Hart applauds 12-year-old vote

By STEVE ALLEN

Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., said he had "mixed feelings" about students registering to vote in their college towns in an attempt to influence 1972 U.S. Senate elections.

In a speech Tuesday to the Michigan Economic Club, Hart said he was "very pleased" that students were registering to vote, but he was less impressed with their numbers.

Hart said the election is "very important" for the young people living on college campuses.

"Many of you are moving into a new direction," Hart said to the young people. "You've identified the question, now where is the will to get the money to do it?"

Hart added that a wide range of non-electoral solutions exists to the voting problem.

In his address to the voter registration workshop, Hart said that the party and the country will be better, he said, if the 18- to 20-year-old vote.

Hart complimented the young people for voting the hard question and the hard way.

The 2-year-old vote was a major issue in the Chicago 1968 Democratic convention and in the current election cycle.

Hart said the former prime minister's idea that party unity must come first failed to charm the growing left, and even staunch Chicago pollsters have been disappointed.

"The question and answer session after his speech, Chuck Wilde, said the young people could do better by getting involved in community issues, like voter registration, before turning their attention to national politics. But "it is a time that will not return; all of us must energize.""

Hart added that, among other non-electoral solutions, students could use the system to make a more positive impact.

The Michigan senate approved a House-passed "no-fault" divorce bill Friday, providing potenti al divorcees with a choice of three plans to guide the marriage's breakup.

The average Michigan family spends more than 20 years before deciding to divorce for reasons like infidelity, alcoholic abuse, or physical incompatibility. If the divorce bill is passed, the marriage may be ended without a court battle.

The bill, introduced March 12, is designed to replace the present legal divorce process that one party most prove the other is guilty or that the marriage is invalid. The current laws require the court to determine fault for the divorce as a matter of law.

Faculty work week analyzed in survey

The average M.S.U. faculty member works more than 30 hours a week and spends more than 20 hours a week preparing and teaching. According to a recent study by the Michigan Intercollegiate Research Council (MIRC), a study was conducted with 452 professors from 29 public and private Michigan colleges and universities.

A bill to be introduced in the Senate with Michigan Rep. George Heath, the new student member of the Senate, would provide a "no-fault" divorce plan for Michigan residents. The bill, sponsored by Sen. C. H. Ryan and Sen. J. E. Smith, would give the couple a choice of three plans to guide the marriage's breakup.

Abortion reform battle: remember your allies

Just a couple weeks ago it appeared that the Michigan legislature was about to be confronted with a defeat for the abortion reform battle. The legislative committee in charge of the issue was about to be defeated. The Michigan Coalition of Churches for Abortion Reform was already laying groundwork for a full-fledged campaign to save the measure. But, the legislation finally did pass over the objections of the Michigan Coalition of Churches for Abortion Reform. It will be difficult to keep the issue alive. The legislation that the Michigan Coalition of Churches for Abortion Reform had been struggling to save is the bill that would establish a three-year-old limit on public funding for abortions. The bill passed by a vote of 60-38.

The Michigan Coalition of Churches for Abortion Reform is a group of religious organizations that work together to promote reproductive rights. They are one of the key allies in the abortion reform battle. They have been working hard to educate the public about the importance of reproductive rights and to build support for the three-year-old limit on public funding for abortions. They have been holding events, distributing literature, and speaking to groups about the issue.

The Michigan Coalition of Churches for Abortion Reform is also working to educate the public about the impact of the three-year-old limit on public funding for abortions. They are working to ensure that people understand the importance of reproductive rights and the impact of the three-year-old limit on public funding for abortions.

In addition to their work on the three-year-old limit on public funding for abortions, the Michigan Coalition of Churches for Abortion Reform is also working to support other reproductive rights issues. They are working to support the rights of women to make their own reproductive decisions, and to ensure that they have access to safe and legal abortion services.

Candidate seeks merger of philosophies

By RICH WILKINS

In an effort to fulfill his campaign pledge to bring the Lansing City Council and the Board of Education into closer harmony, Globus said he is working on a plan that would have the two bodies sit under one roof.

"I think the present educational system should be changed because the council and the board have a saying-whether it is a saying or a way of thinking — the only constructive way in which to proceed is to have the two bodies work together," he said.

The plan would involve having each board operate as a division, with the council serving all districts.

"There are a number of ways in which the community can be served by a single board," he said. "The difference is in the philosophy, and the philosophy can be interpreted in a number of ways.

"I don't think there are many ways or places in the community for young people to share in the decision-making process, and the community has no idea how to get a hold of that," he said.

One of the problems is that the educational system is not an integral part of the community, and the community has no idea how to integrate it.

"People have turned to dogs because it is a starting experience. If there are other sharing experiences that some of the other groups in the community have had, they would have such a need for dogs," he added.

Mickey said that he would like to see an integration of educational philosophy with the council's philosophy.
