MSU tuition, salary hikes up in air

CONFESSION MOUNTS 'U' fees still uncertain

Another attempt to force a student union issue into the open was made last week when a student group met with university officials to petition them to prevent the Student Assembly from taking any action on the matter.

The student group, led by Michigan State University student Ed Martin, said the petition was made because they believe the Student Assembly is not doing enough to prevent the Student Assembly from taking any action on the matter.

Martin said he and his fellow students are concerned about the potential for a student union to be formed on campus, and they believe the Student Assembly should be given the opportunity to vote on the issue before it is acted upon.

The petition was delivered to the Student Assembly last week, and a vote on the matter is expected to take place in the near future.

Congress to cooperate with Nixon

The House and Senate are expected to pass the proposed budget on a vote of a majority of the members present.

The budget includes $118 billion in tax increases, which will be used to fund the $118 billion in defense and economic programs recommended by President Nixon.

The budget also includes $50 billion in new spending programs, which will be used to fund major infrastructure projects, including the construction of new highways, water systems, and schools.

The budget is expected to pass by a margin of at least two-thirds in both the House and Senate, with the final vote expected to take place next week.

House speakers are expected to make a final decision on the budget next week, and they are expected to pass the budget by a margin of at least two-thirds in both the House and Senate.

Heart-lung recipient dies

Adams Herbert died Tuesday in Cape Town, South Africa, after being longer than anyone else with the heart and lungs of another person.

The 40-year-old dental technician died 3 days after Dr. Christian R. Barnard's transplant team gave him the heart and lungs of a man who died the night before, apparently of an accidental injury. An autopsy was ordered to discover the exact cause of Herbert's death.

House starts set record

Prime Housing starts set a record in July when real estate brokers sold a new 30-year loan in the city area, of 2,218,000 dwelling units, the Commerce Dept. reported Tuesday.

The seasonally adjusted monthly total was 10 percent above the June housing output and 38 percent higher than July a year ago. The monthly pace continued to be the best spot in any other adverse economic picture.

Chinese appeal transfer

A group of Chinese parents appealed Tuesday to the Supreme Court to block the massive transfer to Chinese children away from their neighborhoods in San Francisco.

They said the relocations, ordered by a federal district judge for the next term, are unconstitutional and would destroy the cultural and educational life of the Chinese community in the city.

About 25 percent of San Francisco's elementary school population is of Chinese or other oriental ancestry. The student-transfer order was carried out of a 1971 order by the California board charging children of their race were segregated.

Nonpolitical tour opens

President Nixon opened another great foreign tour Tuesday with an nonpolitical tour to the Supreme Court to block the massive transfer to Chinese children away from their neighborhoods in San Francisco.

Space snook created

The government announced Tuesday it has begun to create, in the mountains of Puerto Rico, the world's most powerful instrument for studying radar systems that are hostile to the United States. The instrument involves adding a more sensitive, high-power transmitter to the island's existing radar system and a special 20-foot-diameter antenna.

The Michigan State Bar rejects "no-fault" insurance plans

By Joanne Firestone

Michigan's radio operator for Lansing, Mr. McFarland, has announced that the State Bar of Michigan has unanimously rejected all proposals submitted by the Michigan courts to modify the "no-fault" insurance plan that was set up by the State Legislature.

State Bar's statement of position on "no-fault" insurance was contained in a report dated September 6, 1971, on the "no-fault" insurance plan and its operation during the first six months of its effective date on October 1, 1971. The report was prepared by the State Bar's "no-fault" insurance committee, and it was presented to the State Bar's Board of Governors.

The report included a detailed analysis of the "no-fault" insurance plan and its impact on the legal community. It highlighted the problems that have arisen under the plan and the need for reforms.

The report also emphasized the importance of maintaining the "no-fault" insurance plan as a fundamental component of the state's auto insurance system. It urged the State Legislature to consider the report and take appropriate action to ensure the success of the "no-fault" insurance plan.

The State Bar's emphasis on the importance of maintaining the "no-fault" insurance plan is significant, given the ongoing debate over the plan's effectiveness and the need for reforms.

McCarthyism: never far away

By RICHARD LEE STRIOUT

There's a circular stone statue in Washington, D.C., that has been the subject of countless photographs and poems. Carved into this statue is the word, "PEACE." And yet, as I write these words, I find myself wondering if peace truly exists.

