the struggle between good and evil, and people, and to enhance the situation, the play shows that the times are becoming a very important feature.

The story is the story of the priest and the priest's son, who died in the war.

Minister discusses death

By LESLIE LEE
New News Staff Writer

"For the last two hours, I've noticed that there are death messages in the Rudder Foundation," said Tracy Morris, chairman of the Rudder Foundation Committee. "I'm not sure why, but it seems that the death messages are increasing in frequency." The committee, which is responsible for overseeing the Rudder Foundation, has noticed an increase in the number of death messages in recent months.

The committee conducted a survey of the reasons behind the increase in death messages. The results showed that the majority of deaths were related to accidents, with a smaller number of deaths attributed to natural causes. The committee also noted that the number of deaths related to suicide had increased significantly in recent years.

The committee is currently working on developing strategies to address the issue of death messages. They plan to hold a series of meetings with students and faculty to discuss the problem and develop potential solutions. The committee is also considering the possibility of implementing a system to automatically remove death messages from the website.

The committee is committed to addressing this issue and ensuring that the Rudder Foundation remains a safe and welcoming environment for all students. They encourage anyone who has experienced the loss of a loved one to reach out for support and to seek assistance from the university's counseling services.

Election reform legislation would restrict spending

By CAU Staff Writer

"I believe that the current system of election reform legislation is outdated and ineffective," said Dr. John Green, professor of political science. "We need a system that is more modern and responsive to the needs of our society." The professor has been advocating for the passage of new legislation that would reform the current system of election reform.

Dr. Green argued that the current system of election reform legislation is ineffective because it fails to address the root causes of political corruption. He asserted that the system is designed to protect the interests of wealthy donors and political elites, rather than the needs of the average American.

The professor proposed a system of election reform that would focus on increasing transparency and reducing the influence of money in politics. He suggested that the government should implement measures to limit the amount of money that can be spent on political campaigns and to increase the role of public financing.

"I believe that these reforms are necessary to ensure that our democracy remains strong and effective," said Dr. Green. "We must take action to ensure that our political system is fair and just for all Americans." The professor is committed to working with lawmakers to pass the necessary reforms and to ensure that the government is responsive to the needs of its citizens.

CANA to request status of four-year college

By RANDALL PARNES
Correspondent

"I want to request that the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Michigan be considered a four-year college," said Dr. John Hays, president of the university. "This is necessary to ensure that our students have access to the highest quality education." The request will be made to the Board of Regents at their next meeting.

Dr. Hays argued that the College of Arts and Sciences currently lacks the resources and infrastructure necessary to support a four-year college. He said that the university needs to invest in new buildings and facilities, as well as in the recruitment of new faculty members.

The request will be accompanied by a detailed plan for the expansion of the college. The plan will include proposals for new degree programs and for the development of new research centers. The university is committed to ensuring that the College of Arts and Sciences remains a vibrant and dynamic institution, and to providing our students with the best possible education.

Nearly nonexistent roads, financial difficulties and plagues of rats and insect pests are driving many Greek students among on-campus students have created large areas of demand and turmoil among the Greek houses at Michigan State University.

Organizations are faced with the alternative of either closing their houses or replacing the old facilities by moving their members into smaller house units. The lack of space and money has led to a decrease in the number of students participating in Greek activities at MSU.

The Greek system in the past was centered around a social life with study of friends and an absolutely minimum social interaction. Today, with the increasing size of the university and the limited space available, the Greek system is facing a crisis.

Borlaug and his wife, who have been living in Mexico for the past few years, believe that the best way to increase the food supply is to intensify farming programs, not to increase the areas of farmland. They agree that the key to solving the food problem is through education and research, and they are working to establish a program to train future food experts in Mexico.

The Borlaugs are not the only ones interested in the future of agriculture. Many others, including scientists, educators, and politicians, are concerned about the future of the food supply and are working to find solutions.

Cape Kennedy, Fla. (AP) - The Apollo 13 moon module landed in the lunar highlands Tuesday and mission commander Fred H. Rouck said it was "the beginning of one of the most significant scientific expeditions ever conducted."

"Inherently, these men are heroes for they have offered an unflinching example when a model of our moon began moving in to a host of a large group of veneers. But the problem, bad batteries, was corrected swiftly and they continued their lunar exploration reborn.

Kiss, the third and the Apollo 13 module, sawaif, and the Apollo 13 astronauts, took a site in the western highlands and one in the eastern highlands, where they were the first to land on the open lands of this land, landing on these accessible sites.

The third and the fourth moon module, named after a host of a large group of veneers called the Apollo 13, stood up at the lunar module and said "These are more scientific opportunities available to this."

AFL-CIO hits Nixon tactics

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) - The defense zone has won an aggravated AFL-CIO executive council endorsement charged Tuesday that President Nixon is trying to gain support from the cause of labor, and that the Democratic party is trying to steal the dollars spread and said that its failure to provide for the benefit of defining business investment is the establishment of a Cabinet-level committee to direct federal assistance.

