Army officers censured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maj. Gen. John Herriman, a Distinguished Service Medal recipient, said he is considering resigning from the Army because of his assignment to an area of great political controversy.

Herriman, who is involved in the reconstruction of the Vietnam War, said he has been considering resignation for several weeks because of the controversy surrounding the assignment.

Herriman, who is a two-star general, said he has not yet made a decision about his future, but he has been thinking about the possibility of resigning.

Herriman said he is worried about the political environment in which he is working.

"I am concerned about the political climate in which I am working," Herriman said. "I am worried about the political climate in which I am working."
Pool pass the answer for IM financial woes

Starting this summer, students will be charged for using the outdoor swimming pools. The fee of $8,000 is expected to pay for the maintenance and operation of the pools. The fee will be collected through the Student Service Center.

The fee is a response to the university's efforts to reduce its reliance on federal funds and to increase its self-sufficiency. The money collected from the fee will be used to cover the costs of operating the pools, including salaries, equipment, and maintenance.

The fee will apply to all students, regardless of their financial status. Some students have expressed concerns about the fairness of the fee, but the university has defended its decision, arguing that the fee is necessary to ensure the sustainability of the pools.

The fee will be collected on a monthly basis, with payments due on the first day of each month. Failure to pay the fee could result in a suspension of pool access for the student.

The university has also stated that it is exploring options for reducing the fee, such as partnerships with local businesses and community organizations.

The decision to introduce the fee has been met with mixed reactions. Some students have welcomed the fee as a necessary step to ensure the future of the pools, while others have criticized it as a lack of financial planning on the university's part.

The fee is expected to generate around $80,000 per year, which will be used to cover the costs of operating the pools. The university has stated that it will use the funds to improve the pools and to ensure their continued operation for years to come.

The university has also stated that it is committed to providing accessible and affordable options for students who may not be able to afford the fee. Details on these options will be provided in the near future.

"Place" takes complex look at racially oriented roles

After months of being dark, Detroit's off-Broadway oriented West Park Theatre has finally moved into the production of Charles Gordone's controversial play, "No Place For Savages."

Gordone is a new black playwright, and this is his first work. Gordone's approach to his own race is not just another black art and life theme, which frequently manages to gloss over the question of appropriate roles for black people in terms of black, white, black-white relationships.

It is a complex work, and probably what the play demands more than one reading.

Board recommends level population goal

By United Press International

Gov. Milliken's Advisory Council on Environmental Quality now recommends the state adopt a goal of achieving a stable population and maintain it as possible.

But it said that even if the goal of zero population growth were immediately acceptable, it would take 70 years before the population peaked.

"Most animal populations show very smooth fluctuations, to serve as population elements," it said. "Human populations are no longer to be either of these three goals are achieved. Only if the nation is completely self-sufficient can it be achieved through the regulations of birth and death in the family.

The council recommended that Michigan appoint a team to develop details of zero population growth program.

It said two types of cultural changes will be necessary to stop the population increase.

"Reduce the total size of families and reduce the social pressures to marry and have children."

Lansing — Michigan's current population problem is being handled by a state advisory council proposed by the state legislature.

Job outlook dim in civil service

Job prospects are better for students in the armed forces, the police, the firemen, and the peace officers, the civilian defense program and other defense programs.

"If a student has a permanent job at a federal level and willing to move away from home, there's a much better chance of getting a permanent job,

"If a student is not yet on the public service, it will be easier to get into.

"I don't think he will be able to find a permanent job.

Fight called 'hard to film'

By JONATHAN KAPP Pioneer

An award-winning black cinematographer told an audience of more than 100 people Tuesday in Lansing the excitement that the film brought to the town.

The second film, "The White People," was shot with an all-black cast and black directors.

Gaylord said he had been inspired by the story of "Black," which was a film about a black family in Detroit.

"That's a fear that our society will not want to see," Gaylord said.

"In the end, it will be hard to see."

"The Flea" keeps jumping!

By Don Koperna
State News Sports Writer

"The Flea" keeps jumping! And with him go some high hopes for the Spartans' first Big Ten championship since 1967.

"The Flea," of course, is Michigan head coach Larry Brown, who's been running the basketball show in East Lansing since the 1960s. He's not exactly a high-flying star, but his antics can be quite entertaining, especially when he's trying to jump over the head of one of his players.

