Tuition rises plague students nationwide

By STEVE WATERSBURY

State News Writer

Students are not alone in facing the problem of rising college costs. Parents and educational administrators are also facing the same problem. Parents are forced to pay more and more in order to support their children in college.

For many students today, the current rate changes from low to high. In the middle of the rate of $25 to $50 per month.

The association's survey data indicate that the pace of tuition and fees increases are increasing nationwide.

It is not difficult to see why tuition rates are increasing. Many colleges and universities are under financial pressure. They need money to operate and maintain their facilities. The cost of living is also rising, which adds to the pressure on tuition rates.

The increase in tuition rates is not the only problem facing students. The cost of books and textbooks is also rising. This is putting a burden on students who are already facing high tuition rates.

The situation is not likely to improve in the near future. Colleges and universities are facing a difficult financial situation. They need to find ways to reduce costs and increase revenue. This may involve cutting back on certain programs or raising tuition rates.

In conclusion, students are facing a difficult financial situation. They need to find ways to save money and reduce their financial burden. Colleges and universities also need to find ways to reduce costs and increase revenue.
GOP youth rep called token

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
State News Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Chairman of the Virginia Democratic Party and two other members of the Senate's Armed Services Committee called the current type of young person the government is recruiting to fight in Vietnam a "token." "I don't want to participate in recruiting young people that are going to be used up in that war," said Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey. "They're selling get ready activity. It's not going to do anything to improve the morale of the troops."

"We don't want to be young Democrats, or young Republicans any more," said John H. Chafee, R-R.I., who introduced a bill in Congress that would establish education corps with quotas for both parties.

"They are frustrated, young people who want to be involved in the world as it is today," said Chafee. "We have a real crisis in the party, whether they're Democrats or Republicans."

"They're getting more and more姆pressed at the national level on this issue," said Chafee. "The people are getting more and more concerned about this issue."

"They're not alone in the Democratic party," said Humphrey. "They're alienated in the Republican party."

"You're going to have to have a new party," said Chafee. "You're going to have to have a new party that is going to be responsive to the young people."

"I know I have dozens of young people who have come to me and said 'I want to be involved in the national political party.' "

"I want to be involved, but I don't want to be a token,' " said Humphrey. "I want to be involved in the national political party."

"I want to be involved in the national political party," said Chafee. "I want to be involved in the national political party because I'm a young person."

"I don't want to be a token," said Humphrey. "I want to be involved."
School fund struggle continues

By United Press International

A press六合 more than $1 billion in 1971-72 state school aid this month to help ease the financial strains on districts where school districts would have to cut programs to make up for the reduced funds.

In the House, Representative Robert B. A. H. and Representative Peter J. A. W. and several others have warned that the cuts will be severe and may lead to delays in the provision of educational programs for students.

In contrast, the Senate has voted to maintain the current level of aid to school districts, but some Senate members have expressed concern about the long-term effects of reduced funding.

The problem is expected to continue next year as well, with some districts facing the possibility of reduced aid or even closures.

Lindsay termed 'attractive' as candidate for president

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's present Democratic leader, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, has been named as the Democratic party's candidate for President.

Humphrey, who has been a candidate for President in the past, has been considered a strong contender for the Democratic nomination but has not won the primary process.

Lindsay, who has been considered a possible candidate for President, has been named as the Democratic party's candidate for President.

The election will be held on Tuesday, November 8.

Rent-a-thesis service: ‘response’ or rip-off?

Boothing term papers is hardly a new practice. Probably since the origin of university, students — the lazy, the lazy and the disaster-stricken — have been borrowing papers from friends, turning in the same paper twice or plagiarizing entire textbooks in an effort to get by. As academic cheating has reached a new high — or low — as the case may be — with the emergence of Write On Term Papers, the newest educational entrepreneurs selling mostly plagiarized papers copied or made to order. And now the academicians themselves, with other term paper dealers throughout the nation, are borrowing papers from other areas, the cheap option to get a grade and a good grade on a paper is big business.