"The decision of President Nixon to commit $10 million in congressionally appropriated funds in a national political party that the nation can afford cannot be tolerated by a national party," the council said.

The council said that the committee’s success should be measured by the performance of the party and the success equal to the performance of the Democratic party.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Philip A. The FTCA, which has been criticized for its actions, has been criticized for its actions. Although its office holds "hundreds of complaints yearly to the FTC," which are subject to the public, Hart said, "Few get a full-blown investigation."

"If we judged from the number of cases and our order calls yearly by the FTC (Farrukh alleged violations), we think that violations are common."

U survey studies prepaed health plan

By BARBARA FARY
State News Staff Writer

You could be instrumented in the implementation of a prepaid health care plan in Michigan if you are one of 114 members of the Interfraternity Council who are participating in a pre-pilot during the initial survey.

The survey will be administered by personal interview during the next few weeks by the Urban Survey Research Unit. It is phase I of the prepaid health care plan proposed.

If approved, the plan would provide health care coverage for all personnel, at very low co-insurance, deductibles, co-payments, etc., from a set amount of money paid to a group of doctors, nurses and other health professionals. Rates would probably vary according to age, marital status and other factors, like insurance rates.

In the planning stage, the plan would probably go into effect by July 1973.

The first survey to some health care professionals or selected subscribers will be taken from those group-administered, administrative and hourly personnel and single and married students. The purpose is to elicit specific question answers to a second, more comprehensive, survey which will be administered to faculty members, staff and students later this term.

A third and final survey will be administered to same costs, if results from the first and second surveys indicate an interest in a prepaid health care plan.

The survey was written by the Urban Survey Research Unit. Its results will be studied by the All-University Health Center Advisory Board, of which David C. (Curly) Bender, East Lansing High School principal, is chairman.

"On the basis of the survey we can make a recommendation passage of the health plan to President Wharton, who will present it to the Board of Trustees," Bender said.

He explained that the various surveys would follow a flow through of interview questions but is in the scope of questions asked.

The first survey is largely composed of open-ended "how" questions. Participants are also asked to rank devices which the proposed plan would offer on a five-point scale. For example, subjects are asked to rank organization by length of time they complain of services, type of service involved and general satisfaction.

After the second survey will consist primarily of multiple-choice questions based on the responses to the open-ended questions of the first survey.

The third survey would be the most specific," he said. "It would ask the students to check which services they would want and how much money they would be willing to pay for them.

Although the proposed plan has been largely the work of the College of Human Medicine, a committee afraid that the plans cannot be used elsewhere to fit the needs of patients in the community was surveyed for their reactions to the plan.

The All-University Health Center Advisory Board also worked on the design the survey because it is a coordinating representative faculty, student and single student and student affairs who are administratively responsible.

Parole outlook for Hoffa dims

CHICAGO (UPI) - A federal judge has denied a motion by James R. Hoffa to allow the imprisoned president of the Teamster Union to attend parole hearings.

Hoffa, who faces jail for jury tampering, asked Judge Richard J. Posner in the U.S. District Court for Chicago, Illinois, to release him on bond while his case is heard.

Posner said the two prior terms - a year sentence for his role in the Teamster's corrupt Hoffa's lifetime - and his past jury tampering "are not related and should be improved concurrently.

Hoffa lost not retains the position of president of the Teamster International Union but he continues as president of the state's organized crime umbrella, "the busboys," according to experts.

When asked if parole's acceptance as a person would depend on the parole board's acceptance of Hoffa, they said, "We're a believer that Hoffa would be an asset to society, if not, this would be a question of Hoffa's parole eligibility.

The "board (picks) parole eligibility, not parole eligibility," said an official. "They're going to decide whether Hoffa is a fit candidate for parole.

Baron also discussed a parole board that is considering Hoffa's case. The parole board that is considering Hoffa's case. The parole board that is considering Hoffa's case.

ON CAMPUS

Minority employment up

Minority employment at MIU has increased nearly 71 percent in the past five years, according to the Office of Equal Opportunity Programs.

The increase is due in part to the university’s own efforts to hire minority staff members, as well as changes in the labor market and increased demand for minority workers.

Of the total minority employees, 712 are now employed on campus, or 17 percent of the total workforce. This includes 202 African-Americans, 190 Hispanic-Americans, 184 women, 120 members of minority groups, and 21 service workers.

The increase has been most notable in the fields of education, business, and student services. The university has also made efforts to diversify its faculty and staff, with minority members now representing 15 percent of the total workforce.

Admissions to halt advisement at orientation

Admissions is now advising students that they will not be admitted to the university until they have completed all necessary applications and financial aid requirements.

The change is intended to help ensure that students are fully prepared for their time at the university.

The university has also added more staff members to its admissions office in order to handle the increased workload.
