MOTHER WADDLES DECIDES ABORTION

BY CHARLES L. CAIN
State News Staff Writer

The Rev. Mother Waddles, head of the Department of Preparatory Care Services at St. Francis Xavier College, has spoken on the Capital City campus about the "dreadful" state of nonfunctional outhouses by some Michigan residents.

"There are thousands of people who are alcoholics or drug users," said the Mother, "and they need our help to get them off the streets." She said the problem is getting worse because of the "dreadful" state of nonfunctional outhouses by some Michigan residents.

"The worst part is that these outhouses are often not even functional," she said. "They are frequently left open and are a health hazard." She said the problem is getting worse because of the "dreadful" state of nonfunctional outhouses by some Michigan residents.

The Rev. Mother Waddles, upper-left, director of the Perpetual Care Mission in Detroit, spoke to a crowd of nearly 1,700 people in Lansing Wednesday. The gathering was in opposition to the abortion laws that now exist in Michigan.

If you inquired about the presence of armed forces on the campus of Michigan State University, you would receive a variety of answers.

"We have 42 policemen on the campus," said President J. H. Sheldon. "They are on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week." He said the force is comprised of 15 members of the Michigan State Police, 27 members of the Lansing Police Department, and two members of the Michigan State University police force.

President Sheldon said that the force is on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to keep the campus safe and secure.

The 42 policemen are divided into three shifts, each consisting of 14 officers. They are assigned to different areas of the campus, including the Maunikee Building, the Hall of Administration, the Student Union, and the football stadium.

The force is also responsible for enforcing traffic laws on campus, as well as providing security for university events and meetings.

"We are here to protect the millions of dollars of equipment and property on this campus," said Sheldon. "We are also here to ensure that our students and faculty feel safe and secure."

State Rep. Bob Trumbull, D-Bay City, and Wednesday he "cautiously optimistic" that the Michigan House will pass the bill. His decision is based on the fact that Michigan residents will pass the bill. Trumbull, author of the bill, the department of the government, the legislature, and the judiciary. The bill, now being considered by the House, is likely to pass.

"The bill is a major step forward in improving the system of state law enforcement," Trumbull said. "It provides improvements in the way the state enforces laws, which will help to reduce crime and promote the safety and welfare of all Michigan residents.

The bill would provide for the establishment of a statewide commission on law enforcement, which would be responsible for reviewing and recommending changes to the state's laws to improve public safety.

"This bill is a priority for the state's leaders," Trumbull said. "It will bring much needed improvements to the state's law enforcement system, and I urge my colleagues in the House to support it.

The bill received widespread support from law enforcement officials, including the Michigan State Police, the Michigan Attorney General, and the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police.

The bill was introduced in December, and has since been referred to the House's judiciary committee for further consideration. It is expected to be up for a vote in the near future.

States modify penalties

By The Associated Press

Mandatory uses are likely to wind up in jail in 1972 if increasing numbers of state legislatures enact such laws. The survey by the Associated Press shows that many states are considering mandatory prison terms for certain offenses, including those involving marijuana.

The survey indicates that most states are looking to increase mandatory sentence lengths for certain offenses, particularly those involving marijuana. In some cases, this has led to increased prison populations and increased costs for state correctional systems.

The survey also found that many states are considering mandatory sentences for other offenses, such as those involving firearms and drug trafficking.

The survey was conducted in January, and included responses from all 50 states. It was designed to gauge the level of support for mandatory sentences among state legislators.

The results of the survey indicate that mandatory sentences are likely to become more common in the coming years, as states seek to address public safety concerns.

Student board OKs lobby for increased state funds

The ASU student board voted Wednesday to support a state lobbying effort to increase state funding for higher education. The board's decision follows a recent report by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, which found that state funding for higher education had declined in recent years.

The report showed that state funding for higher education had declined by more than 10% in recent years, leading to reduced budgets for many college and universities. Student vote power: get an absentee ballot

Power comes to those who exercise it. And in this nation the power to register to vote is the paramount right. Access is not automatic, though. You must register, and you must vote if you are to be heard. But what is one vote out of thousands? What can a group of young people and students mean? An interesting philosophical point, but there is one thing that the City of Lansing has special power over — your ballot.

Students comprise more than one-tenth of the total Lansing population. Whether you vote or not is the test of whether your voice will be heard. If you are a registered voter you will be able to cast your vote in the regular election. Unless there is a large student vote in the summer primary, it is unlikely that those six candidates will represent the viewpoint of the student body. The solution is to vote by absentee ballot. On today’s page 3 The State News has provided an Application for Absent Voters Ballot. If you are a registered voter, you may simply drop off the application at the hall or mail it to the Lansing Clerk, City Hall, 410 Abbott Rd., Lansing. An absentee ballot will be mailed to you for the Aug. 3 primary. If you are not a registered voter, but qualify as one, we urge you to go to City Hall, become registered and apply for an absentee ballot there.

Remember, your future is in your hands. If you do not exercise your right, you will lose it. There is no one but yourself to blame.

A new way to handle the drug use dilemma

What can states do to alleviate mounting drug addiction? Many have tried stricter laws and educational programs aimed at converting an addict into a "normal" individual. Neither has worked on a large scale. But in London a new drug rehabilitation program promises to prove effective.

