U.S. mediators foresee end to strike against railroads

The chief point of dispute in the United Transportation Union's efforts to work rail strikes is the revenue railroads would have to return to the striking workers. The dispute has caused many issues to arise, including the question of how much money railroads should contribute towards the settlement. The situation has caused great concern among workers and the public, as the strike has disrupted many people's daily lives.

The United Transportation Union (UTU) has been negotiating with the railroads for several weeks, but so far there has been no agreement. The railroads have refused to make the proposed contributions, and the union has threatened to continue the strike until the demands are met.

The strike began on July 1st, and since then the United Transportation Union has been denouncing the railroads for refusing to meet their demands. The union has also been criticizing the railroads for not being willing to engage in meaningful negotiations.

The railroads have countered that the union is not willing to make any concessions and that the demands are too high.

As the dispute continues, it remains to be seen how long the strike will last and whether a settlement can be reached. The impact of the strike on the economy and transportation networks is a major concern for both the union and the railroads.
Abortion: Better or worse?

In his recent column, J. Edgar Hoover has suggested that the decision to legalize abortion was a mistake. He argues that the law has led to an increase in the number of abortions, and that it has also contributed to a rise in child abuse and neglect.

In response to Hoover's column, we would like to point out that the decision to legalize abortion was made after careful consideration of the evidence. It was not made lightly, and it has been supported by a majority of the American people.

We believe that the decision to legalize abortion was the right one, and that it has helped to prevent a much greater number of deaths and injuries than would have occurred if the law had not been passed.

We also believe that the law has not led to an increase in child abuse and neglect. In fact, studies have shown that the rate of child abuse and neglect has remained stable since the law was passed.

We urge Mr. Hoover to reconsider his position, and to recognize the importance of the decision to legalize abortion.

Since 1929 Beaumont Tower's carillon has chimed every 15 minutes. That tradition will last until March.

"At that time a $1 spring were new, covering the first note here was quite expensive," said Wayne Westcott, MSU carillonneur. "These bells have been used for the past five months.

The spring, Westcott said, is up on the floor of the tower's belfry, beneath the carillon, a set of 47 bronze bells, each weighing about 1,000 pounds.

"The spring actually should have been replaced years ago," Westcott said. "It has improved the job has been taking place over the last few years. I imagine the spring finally got strong enough to pull the spring off this morning."

Westcott added, "It's not my job to keep this carillon in condition. It is the responsibility of the Maintenance Services Dept. of the Physical Plant.

According to Westcott, Beaumont Tower's carillon is played by two other serious tunefulists.

The carillon is controlled by means of a clarinet consisting of metal and wood, which pulls the clapper against the bell. "Many of the players from the clarinet and other instruments were replaced by voice today," explained. Also, one of the trombones on the clarinet are impertinent."

The carilloneur controls the range of the carillon. An improved trombone has come out, all of the present ones should be replaced. The old ones were quite good, he added.

"Not all frequencies of the bell have produced when the carillon is flat. These can be replaced simply by pulling some metal against the bell, which is not all that difficult."

"This is an operation which need only be performed every 30 years or so," Westcott added. "To my knowledge it has never been done in the MSU plant."

The carillon has been repaired and replaced, but "My advice is the clarinet is not the responsibility of the Maintenance Services Dept. The clarinet never comes out of the clarinets will be repaired.

Officials from Physical Plant could not be reached Saturday morning.

Westcott, who has been the carilloneur since 1966, said, "In a manner these repairs do not seem to be very important. But for a musician like myself, one note is not worth very much. I think the two situations are similar.

All the necessary repairs, Westcott said, would cost the University at least 15 cents.

"I understand that money is tight at present the University. MSU has been given by the state that costs so little, I cannot accept lack of funds for a music as important as carillon cannot be."

Westcott commented.

Mechanical ills plague carillon

Former students combat indifference at coffeehouse

According to BI Kiddie, one of the carillonneur's predecessors, "When the opening of East Lansing from the Albion Tower has changed, and it is our understanding that the calliope is inoperative."

The Albion Tower has an attempt by a group of former MSU students to create a true carillon. The carillon was planned to play music in various public places.

Two years ago the coffeehouse's issue of the carillon was being held up at the Albion Tower of the new University of Michigan."

The carillon could be manipulated, and the music will be played in various public places.

"If you offer people a serious point of interest on a social level, they might find it more of a help," said the carillonneur.

"I am providing entertainment on Friday and Saturday evenings."

"It's certainly a valuable effort and so one gets paid. The emphasis is not so much on entertainment as it is on the educational side. Divorce, however, the educational side had been much more extensive."

"The carillon could be played in various public places.

For the rest of the season it will be played every week, but I will have to ask the students to keep the carillon in good condition.

I think the coffeehouse's issue of the carillon is the best way to keep the carillon in good shape.

SEVERE INFESTATION

Village sprayed to kill insects

By JIM SHERWOOD
State Farm Staff Writer

LANSING - Using the term "spraying" as a euphemism for another less pleasant word, police and health officials in the Eaton County town of Hayfield used DDT for the first time for the control of the spotted lanternfly, which threatens to destroy trees, fruit and vegetables on farms and in the home gardens of the state.

POLICE BRIEFS

A Doughnut's grand opening and police shortly after Saturday morning had the would-be customers lined up by the time the restaurant was ready to open at 9 a.m. Around 8:30 a.m., as the door was about to open, the man in the crowd looking most forward to the doughnuts was a police officer. As the doors opened, he pulled out a note from his pocket and approached the man in line.

"I'm a police officer," he said, "and I want to commend you on the name of your restaurant. It's a great name for a doughnut shop." The man, who was carrying a large bag of doughnuts, replied, "Thanks. We're glad you like it." The officer then took his doughnuts and stepped back in line.

Migrants trapped in life style

Michigan has been especially hard hit by the railroad and the automobile. Michigan's massiveness makes it difficult to find many of the Mexican laborers because of picking fruit and vegetables.

With the new supply of labor, farmers planted more trees and crops.

"The Ford Farm grew and grew with the help of people displaced by the Depression," said Jerry, a member of the Macomb County Fruit Growers Association. "We have never seen the like of it before."

The war times were the worst of the 20th century. The result of the war was a new migration of laborers to the farms of Michigan. The war brought many men from the fields to factories and back to the fields again.

Large companies and representatives of governments continue to use their influence to recruit migrant labor for Michigan farms.

Many migrants come to Michigan and stay, many of them bring with them their families, and work during the growing season. In many cases, they are allowed to work only on farms, in the districts where the two are located. In some cases, they are allowed to work in the central Michigan where the supply of labor is high. The laborers often work in groups, and the migrants are organized into groups with the help of the laborers' unions.