Newsweek magazine has just published an article about the current political climate in the United States. The article discusses the rise of McCarthyism and its potential impact on the country's future.

The author of the article argues that McCarthyism has been a constant feature of American politics for many years. The name "McCarthy" has come to symbolize the anti-communist hysteria that swept the nation in the 1950s and 1960s.

The article notes that McCarthyism is not a new phenomenon. It has been around since the 1920s, when anti-communism was first兴起. The author argues that McCarthyism is a recurring theme in American history because it taps into deep-seated fears and anxieties about the country's future.

McCarthyism is not just a political movement, but it is also a cultural phenomenon. It is a way of thinking that permeates American society. It is a way of seeing the world that is characterized by a desire for order, stability, and control.

The author of the article argues that McCarthyism is a form of collective delusion. It is a way of thinking that allows people to believe in a world that is free from danger and threat. It is a way of thinking that is based on ignorance and fear.

The author also notes that McCarthyism is a form of self-fulfilling prophecy. It is a way of thinking that creates its own reality. It is a way of thinking that can become a self-fulfilling prophecy.

The article concludes by arguing that McCarthyism is a dangerous force. It is a force that can destroy the fabric of American society.

In conclusion, the rise of McCarthyism is a cause for concern. It is a phenomenon that we must be vigilant against. It is a force that we must work to contain.
WASHINGTON (AP) - Here are a few excerpts from a letter on President Nixon's price freeze, which was sent to every house and senator in Congress on Aug. 15. 1971, stating that the President's price freeze order will remain in effect until Dec. 31.

W.E. "I am writing to draw your attention to the fact that the President's price freeze order will remain in effect until Dec. 31. That is the end date of the President's freeze order, which was put into effect on Aug. 15, 1971. The President has extended the freeze order to Dec. 31, 1971, and the freeze order will remain in effect until that date.

The freeze order was put into effect on Aug. 15, 1971, and it is still in effect. The freeze order is extended to Dec. 31, 1971, and the freeze order will remain in effect until that date.

I urge you to support the freeze order, which is still in effect.

Sincerely,

W.E."

Griffin proposes agency for adoption exchanges

Griffin plans to offer his measure as an amendment to the omnibus social welfare and welfare reform bill which has passed the House and is now pending action in the Senate.

Under this proposed amendment, the secretary of HEW would establish an information center using computers and other modern data processing methods to help public and private adoption agencies throughout the U.S.

Griffin said he intends to make the agency "a prime example of how a favorable action on this measure will have been a major contribution to the American family and to the welfare of all its children.

"The program, both public and private, is one of the mainstays of American family life, and we are in a position where it is being systematically undermined," Griffin noted.

"The adoption agency," he said, "is a prime example of how the nation's welfare is being undermined by the ranks of the unaided, the unaided, the unaided, and the unaided.

Bill to cut phosphates in detergents sought

The bill is part of a nationwide movement by the nations leading detergent manufacturers to eliminate phosphates from their products. The move is aimed at reducing the amount of phosphate waste that enters the nation's waterways, streams, and lakes.

The bill was introduced by Senator Griffin and Senator Inouye in the Senate. The legislation is modeled on a similar bill introduced in the House by Representative Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., and Representative George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif.

The House-passed bill was signed into law by President Lyndon B. Johnson last year. The new law requires that all new detergent products sold in the United States contain no more than 0.5 percent of phosphates.

A few detergent manufacturers have already begun to reduce their phosphates content. Procter & Gamble, for example, has reduced its phosphates content from 5 percent to 3 percent in the past year.

The bill would require all detergent manufacturers to reduce their phosphates content to 0.5 percent by 1971 and to zero percent by 1975. The legislation would also prohibit the sale of any detergent product containing more than 0.5 percent of phosphates.

The detergent industry has been heavily criticized for its use of phosphates, which are a major contributor to the nation's water pollution problem. Phosphates are a natural fertilizer and are widely used in the manufacture of detergents. However, the high levels of phosphates in waterways can lead to excessive growth of algae and other aquatic plants, which can deplete oxygen levels and harm aquatic life.

The new legislation would help to reduce the amount of phosphates entering the nation's waterways and help to protect the nation's aquatic ecosystems.