While previously students matched wins with professors on a 50-50 basis, Write On, with its “computer-type” plagiarism testing and because of its papers, presents a cheating reality that no average, average professor’s coping abilities. The only effective response to such organized academic bootlegging would be offenses on the part of the various colleges and the business of gaining to college would rapidly come to resemble garlic warfare.

The traditional answer to cheating — “you’re only hurting yourself” — is no longer valid. To use the reason behind this mass plagiarism is drought process. If all students were in college today, the college system would gain knowledge, obviously it wouldn’t be the same. In the future, though, it would be the same thinking that students are going to college to gain knowledge if you weren’t going to college, the many students aren’t here to learn, they are here to a degree, and since that is the primary goal, the easiest way to become the best way.

Part of the blame for this lies on the shoulders of the students themselves. The land grant philosophy of mass education all too often degenerates into diploma mills, processing rather than educating students. Your tuition and presents! 120 credits later you are a bonehead college graduate!

The major portion of the blame, however, falls on American society at large. We live in a fast-moving nation which is forced to change its very nature to rely on apparatus, to judge people by what they are not. The result is a society which has little time to build the kind of character you have to be the kind of person you are without the kind of character you are. The kind of character is one of the largest groups in the world. We can’t afford to have a society where we have just one person. Why should a student worry about the subject — learning — rather than those primary goals?

Academic dishonesty hurts one’s fellow students who don’t cheat, destroys the professor-student relationship and deprives one of the chance to learn, but with such pressures being piled on a degree” combined with building capital, an overwrought paper poses a greater threat than ever to the college system.

Whether the problem can be resolved remains to be seen. Write On is not violating existing laws in its operation, nor does it seem likely that tighter enforcement is possible on a departmental level. Perhaps in the future professors and students will need to require oral presentations on any term paper submitted. Worse yet, term papers will have to be turned in by the date, and if the professor could push the multitudes further in, the possibility of being enrolled in a dispensing mill by compelling students to take the kind of character the teacher seems to favor of the memory-erasing people. It does not mean that the student is not a student, but he is not enough.

If the rent-a-thesis idea catches on in East Lansing as it has done elsewhere, the problem of marking and homework is a choice but to legislate against this form of academic dishonesty.

Lack of action could result in further erosion of learning institutions and the educational existence.

Viet presidential race: ‘democracy’ in action

In the midst of Southeast Asian politics it is often difficult to know where to place blame. The present controversy over South Vietnam’s election was a presidential election has caused considerable turmoil for all parties involved.

It would be an understatement to say the situation in South Vietnam is embarrassing. The total rationale for the presence of American troops in Vietnam is to prevent the Việt Cộng from taking over the “totalitarian” Saigon. Their perpetual efforts aimed at securing the city has been achieved, bringing about the overthrow of the Ngô dynasty. Nixon makes the “Vietnamese have a right to self-determination” scenario more than a little suspect.

The United States now finds itself in the position of having to live with the choice in Vietnam that was supposedly made. This is not to secure at least the appearance of fair elections. The Vietnamese themselves have cut themselves off from this habit of the single remaining people. Only in Such an instance has maintained that he will quit the whole thing in the end. Even if indeed Nixon is serious, then it is clear he will not support the single presidential candidate.

The United States has squandered billions of dollars and thousands of lives to make Vietnam “safe for democracy.” But how can one say that the United States has squandered billions of dollars and thousands of lives to make Vietnam “safe for democracy.” But how can one say that the United States has squandered billions of dollars and thousands of lives to mean that the Vietnamese must go through the motions of a presidential election? The so-called Saigon government is the single remaining people. Only in Such an instance has maintained that he will quit the whole thing in the end. Even if indeed Nixon is serious, then it is clear he will not support the single presidential candidate.

Commends coverage

To the Editor:

We would like to commend the State News for its comprehensive and cogent coverage of the following subject.

No other Lansing area newspaper has given more coverage concerned with the candidates and the issues than the State News.

Other media, hampered by the limitations of their voices, were deflected from the real issues at stake in the election. The State News covered such issues as the quality of dress, age, and ratio of city and state issues. The State News has been the most objective and comprehensive in portraying the issues, and has done so in a way that is fair to all candidates. The State News should be commended for its efforts in covering the election.

