San Francisco (AP) — The West Coast longshoremen's union Thursday ordered its 18,000 members to return to work after a five-day strike over pay.

President Nixon is expected to veto the bill after it passes Congress this week, as anticipated, in order to maintain a freeze on the inflation rate.

In addition to his suggestion for the freeze, he also agrees to a bill amending the Fair Labor Standards Act, which would provide a head start in the president's plan to keep prices down.

Senator backs prison reform

By JOANNE FIRESTONE

State News Staff Writer

State Sen. Harry S. DeLallo, D-Battle Creek, Thursday announced that he will add state prison systems to help implement a program of prison reforms developed from a study by the Director of the Department of Corrections, John Semmens.

DeLallo, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the planned reforms were the result of an urban planning system which would do a more effective job of caring for the mentally ill.

"We have spent $600 million in the last couple of years on prisons and what do we gain?" he said. "Our research to studies and commissions and then we have nothing come from them."

"Some people said we are dumping all this money on prisons," DeLallo went on. "Have we really been doing this?"

DeLallo said Harrison's view is "true, and for the most part only used in any other state penal system."

"There are some things in this program that the state has to do in this direction," he said. "If we don't do something about this problem, they will come back to us in 10 years and say, 'You are going to have to change the system.'"

DeLallo predicted that the state's legislators will have to make changes in the prison system and that they will have to be done by 1980.

"However, I believe it is better in the long run to speed up and present the problem to our constituents in a broad way, rather than have them face a separate problem," he said.

DeLallo did not say how much money would be needed or what the state's immediate plans would be.

DeLallo said the state will benefit from prison reforms legislation.

The program will initially work in Michigan and will be developed in cooperation with the state's penal system, DeLallo said.

He then went on to say that the state would be committing $600 million to prison reforms over the next three years.

DeLallo said this is the highest amount of money that has ever been spent on any program in the state's history.

DeLallo also said that the state would benefit from prison reforms legislation.

"The program will most likely work in Michigan and will be developed in cooperation with the state's penal system," DeLallo said.

Availability of state salary figures varies

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

The availability of state salary figures varies based on the province that the state is located in, and whether the information is published on public websites or through public records requests. In some cases, the information may be available through media outlets or government websites. In other cases, the information may not be available at all, or may only be available upon request. The availability of state salary figures is important for transparency and accountability. It allows citizens and stakeholders to hold government officials accountable for their spending and salaries. However, the lack of availability can make it difficult for citizens to understand and hold their government officials accountable for their salaries.

The proposed program will be problem-oriented, focusing itself with other and other social and social science disciplines and aimed only to the computer, but be carried out in a community setting.

"We are not proposing that we turn the College of Business to an urban college in all urban colleges," said George E. Erickson, vice president of the University Research Committee. "The purpose of the proposal is to bring to real people who are state-oriented and knowledgeable about problems, and interested in bringing their expertise to urban-oriented problems.

The program would offer degrees in urban response development, urban health science, urban communication, urban social development, urban history and urban studies. The general education program of the proposed program would comply with University degree requirements concerning Green Humanity, "Human Resource Development", and "Health Sciences" for social and urban sciences. To receive a graduate degree, the student would be required to complete a program consisting of 24 hours of courses and 18 hours in the core program. A minimum of 12 of the required 34 credits must be taken within the College of Business and Urban Affairs. The program must also take 30 hours in social sciences and 30 hours in urban affairs.

The purpose of the Urban Resource Development program (URD), as stated in the proposal, provides for the development of professionals who are knowledgeable, aware of other problems, and who are interested in the strategies and tactics of urban social change. The program would be divided into three parts: urban organizations and urbanism, in which the focus is on the development and formulation of strategies and tactics, and on the teaching of strategies and tactics; the urban problems; and the development of urban social science.

Bicycle numbers soaring; MSU facilities unaltered

By MICHAEL FOX
State News Staff Writer

Winning along over the thoroughfare, the typical MSU bicycle rider takes for granted the relatively simple fact that most bicycles have come to have a comparatively small white frame without any extraordinary protection. About 1,240 bicycles have been registered with the Dept. of Public Safety as of Thursday morning, a substantial increase over the 500 or so which were reported on the first day of classes.
The figure compares with 1,653 bicycles registered last year and 1,370 the year before.
The use of bicycles has become a major means of both intercampus and intra-campus transportation, and intercampus transportation provides an opportunity for ecological experimentation. Holland's transportation, plus an opportunity for ecological experimentation, provide an opportunity for ecological experimentation.

News Commentary

The interest in bicycles, as noted in the Retailing department, has attained one point to which the bicycle facilities at MSU are inadequate. The interest is also evident among students and faculty alike. Many students, however, have never tried bicycling, and the actual bicycle facilities at MSU are probably more inadequate than the bicycle facilities at other institutions.

A special situation has been produced by Andy Paper, a graduate student in the business department, who has a non-motorized vehicle. He has observed that the bicycle facilities at MSU are inadequate, and that the bicycle facilities at other institutions are probably even more inadequate.

The program will include an explanation of the bicycle facilities at MSU, in terms of bicycle paths, and statements from some people on the situation.

Peru's rulers defy tradition in reform acts

New York. (AP) - The control of Peru's state-run mines and foreign currency, issues that have long been part of the government's efforts to modernize the economy, was transferred today to private hands.

President Silvano Vargas, in a speech marking the signing of a mining industry reform law, said the measures are designed to attract private investment and encourage foreign trade. He also announced plans to privatize the country's telecommunications and banking sectors.

The government has long been under pressure from business leaders to reduce its role in the economy and open up opportunities for foreign investment. The reform law, which was signed last week, allows private companies to bid for control of state-owned enterprises.

In other developments, the government announced plans to raise the minimum wage and increase retirement benefits for workers. It also said it would reduce the number of state employees and decrease the size of the government bureaucracy.

Agriculture Secretary Manuel de la Huerta said the reforms would help to boost economic growth and create jobs. He said the government was committed to implementing the new policies and was confident that they would be successful.

The reforms are part of a broader package of economic policies that the government has been implementing since taking office last year. These policies include measures to reduce inflation, improve the competitiveness of the economy, and increase income equality.

The government's efforts to attract foreign investment have been met with mixed reactions. Some business leaders have welcomed the reforms, while others are concerned about the potential for increased competition and the need to comply with foreign laws.

Despite these concerns, the government remains committed to implementing the reforms and continues to work with businesses to ensure their success.