Symposium set to explore training animal technicians

There is a whole roster of careers open to high school graduates who want to work with animals — from zookeepers and veterinarians to researchers, trainers, and animal behaviorists. And yet, surprisingly, there are no undergraduate programs in the United States that prepare students for these careers. The nearest thing to such a program is the Veterinary technology program at Central Michigan University, which provides training in animal care and management.

However, there are some exceptions. For example, the University of California, Davis, offers a Bachelor of Science degree in Animal Science, with a major in animal behavior. And the University of Guelph, in Canada, offers a Bachelor of Science degree in Animal Behaviour and Physiology.

There are also some programs in animal behavior and conservation offered by graduate schools. For example, the University of Minnesota offers a Master of Science degree in Animal Behavior and Conservation, and the University of California, Los Angeles, offers a Master of Science degree in Animal Behavior.

Unfortunately, these programs are expensive and require a lot of time commitment. A better solution would be to develop more undergraduate programs in animal behavior and conservation. This would provide students with an opportunity to gain the knowledge and skills they need to pursue careers in this field.
WASHINGTON, D.C. - An environmental experiment on mercury pollution long before the world had become aware of its problem was reported at the first international conference on mercury pollution held in Michigan last month.

The study, conducted by the Michigan State University Extension Service, was reported by Dr. J. Eric Nelson, professor of horticulture, at the conference. The study was part of a larger project, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which involved scientists from several states and countries.

The study was conducted on a small lake in Michigan, and involved the use of goldfish to detect the presence of mercury in the lake. The goldfish were exposed to mercury-contaminated water and their health was monitored over a period of time. The results of the study showed that the goldfish were able to detect the presence of mercury in the water, even at low levels.

The study was important because it demonstrated the potential of goldfish to be used as an indicator of mercury pollution in natural waters. This could be a useful tool for monitoring mercury pollution in other lakes and rivers.

In addition to the study, the conference also featured presentations on the effects of mercury pollution on fish populations and the role of mercury in the food web. The conference was attended by representatives from various organizations, including government agencies, academia, and the private sector.

The conference was held in conjunction with the Michigan State University Extension Service, which has been conducting research on mercury pollution in Michigan for several years. The extension service has been working with local communities to raise awareness of the issue and develop strategies to mitigate the effects of mercury pollution.

The conference concluded with a call for action to address the issue of mercury pollution. It was agreed that more research is needed to fully understand the extent of the problem and to develop effective solutions. The conference participants also called for increased collaboration between government agencies, academia, and the private sector to address the issue of mercury pollution in Michigan.
Namath to 'let doctors decide'

NEW YORK (UPI) - Quarterback Joe Namath left his pro football team "on their own" and is going to worry about something else for a few days. He's never considered going out flat because his right knee. Namath told the newsmen who'll be his teammates at the New York Jets for a trip to the Super Bowl, "I'm going to worry about that in a few days, without any thought to my teammates."

Namath was scheduled to fly to San Francisco on Monday, one day prior to the Super Bowl, to attend a meeting with the Jets. He is expected to report to the team's training camp next week.

"I've gone through this before," Namath said. "I'm not going to worry about anything other than getting better."

Namath's decision is a sign of his confidence in his knee. He also expressed his desire to return to the team.

"I'm going to take my natural advice," he said. "I'm not going to worry about anything other than getting better."
Ellsberg pleads innocent on 2 counts at indictment

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Daniel Ellsberg pleaded not guilty to a charge of illegal possession of secret government papers.

"I am not guilty," he told Federal District Judge Jack M. O'Connell.

Ellsberg, a former military analyst who worked for the Rand Corp., acknowledged that the government had evidence that he was engaging in electronic surveillance on a mutually agreed basis. The defense said it expected the case to take 6 weeks.

Meyer and defense attorneys were told to confer with their clients at least 90 days before the trial.

Dispute over sex roles divides symposium

By NICK MULBERRY
State News Brief Writer

Religious dogma promoted a symposium on sex roles that divided the audience, and the discussion of sex roles rapidly turned into a heated verbal battle between "feminists" and "anti-feminists." Neither side was willing to listen to the other's point of view, and the discussion ended up being more of an argument than a symposium.

Four students calling themselves "feminists" argued that society's present sex roles are a product of religious dogma, and that society should change to reflect the needs of the current day. The "anti-feminists" countered that society's sex roles are based on biological differences between men and women, and that these differences should be respected and upheld.

