Aides to study S. Viet military needs

HINGTON (AP) - North SHINGTON (AP) — North m's offensive gains in the face of allied air superiority are raising bubts about the effectiveness of the rin Vietnam. Meanwhile, with military situation worsening, ary of Defense Melvin R. Laird da top - level team of logistics lists to Vietnam Wednesday to the whether Saigon requires ine whether Saigon requires merican military aid.

Both military officers and civilian attrition of the North Vietnameseheavy bombardment of objectives like An Loc defense officials are expressing concern privately about the air war and there are reports that key members of the Armed Services Committees of Congress are beginning to ask critical questions.

Some Air Force officers, while agreeing there is reason to question, argue that the issue still is in doubt and that over the long haul airpower will do its job against the North Vietnamese by weapons and supplies, as well as killing their troops.

For quite some time, critics have questioned whether U.S. bombing of the Ho Chi Minh trail was really knocking out a big part of the North Vietnamese plies being trucked through southern Laos.

The ability of the North Vietnamese in this offensive to mount heavy near Saigon and to bring 40 - ton tanks that far south tends to support the critics' skepticism.

But perhaps the biggest source of dismay to advocates of airpower has been the apparent inability of U.S. Air Froce, Navy, Marine and South Vietnamese fighter - bombers and bombers to stem North Vientam's offensive across the demilitarized zonea conventional attack through relatively open country with tanks, self propelled and towed artillery, supply trucks and other heavy equipment.

Back in Washington, Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the civilian assistants and accompanied by five generals, will consider both Saigon's military needs and what additional measures may be needed to protect the remaining U.S. troops.

They will determine, Friedheim said, what weapons of Saigon's hard - hit troops will be replaced as well as what new arms may be needed to counter "new and sophisticated Soviet weapons."

Friedheim said it is possible the South Vietnamese can get along with what they have. But he added that if new weapons are needed it may be necessary to dispatch more American advisers to train the South Vietnamese in their use.

FILE FORMAL PETITION

Meanwhile, Republican congressional leaders at the White House quoted Adm. Thomas Moorer Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as saying "only time will tell" the outcome of the North Vietnamese offensive in Vietnam.

House Republican Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan said he emerged from the session with a sense of cautious optimism, adding "it is my impression that time is on our side.'

Friedheim would not speculate on what new weapons the U.S. could send over in time to counter Hanoi's invasion. But these are likely to include more modern antitank guns and long range artillery which could be airlifted across the Pacific in a matter of days.

Until now, he said, Laird has been satisfied that the Vietnamization program had provided Saigon with adequate military supplies and equipment.

spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the group, headed by one of Laird's top civilian assistants and accompanied by in far north altered

SAIGON (AP) -- The Saigon government, shaken by the debacle at Quang Tri, changed commands in the far north Wednesday, putting the defenses there in the hands of a general who is highly regarded by the Americans.

Lt. Gen. Ngo Quang Troung, who has been commander of the southernmost military region 4, including the Mekong Delta, was placed in command of the northern region in the hope he could reverse the fortunes of battle.

Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuam Lam, who commanded in northern military region 1, was called to Saigon and presumably got the news of his dismissal from President Nguyen Van Thieu. The South Vietnamese command said the changes were made on direct orders from Thieu.

The MSU Faculty Associates (MSUFA) filed a petition with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission Wednesday calling for a unionization election here.

Calhoun Collier, president of the MSUFA, announced that the collective bargaining contender had collected enough signatures - over the 30 per cent requirement — to file the petition.

The group met in March with the administration and informally agreed upon a definition of the collective bargaining unit.

The next step in the path toward a collective bargaining election is another such meeting. Any other interested parties will be invited to attend the meeting, particularly the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) which has also been actively soliciting signatures on authorization cards from the faculty.

Sigmun Nosow, AAUP president, said Wednesday that his organization does not have 30 per cent of their proposed unit now, but will by the time the employment relations commission schedules a meeting.

"We will challenge them (MSUFA)," he said. "By the time of the meeting, there will be two organizations who have enough cards.'

"To stir up public controversy," a group of local residents introduced a counter city budget, calling for a shift in East Lansing spending priorities at Tuesday's public hearing on the budget.

