Bids bolster baby ban

ALLITTLE, Wash. (AP) — The bidding opened for a new life on Monday, when 150 people were registered to enter the second annual baby boy contest in Allittle, Wash. The contest, which is the largest of its kind in the world, offers a $1.25 million prize for the highest bidder.

"It’s not necessary for you yourself, maybe," said one bidder, who asked not to be named. "I have a friend who is registered, and they say it’s a great opportunity." The friend, who asked not to be named, also said that the baby boy contest is a great way to "bolster the local economy and bring people together."
Mideast tension mounts

Israeli officials accused Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on Sunday of "spreading war hysteria" in the Middle East and suggested he had left Egypt "left out of a conversation."

Government sources said the Egyptian president, in his speech to frontline Soviet crew members Sunday, had created a "worrying atmosphere."

The officials noted that President Hafez el-Assad of Syria also visited Syria army installations. They said this was another step aimed at increasing tensions.

U.S. territory to shrink

U.S. territory will shrink by three square miles today in Tegucigalpa, Honduras when a special emissary of President Nixon arrives to set up talks with the government.

Robert H. Flack, on a Latin American tour for Nixon, will put his name on the document to relinquish the tiny tract which 500 miles off the Honduran coast.

Formal Senate ratification still will be necessary.

Nixon 'weak, dangerous'

AF-CIO president George Meany said late Sunday that a labor group left him convinced Nixon is "weak, noisomematous man, the wrong man for the time.

Meany made the comments on NBC's "Today" to a group of AF-CIO convention delegates who greeted him in the lobby of his hotel in Miami Beach, the Times said in a dispatch out of Miami.

Nixon received a chilly reception Friday from delegates to the AF-CIO convention when he spoke about his warp agenda.

"He was shaking like this," Meany said, according to the Times. "This is a weak man, and a weak man is a dangerous man. He's weak because he's scared."

Commuters ignore pleas

Thousands of dollars in reward money was offered Sunday in Rochester, N.Y., for information leading to the arrest of a thieving of a 10-year-old girl whose plan for help were ignored by scores of inbound board commuters on a busy commuter train.

Police said the girl, Corrine Colan, was abducted while on a morning commute for her another last Tuesday. She briefly escaped the abductor's car, they added, and ran along a roadway section, waving desperately at passing motorists, none stopped.

Circuit judge indicted

The Better Act, 24-year-old Polk, who is charged with a racketeering charge which names Judge Otto Komer of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and four others in an alleged scheme involving further of racketeering stock, Chicago newspapers reported Sunday.

The Chicago Tribune, which appeared first with a copyright story in Sunday edition, said the alleged plan was for financial gain, including the Komer, a Democrat, was Illinois governor.

Teens tired of charity

Six teenagers stormed together as a family in Enfield, Mich. last week, telling them to put their feelings into their operation. They're every ours, we're every proud of them, they're every grateful.

For Gregory family, four girls and two boys whose without additional help had, at least, abroad the extreme level that Ketter, a Democrat, was Illinois governor.

Some of the most popular holiday events in the city have been neglected in recent years, some say.

The city's annual Christmas tree lighting, for example, which is held every year on the Saturday before Thanksgiving, has been scaled back significantly in recent years.

This year, the city is planning to hold a special event to mark the holiday, with the tree lighting held on Monday night, Dec. 3.

The event will include a parade down Main Street, with the tree lighting ceremony taking place in front of city hall.

Racism: black-white disease

By RICK WILBINS

On the political left, the charge of "economic imperialism" is commonly aimed at the United States. Its most distinctive characteristic is the assumption that any hegemony that benefits whites also poses a threat to blacks and other nonwhites. This assumption is widely shared by people on the left, as well as by many others. It is based on the idea that the United States is an economic empire, which is seen as exploiting and oppressing blacks and other nonwhites.

In recent years, this assumption has been increasingly challenged. For example, some scholars have argued that the United States is not an economic empire, but rather a "multinational" society, in which different countries and regions have different economic interests. This challenge has led to a growing debate about the nature and extent of economic imperialism in the United States.

According to some critics, the United States is an economic empire, in which the government and large corporations dominate the economy and exert considerable influence over other countries. This influence is often seen as benefiting whites at the expense of nonwhites. For example, it is argued that the United States has a strategy of "economic warfare," in which it uses its economic power to undermine and destroy other countries.

Other critics argue that the United States is not an economic empire, but rather a society in which different countries and regions have different economic interests. This view is based on the idea that the United States is a multicultural society, in which different groups have different economic interests and objectives. It is argued that the United States is not a unified economic entity, but rather a collection of diverse economic interests and objectives.

In sum, the debate about the nature and extent of economic imperialism in the United States is ongoing. It is likely to continue, as new evidence and arguments are brought to bear on this complex and important issue.