The debate continued until the audience became so heated that the moderator had to intervene. The moderator suggested that the symposium be continued at a later date, with more time for discussion and less time for argument.

The next time you review your family tree, you may want to take your sex as an exclamation point. Michigan Secretary of State Richard H. Austin has designed a pilot program to test a new driving test. The test, called "DAVE," is a new concept in driver testing. It simulates a real-world driving scenario and provides a more accurate assessment of a driver's ability.

The primary purpose of DAVE is to help society focus on the important issues of traffic safety and traffic regulations. Uncle Sam, according to Austin, "is going to be seeing a lot of traffic" in the near future. Due to the personal hazard of war and the demands of war, the need for accurate testing is crucial.

The pilot program will be conducted in a special room at the State Capitol in Lansing. Fourteen Lansing residents and two Michigan State University students will participate in the program. The program will begin on Monday.

"Once the test has been completed, the program will serve to answer a series of 10 questions relating to safety and driving regulations. After each question, the participant will receive a score, and these scores will be laterly more than five times as high as the average score of those who did not participate.

"DAVE" will take into account a person's personal characteristics, including age, gender, and other factors. It will also be used to test the knowledge and skills of those who are required to hold a driver's license.

"U" economics prods criticize price freeze

BY STEVE ALLEN
State News Staff Writer

A lengthy, sharp discussion here about how President Nixon is trying to get under the family budget, and how his own house was, by the legal San Claus, would be interesting if one could take any seriously, said Joe Segal, a former Bureau of the Budget official who upon the theme of the "U" economies earlier this year. Three times a year, the monetary authorities will meet to assess the economic situation in the world and to set the framework within which central banks operate. These meetings are part of the arrangements for the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD), which together form the main institutions of the international monetary system.

In other economic developments, U.S. Secretary of Commerce W. Edwards Demarre said that the United States had reached a "milestone" in the negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). He said that the talks were moving forward at a slower pace than hoped but that progress was being made.

Agricultural leaders in the United States expressed concern about the potential impact of a possible recession on the agricultural sector. They said that the U.S. economy was dependent on a strong agricultural sector, and that any slowdown could have serious consequences. The leaders called for continued support for agricultural programs and for policies that would help maintain a strong agricultural sector.

to draw closer together in the coming months.

After the announcement, the dollar was trading at 1.2230 marks, compared to 1.2265 marks the previous day. This was the highest level since early August, when the dollar had surged to 1.2260 marks.

The announcement was seen as a positive development for the dollar, as it showed that the U.S. government was committed to maintaining a strong currency.

the situation with the possibility of a recession this year, chairman William M. Dukes of the Council of Economic Advisers, said that the economy was "in a fragile state" and that any downturn could have serious consequences.

Dukes said that the government was taking steps to prevent a recession, but that the situation was "very uncertain" and that it was difficult to predict what would happen.

Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns said that the meeting had been "an expression of concern" and that the Federal Reserve would continue to monitor the situation closely.

BIG FOUR IN BERLIN

Talks reach no visible accord

BERLIN (AP) - The Big Four talks on monetary issues in West Berlin on Thursday were not a success, and it was announced that there would be no agreement on monetary policies for the next three months.

Chairman Byrnes of the U.S. Treasury announced that the talks had made "substantial progress" and that an agreement on monetary policies was "very possible".

However, he also said that the talks "had been a failure" and that "there is nothing to show for the meeting so far".

The talks were attended by representatives of the United States, Britain, France, and West Germany, and were aimed at reaching an agreement on monetary policies for the next three months.

The talks were held in West Berlin, where the currency of three of the four countries involved is the deutsche mark.

The talks were also attended by representatives of the European Economic Community (EEC), and were held in an atmosphere of mistrust and suspicion.

The talks were called off after two days, with no agreement reached.

The U.S. government had hoped to reach an agreement on monetary policies for the next three months, but the talks were marred by disagreements over the role of the European Economic Community (EEC) in the decision-making process.

The U.S. government had been seeking to limit the role of the EEC in the decision-making process, but the EEC had been pushing for a stronger role.

The U.S. government had also been seeking to limit the role of the European Central Bank (ECB) in the decision-making process.

The ECB had been seeking to expand its role, and the U.S. government had been seeking to limit its role.
