Changes to aid Apollo 15 flight

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) announced yesterday that it will provide Apollo 15 astronauts with a range of new equipment and support systems to aid in their mission to the moon.

Cape Kennedy, Fla. - The Apollo 15 mission to the moon is scheduled to launch on Thursday, July 31. The mission will feature a new generation of lunar rovers, advanced life support systems, and improved communication technologies.

Astronauts James Irwin, David Scott, and Alfred Worden will be the first to explore the lunar surface in detail. The mission will last approximately 11 days, during which time the crew will conduct several experiments, including geological surveys and scientific observations.

The new lunar rovers are designed to provide greater mobility and efficiency on the moon's surface. They will be equipped with advanced technology that allows for longer range exploration and more accurate data collection.

Also new to the mission is a suite of advanced life support systems. These systems will allow the crew to live and work in a more comfortable and sustainable environment.

NASA's communication network is being upgraded with new satellites and antennas to ensure continuous contact with the mission.

During the mission, the crew will be studying the moon's geology, searching for possible water sources, and gathering data that will help scientists understand the moon's origin and evolution.

The mission is expected to be a major step forward in our knowledge of the moon and our ability to conduct scientific research in space.

Police describe purse robberies

By Jim Sheldon

State News Staff Writer

Nearly 20 incidents of larcenies from persons have been investigated this month by public safety officers. It's not unusual for police officers to be on the lookout for persons who are possible sources of the crime.

A number of larcenies from the past month have been very strange.

Police urge persons to note four precautions in avoiding theft.

1. Keep a record of credit card and account numbers.

2. Call your bank or credit card company in the event of a theft.

4. Call your bank or credit card company in the event of a theft.

Halls increase measures to prevent campus crime

By Steve Waterbury

State News Staff Writer

Students returning to State Hall next Monday will find some new safety precautions, accompanied by a number of security measures.

Ray North, chairman of the State Hall Security Committee, said a report to the board of trustees on the measures--that was presented earlier--is being reviewed by the board.

The report noted that the number of thefts on campus had been increasing, particularly in the past few years.

North said an educational effort will be conducted throughout the 1971-72 academic year in an effort to improve the campus.

To the Editor:

In the dark decades of the '50s and '60s it was deemed to make sense for the United States and its institutions to support foreign regimes perceptively. And, allegedly, it was by that all standards were entirely irrelevant to the "fifth heaven of the United States. In the '50s, it made no sense to MSU not to be in the '70s."

'Bike-in' boosts pathway system

By LEE LIEBE
State News Staff Writer

(7-23-71) Two hundred students and East Lansing residents took part in a rally designed to show the need for a bike lane system throughout the city. The "ride-in," sponsored by the Lansing Livery, followed several of the usual sound-ego sound effects and stressed to Valley Street and through an esthetic show of power.

"Right now riding a bike in East Lansing is too dangerous," a spokesman for the group, who estimated that there were 10,000 bikes in the city, said, "and that we are attempting to do is to make it safe."

The proposal, formulated as a part of a hand and a half of research done by approximately 200 MSU students and members of the group, was presented to the City Council for consideration. During the course, the group outlined the needs of a bike lane system and presented the arguments for its implementation.

In a hearing schedule, the city council members will hear the presentation and will vote on the matter on a date to be announced. The group hopes to have the bike lane system implemented within the next year.

Maurice Klein, executive director of the Lansing Livery, said, "We hope to have the bike lane system in place by the fall of this year. We are working on a proposal that will be presented to the city council in the near future."

The group is also working on a proposal for a bike lane system in the Lansing area. The proposal will be presented to the city council in the near future. The group hopes to have the bike lane system in place by the fall of this year.

In conclusion, the group emphasized the importance of bike lanes in the city and stated that they are working on a proposal that will be presented to the city council in the near future. The group hopes to have the bike lane system in place by the fall of this year.

Mountain performance: continual flow of power

By STEVE ALLEN

State News Staff Writer

Carrying a phantom organ, a vapore on drums, a daemon at base and an invincible force at lead guitar and you have Mountain. And if you try to pin the level of the band down, you should expect to be tarred with the "one down, one up" or "two down" side and you have a decent idea of what happened at Friday night's Mountain concert in the Auditorium.

John McVie, bass, has been noted as a virtuoso at base, but until this time there had been no template on the organ to set the whole stage on fire. No one had predicted this type of "mountain" performance with a mixing of orgies and chaos, with only one thing in mind: to keep the audience together on the arena floor the way they had planned.

The lucky few who had just found their way into the Auditorium before the doors opened caught the best part of the Mountain's way. The group was not just a simple check to make sure the Auditorium had electricity.

The group was natural relaxed. They just played to the elite, and they played to the others. Felix Pappalardi sang "These are for Imaginary Westerns" like he meant it.

Leela West cut some guitar licks, led with enough taste for the 14-foot wide box, and then sang a song with a lisp in the chorus, "There is a flow..."

Along came an hour and a half of constant music, and then, during Nyberg's performance, Nyberg introduced "Blatt, chairman of Pop Entertainment, looks like people, "there will be no Mountain until all of you are wearing the right Concert Star badges..."

"Sometimes running through the darkness the (naked) stars are coming home..."

"Long Mountain" stage right.

Felix Pappalardi on ten, Steve Knight on organ, Buddy Long on drums, and all otheritalian "imaginary Westerns" got the auditorium going.

Fallen faces by the way, but as they played, Mountain opened with "Now I'm My Life" and then sang into "These for an Imaginary Western" for the third time in as many shows. They had performed the number twice while testing the equipment. No more mistakes.

At 5:55 p.m., "These" was on again. Felix Pappalardi's vocal was more restrained. "Censburg" was the last song given 16 minutes to finish. Felix Pappalardi is just keeping them flowing, still a good show through.

The men in your eyes and the duck was dry. The show flowed.

TERMED DANGEROUS

Wide trailer bill assailed

A bill allowing 13- foot wide trailers and modular housing units on Michigan's 12-foot and 12-foot wide highway lanes has been passed by several legislatures and the Michigan State Police as a "dangerous" piece of legislation.

As approved by the legislature, the so-called "k Galon trailer" bill allows the use of trailers six to 14 feet wide and taller, but the truck must be completely modular. The trailer can be used on highways except on weekends and for 12 hours before and after holidays.

It also requires trailers to pull off the road when loads exceed 35 miles per hour. Pipe