The situation of U.S. arms lags

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Two Senate critics of military spending today rejected Senate weapon testing and on Pentagon expenditures. Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., both said it was important to look at the U.S. defense budget in the context of international relations and the world's economic and political situation.

Javits said that the U.S. had a 90 percent capacity to produce nuclear weapons, while Sarbanes said that the U.S. had a 90 percent capacity to build nuclear weapons. Javits said that the U.S. had a 90 percent capacity to build nuclear weapons, while Sarbanes said that the U.S. had a 90 percent capacity to build nuclear weapons.

Critics cite waste

for U.S. arms lags

The Daily News, East Lansing, Michigan, November 22, 1971

The issue of military spending is a major concern for many Americans, and it is important to consider the impact of these expenditures on the economy and the world's political landscape. The Senate critics of military spending have raised concerns about the allocation of defense resources and the potential for waste and inefficiency in the U.S. defense budget.

Javits and Sarbanes have both argued that the U.S. defense budget should be viewed in the context of international relations and the world's economic and political situation. Javits has said that the U.S. had a 90 percent capacity to produce nuclear weapons, while Sarbanes has said that the U.S. had a 90 percent capacity to build nuclear weapons.

These critics of military spending have raised concerns about the potential for waste and inefficiency in the U.S. defense budget. They have argued that military spending should be redirected towards more productive and effective uses, such as education, health care, and infrastructure development.

In conclusion, the issue of military spending is a complex and important one, and it is important to consider the impact of these expenditures on the economy and the world's political landscape. The Senate critics of military spending have raised valid concerns about the allocation of defense resources and the potential for waste and inefficiency in the U.S. defense budget.
Pakistan learn cooperation

State News Staff Writer

The setting is Gwilla, East Pakistan, a rural area of one million people in the far west of Bengali and the home of a quarter million people who live in a state of war, where and how extending a hand of help has meant over one third of the country's total population to the U.S. and in the U.K.

It is in this war-torn area that the Gwilla Project, a local development agency, began in 1967 by capsules from MSU, received the first of a series of 10,000 dollars to start the school. The academy, a project of the Academy of East Pakistan, with support from the University of Michigan, is being used to study the development of educational programs for rural areas in Pakistan.

A number of people on the project have been interviewed to ascertain the feasibility and effectiveness of the programs developed. Pu" and Paul, a 10-year-old boy, who was at the Gwilla Project, said that the project has been very effective for his own schooling and for the schools in his community. However, the war continues to take its toll on the project, and the future of the project is uncertain.

Aid to refugees planned

Two MSU students have assisted in a project that helps refugees in the area. They have been helping the refugees for the past six months and have had some encouraging results. A number of refugees have been able to find work in the area, and some have been able to return to their homes. The project, which is funded by the Ford Foundation, is being used to study the effectiveness of certain programs in helping refugees.

College to hold film conference

A conference on film studies will be conducted at the State College in April (23-25, 1973) to discuss its social and educational implications of the medium.

Details of the month's major graduate and undergraduate courses are announced and whether will be known in the coming days. The conference is scheduled for the last day of the month.

State Dept. of the Surveys, Paris and Yvon Le Laron, of the University of New York, are jointly preparing a final report. The conference will be held in the college auditorium.
CLEMSON: MSU Bears’ win, despite being 15 of the past 17 for Michigan, never seemed in jeopardy, as the Spartans were unable to get by the Gopher netminder for the beginning of the contest. Zippy deflected a shot from the point by Rick Figura with 2:41 left on the clock of the final period. It was a brilliant shot.

Handicapped by injuries, the Spartans’ Bob Mattison announced. Figura was not talking about the weather or the struggle for balance with a tremendous effort on a turnover.

The Spartans scored on a few short-muscle breaks off the Minnesota power uniting and were back in the box by Alhkaing. Boyd and Nolan, before the cheers of the home crowd. After the first of two goals in the third period, Nurse took a pass from Jim Gambucci and flipped the puck to Berlin. The goal came at the 18:08 mark of the final period.

Berliner put the Spartans ahead to stay with a shot into the upper right of the MSU net at 5:27 of the third period. Spartan defensive back Ron Thome tried to keep the puck in the Minnesota area but lost his wraparound attempt at the net. The Gophers were unable to make up for Berliner’s goal and fell to Berliner’s goal, 1-0.

Northwestern quarterback Steve Juday says "it was great" to knock off Michigan State in the Big Ten opener for both teams.

Northwestern quarterback Steve Juday says "it was great" to knock off Michigan State in the Big Ten opener for both teams. Juday threw for 228 yards and a touchdown in his team's 21-10 victory over Michigan State on Saturday.

Juday, who is a senior, finished the game 19-of-31 passing for 228 yards and a touchdown. He also rushed for 31 yards and another touchdown.