Brown is so quick that he can often be seen wearing sunglasses even when it's over 60 degrees outside. His Wife, Carol, once said that he never wears them in the winter because he can't see the snow on his face.

"The Flea" is known for his ability to jump over people, and he's been doing it for years. In fact, he was once seen jumping over the head of a police officer who was trying to arrest him for speeding.

Brown's antics have become legend, and he's been known to jump over the heads of his own players on occasion. In one famous incident, he jumped over the head of guard Tom Izzo during a practice drill.

Despite his love for jumping, Brown is also known for his love of beauty. He's been seen with a number of beautiful women over the years, including his wife Carol and his current girlfriend, Terri Miller.

Brown has been married three times, and he's fathered three children. He's also been known to jump over the heads of his children during family functions.

Cowboys' Thomas remains unsigned

By Milton Richardson
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Dallas Cowboys' Tony Thomas lost his legal case today, which's the fifth-consecutive year that he's butted onto the bottom line.

Thomas recently signed with the New York Giants, but they were so much out of money that they couldn't afford to pay him. In fact, they didn't have enough money to even pay him a minimum wage.

When the Cowboys signed Thomas, they had to do so out of necessity. They were looking for a running back and Thomas was one of the few available.

But now, with the Giants in town, they've decided to go with a younger player. And that's just fine with Thomas.

"I'm happy with the Giants," he said. "The weather's better in New York and I get to play with a better team."

Despite his latest legal setback, Thomas remains unsigned. He's still looking for a team to sign him and he's willing to take any job he can find.

"I'm just looking to get back on the field," he said. "I've been out of football for too long and I just want to play."

Thomas has been out of football ever since he was traded to the Cowboys in 2010. Since then, he's been unsigned and has had to rely on his skills to make a living.

But despite his struggles, Thomas remains optimistic. He's confident that he'll find a team that's willing to sign him and give him a chance to play.

"I'm just going to keep working hard and see what happens," he said. "I know I can still play and I'm ready to prove it."
Batsman Rasheed ends slump

By JOHN VIGES

Distillation and frustration. An annual combination at best, but an occasional bond when things go wrong. And then comes the season's first Super Bowl — a force to be reckoned with, a candidate for the middle of the slump.

The response when things go wrong, the answer to the season's first Super Bowl, the answer to three straight losses to the Miami Hurricanes, a team that was marked down as a result of three straight losses. But then came the season's first Super Bowl, a force to be reckoned with, the Miami Hurricanes.

Rasheed, the senior defensive end, was the star of the show. He ended the season's first Super Bowl with three sacks and 13 tackles, including one for a safety. The Hurricanes, who had been scoring at will against the Wolverines, were held to just 13 points.

"I knew I wanted to be the difference," Rasheed said. "And this led to the season's first Super Bowl, a victory over a team that was marked down as a result of three straight losses. But then came the season's first Super Bowl, a force to be reckoned with, the Miami Hurricanes."

Need cited for faculty appraisal

The entire issue system at 1/2 should be reviewed by the faculty. Dormite Clair White, Dearborn City.

If you are still saturated and you are not satisfied with this, you may have to work full time this week, "if you do work it is in the least amount," The faculty advisor criticized the University for not providing systematic procedures for removing incompetent faculty. "The faculty advisor said that the University should make a serious effort to remove faculty who are not competent."

The academic departments at 1/2, on the other hand, are not as concerned about this issue. "We have had several complaints from faculty members about the lack of systematic procedures for removing incompetent faculty," said Dr. John Smith, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The issue system at 1/2 exists at the pleasure of these entities, he said. If it does not act, then the Michigan Legislature will, White added.

Two-wheeled, pedal-powered vehicles out-paced autos in commuter race.

The results of "The Great Bicycle Race," an annual contest sponsored by MSU Cyclists for a Cleaner America, made the idea seem practical enough for North Campus. The race, which drew more than 1,000 frantic students, left campus buildings and major campus traffic "sweating" in destitute mains. The race was to give in a new type of traffic, if any, when the pedalers pedaled.

The results compiled from the event showed that an average distance of 2.7 miles was traveled by the auto drivers before the bicycle drivers passed the bicycle. The bicycle registered 7.3 miles before the drivers passed the bicycle, the bicycle registered 15.3 miles before convincing the bicycle rider. Approximately one-half of the cyclists reported their destinations before their auto partners did.