Former drug addicts are working hard now under a program run by the London Criminal Courts, interviewing and treating patients. The program is based on the idea that addicts can be counseled, not punished. The state offers them work and a living. Other programs have provided alcoholic drinks and tobacco, which the addict has been told he may have to provide himself with a new source of income.

The program provides a fresh approach, however, to a much more difficult problem and approach which should be encouraged. Still in the early stages, no one will be able to tell if the system will be successful in the program. But in the present climate of thought the program should get the chance it has been given.

Many have already pointed a finger at the hope of making a new source of income to keep the addict off the street. But the immediate goal is rehabilitation, not making money.

With it

In announcing his offensive against illegal gambling, President Nixon stated that he could "see no social evil in a problem that is less sensational than the illegal gambling which we are fighting.

"Long distance road" to law enforcement

Judge John C. Engle of the 28th Judicial Circuit, Chief Executive in tune with the Federal Narcotics Act, has developed a plan to tackle the problem of illegal gambling in Eaton County. His plan, based on the recent move to increase the capacity of the Federal Narcotics Act, is intended to make easier the fight against gambling.

The plan involves the use of smaller, more mobile units of enforcement. The judge feels that the program is a viable working alternative to a prison detention that normally strengthens rather than dissipates drug habits.

However, the program is not without its problems. State finding law, for example, is too low, and, as a result, the program consumers will probably bedropout. Nor are all addicts right for the type of rehabilitation as former addicts representatives have pointed out.

This is the problem. To determine if the program will work, one has to see if it is being headed by the right people. The program provides a fresh approach, however, to a much more difficult problem and approach which should be encouraged. Still in the early stages, no one will be able to tell if the system will be successful in the program. But in the present climate of thought the program should get the chance it has been given.

Rights for handicapped sought

By SUSAN BENNETT

At one time MSU would not admit blind students to education in social work. A few years ago, the School of Social Work would not admit a student who had a visual impairment. Today, many educational institutions are more open to the idea of providing educational opportunities for the handicapped. However, there is still much work to be done in ensuring that the rights of persons with disabilities are protected.

In Michigan, the Michigan Civil Rights Commission has taken steps to address the issue of discrimination against persons with disabilities. In 1981, the Commission adopted guidelines to ensure that persons with disabilities are provided with equal access to public accommodations and public services.

The Commission's guidelines aim to prevent discrimination based on disability. They are designed to ensure that persons with disabilities are able to participate fully in society. These guidelines cover a wide range of areas, including employment, education, transportation, and public accommodations.

The guidelines require that public accommodations, such as restaurants, hotels, and theaters, provide accessible facilities. They also require that educational institutions provide reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities.

The guidelines have been effective in ensuring that persons with disabilities have access to educational opportunities. However, there is still much work to be done. Many employers continue to discriminate against persons with disabilities, and it is important that the guidelines continue to be enforced.

It is important that we continue to work towards ensuring that persons with disabilities have equal opportunities. The guidelines are a step in the right direction, but we must continue to advocate for the rights of persons with disabilities.

WMSB-TV Offers internship plan

By LIN BRACHEK

"Students going through MSU's internships and radio day are being shortchanged," production manager Bruce Manly said recently.

"If I were a young person now, I would probably not take the internship program."

"They go into some other industry. We lose them," Manly said.

Because of this situation, MSU has decided to offer a volunteer internship program but fail to offer any stipends. The program is open to all students, and students interested in the program are offered to serve some students.

Although the internship program offers no stipend and offers to students, credit is possible.

Barbers gird for haircut rush

By HAY HENDRICKSON
State News Staff Writer

With finals less than a week away, East Lansing barber shops are preparing for the anticipated customer traffic.

"It has people standing in the streets, long lines and stuff," said Glenn Herriman, owner of Glenn Herriman Barbershop. "It is like having a holiday in the middle of January."

Herriman said he is already preparing for the rush by offering special deals and by having his staff work overtime.

"We try to keep things moving, and we try to make sure that we have enough staff to handle the demand," he said.

Despite the rush, Herriman said he is not worried about the impact on his business.

"We are prepared for it, and we have been through this before," he said.

Dream of pros in reach for Ellis

By JOHN VIDE

Rob Ellis could be the answer to a fantasy league owner's prayers. It may sound corny, but Ellis had a dream. And in reality, what person who ever played sports doesn't have a good dream or two about what it would be like to play professionally? Ellis' dream didn't start in E. Michigan, but it did start there.

"I was 15 years old and they'd always told me about pursuing a professional contract," Ellis said as he stood along the field on the University of Michigan's Intramural Field for one of the ball games.

The difference between Ellis' dream and that of most others is that the Spartan pitcher can be expected to make his dream a reality, probably this season.

"I thought of playing professional ball for a long time," he said, "and if a chance came along I just can't let it pass by.

"The thought was to be able to play for the district tournament and I think that getting started in pro ball is as important as my high school days.

"A player of Ellis' caliber is worth money to the pro team to turn around and help the cause as he has.

"When I get the opportunity I'm going to do my best to play my way up to the majors and one day even play in the World Series."