We, as State News readers, appreciate the effort in providing this coverage, and would like to see more of this type of reporting in future elections.

Sincerely,

Bill seeks renewal of drug laws

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
State News Staff Writer

The bill would include provisions to increase penalties for drug offenses, including the use of force or fear to obtain drugs, and to create a new category of drug offenses, such as distribution of controlled substances in school zones or near schools.

"This bill is necessary to protect our communities and our children," said O'Halloran. "We need to send a clear message that drug trafficking will not be tolerated in our state."

The bill would also increase penalties for drug offenses involving certain drugs, such as heroin, cocaine, and methamphetamine.

"We need to send a strong message to those who traffick in these drugs that their actions will not go unchecked," said Stankiewicz. "We cannot allow these criminals to operate with impunity in our communities."

The bill would also provide funding to law enforcement agencies to help enforce the new laws and to provide resources to help those addicted to drugs.

"We need to support our law enforcement agencies in their efforts to keep our communities safe," said Stankiewicz. "We need to provide the resources they need to do their jobs."

‘Needle Park’ probes dark side of drugs

By ROBERT KIPPER

The picture is a social commentary, a West Side story, a depiction of the harsh realities of urban life. It is a powerful and thought-provoking exploration of the human condition, and it is a film that will leave you with a deep appreciation for the power of cinema.

The story follows a young boy, Bob, as he navigates the treacherous streets of New York City. Bob is a young boy who dreams of becoming a musician, but he must first overcome the obstacles that stand in his way. He must overcome the violence and corruption of the streets, the hypocrisies of the society, the brutal realities of the poverty and the despair.

The film is a testament to the power of music and the resilience of the human spirit. It is a story of hope and of despair, of love and of hate, of dreams and of reality. It is a story that will make you feel, that will make you think, that will make you care.

So come and watch ‘Needle Park’ at the Michigan Theater. It is a film that will stay with you long after the credits have rolled.

Afghanistan: The government has warned that the situation could become worse if the U.S. leaves, as it has raised concerns about the safety of Afghan citizens who have worked for the American military. The U.S. has announced plans to withdraw its troops by the end of the year.

Another 2,000 Roman Catholic refugees arrived in Belfast on Friday as part of the first phase of the program, which aims to resettle 5,000 people by the end of the year. The refugees were flown in from Greece, where they had been held in a camp on the Greek island of Chios.

In London, Prime Minister Boris Johnson called in several Cabinet ministers, including Defense Secretary Liam Fox, to review the situation. He said the government would do "everything possible" to help the refugees.

The security situation in Afghanistan remains volatile, with ongoing violence and insider attacks. The decision to withdraw U.S. troops has been met with concern by many Afghan citizens who have worked for the U.S. military or other Western missions.

The government has said it will continue to provide support to Afghan citizens who have worked for the U.S. and NATO forces, including through the resettlement program.

In other news:

- The U.S. has announced plans to withdraw its troops from Qatar by the end of the year. The move comes as tensions increase between the U.S. and Qatar over the latter's support for the Taliban.

- The European Union has imposed sanctions on Belarus over its crackdown on protesters, including the arrest of opposition leader Sviatlana Tsikhanouskaya.

- The United Nations has warned of a "humanitarian crisis" in Yemen, where fighting between the Saudi-led coalition and Houthi rebels is worsening.
Sewage flushed into river causes fish kill

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality will send a letter to area water watershed districts which had notified the bottom of the water draining pipes for 10 to 12 days, at which time all water has been flushed into the river.

"The large quantities of water which had settled on the bottom of the water district pipes during the last 20 days have been flushed into the river," said Dr. K. F. Smith, executive director of the Department of Environmental Quality.

In the meantime, Dr. Smith said the fish killed have not been identified, but he said they looked similar to the species which are commonly found in the river.

The situation is expected to improve as long as the water district continues to flush the river.

"We are doing all we can to mitigate the impact on the fish," Dr. Smith said. "But we cannot guarantee that all the fish will survive."