Northwestern's offense was strong throughout the game, with Juday completing 19 of his 31 pass attempts for 228 yards. The Wildcats' defense held Michigan State to just 10 points, including a 10-yard touchdown run by Juday in the third quarter.

Northwestern coach Pat Fitzgerald said his team showed "some poise and maturity" in the victory over the Spartans.

"We were able to execute our game plan," Fitzgerald said. "We had a lot of confidence in what we were doing, and it showed on the field.

Michigan State coach Mark Dantonio said his team had "too many mistakes" in the loss to Northwestern.

"We didn't play well enough to win," Dantonio said. "We have to do a better job of executing our offense and our defense.

Northwestern will climb into the Top 25 rankings with the win, while Michigan State will fall to 1-1 on the season.

Meridian seeks to alter 'pot' law

OREGON (UPI) - A proposed bill to make illegal or possession of marijuana punishable by a simple $5 fine is being studied by the board of trustees of a local community college.

The proposed ordinance, submitted by Thomas Bud Hagenbuch, was referred Thursday to the law and criminal justice committee and to the human relations and minority affairs committee.

Auntie Theodore W. Stilson said he would present his views at the board meeting. He said he was concerned about the possibility of a change in the law.

Hagenbuch said he proposed the ordinance because communities are not trying to save themselves from marijuana use.

State law defines possession of marijuana as a felony and a conviction carries a 5-year prison term.

The board is expected to act on the ordinance in about 30 days.

Self-servar gas station gains customers

By JOHN L. PAVAL

If you read any article about Michigan's first self-service station, you may be a little confused. Why? Because it is not in the state of Michigan, but in Lansing. The station is located at 1304 E. Grand River Ave., and is run by Mr. and Mrs.4. K. Keller. The station was opened on October 1, 1971. The Kellers have been involved in the retail gasoline business for many years, and have been in the area for over 15 years. They have been very successful in the business, and have built up a large customer base.

The station is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. seven days a week. It is a full-service station, and offers gasoline, oil, and filters. The station also has a convenience store, which sells newspapers, magazines, and other items. The station is located on a busy street, and is very visible.

The Kellers are very pleased with the success of their station. They feel that the self-service option is very popular with customers, and that it has helped to increase their sales. They also feel that the convenience of the store is a big draw for customers.

Russian loses job after seeking visa

MOSCOW (AP) — The director of the Russian radio and television commission was fired after a government minister's daughter was found dead in her apartment, an official said Tuesday.

An investigation is underway to determine whether there was any foul play in the death of Lyudmila Krylova, who was found Saturday in her home.

The official, who asked not to be named because the investigation is ongoing, said Tuesday that the death was being looked into by police and prosecutors.

The minister's daughter was a top government official and had been named last month as the new head of the commission. She was fired Monday after a series of problems and allegations.

The commission is responsible for oversight of radio and television in Russia, including the regulation of broadcasting and the enforcement of laws.

The firing came just a week after Krylova was named as the new chief of the commission, which oversees the country's media and entertainment industries.

The death of her father, who was a prominent figure in Russian politics, added to the ongoing investigation.

The official said Tuesday that the investigation is still ongoing and that no conclusions have been reached.

The minister's daughter was a member of the commission for several years and had been serving as its acting head since last month.

The commission is currently under scrutiny over its handling of the case of a famous Russian scientist who was found dead in his apartment.

Bank tests role of credit cards

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The credit-card industry has added a new twist to its push to increase the number of Americans who use debit cards instead of cash or checks.

The move has been driven by a desire to reduce the amount of money spent on credit-card transactions, which can be expensive for banks and credit card issuers.

The new program, called the "One Card" program, offers a single card that can be used for all types of transactions.

It also includes a feature that allows customers to transfer money from their bank accounts to the card and use it to pay bills or make purchases.

The company behind the program, First Data, hopes to sign up millions of new customers in the next year.

The program is being tested in several states, including Ohio, where it was launched in September.

Life insurance for an MSU college student invariably entails which of the following:

(a) Annoying phone calls from a persistent salesman

(b) Being subjected to a high-pressure sales talk in your apartment

(c) Making monthly payments of $10 to $20 that you really can't afford

(d) All of the above

(e) None of the above

"It's the right answer in most cases. But if you knew about MemberLife, you'd probably answer 'a' because you can buy MemberLife through the mail. You never have to talk to a salesman. And it costs $19 a year...not $10 a month."

MemberLife is to the point that the insurance doesn't cost a bundle. It's available only to Auto Club members, and it costs you $10 a year, plus a first-year $2 enrollment fee.

To enroll in MemberLife, you must be a member of the Michigan Automobile Club of Michigan, and you must have owned your vehicle for at least six months.