Ann Markusen, an East Lansing graduate student in economics, presented to the East Lansing City Council the counter - budget which recommended that changes be made in the allocations for police, parks and recreation and personnel hiring. She explained that she introduced it to "stir up public controversy, because controversy is good." The public hearing, one of the longest on the budget in years, drew about 50 people to city hall including representatives from various groups petitioning for funds from the proposed budget.

Hoover lies in state

Receiving an honor bestowed on few, J. Edgar Hoover lay in the Capitol Rotunda Wednesday - a flag on his coffin and a wreath from his President at blacks on campus. Though his feet.

Some of the highest officials of the land he served so fiercely assembled to pay tribute to the memory of the man who directed the FBI for 48 years.

The FBI director was found dead beside his bed Tuesday morning by a maid. His death was attributed to hypertensive cardiovascular disease, and possibly a heart attack.

The 77 - year - old Hoover never married. He leaves nieces and nephews.

Gray interim FBI head

The White House announced Wednesday that Asst. Atty. Gen. L. Patrick Gray III, a longtime friend of President Nixon, will double in brass as acting director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation – at least until the November election.

Gray, who has no law enforcement experience, currently is being considered by the Senate to be deputy attorney general. The White House said his nomination for that post will be withdrawn.

Price freeze called

The Price Commission Wednesday froze all prices of more than half of America's largest firms and said they face price cuts and possible fines unless they quickly file overdue reports.

Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson Jr. said nearly 1,600 firms haven't filed required reports that were due last Monday.

All of these firms are technically in violation of Price Commission regulations now. Grayson said each firm would be notified individually and given a grace period of five working days to file the reports.

AMC sales increase

American Motors Corp. on Wednesday reported its strong recovery is continuing with profits of $12.96 million in the first half of its fiscal year, the best in seven years.

AMC's profits are coming on the strength of greatly increased new car sales. The company said Wednesday it sold 27,017 cars in April, up 34 per cent from last year. In the first four months of the year, AMC unit sales are up 19.4 per cent.

Hepatitis relief hinted

The government reported Wednesday a possible new lead toward developing a vaccine against "serum hepatitis," a liver - inflaming malady transmissible by blood transfusions and contaminated medical syringes and needles.

Serum hepatitis is one of the two forms of hepatitis – both presumed caused by viruses – which together strike up to 70,000 Americans a year. The serum type is responsible for about 30,000 of the cases and about 3,000 deaths.

Miami bids for GOP

The Miami Beach City Council agreed by a single vote Wednesday to submit a bid for the 1972 Republican National Convention. A GOP official said he expected the party would switch the site from San Diego, Calif.

Concerned that a massive influx of demonstrators would threaten peace in the resort city, the council also urged the federal government to provide an elite 1,000 - member "convention peace corps," the request came after councilmen voted down a proposal that the bid be contingent on approval of the peacekeeping group.

Riddle found not guilty

By CAROL THOMAS State News Staff Writer

A verdict of not guilty was returned Wednesday in the alleged assault and battery case against Sam Riddle, Flint senior, in East Lansing district court.

Attributing his decision to "reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the defendant," District Court Judge Maurice Schoenberger pronounced the defendant not guilty of the charges that he allegedly assaulted an MSU police officer early in April.

Judge Schoenberger also cited various discrepancies between the testimonies of the witnesses that led him to his decision.

Since many extraneous charges were brought up in the trial along with the original assault and battery charge, Schoenberger listed in his closing remarks the aspects of the testimony that he was not including in his consideration of guilt or Early in the trial, Riddle

As a defense witness, Riddle called Clifford Ashe, an ex - MSU policeman who left the force two days days ago over what he termed "personality differences with certain persons on the force" in his testimony.

In response to questioning, Ashe said that he thought Riddle had been subjected to a different set of rules than white students at MSU.

The questioning centered around the issue of whether black or minority students were being "harassed" by campus police. Judge Schoenberger halted the line of questioning because he said it did not pertain to the Ashe also testified that he thought Riddle had been harassed by MSU police in various ways before the incident that provoked his arrest. Ashe said that when Riddle purchased a new car, each patrol officer was informed as to its description through "patrol ranks." He also said that when Riddle was seen driving down the street, it was common practice to run a warrant check on him to see if he had any outstanding parking tickets or arrest warrants.

that spectators keep control of their emotions when the verdict was announced. The spectators made it as far as the hallway.

Judge Schoenberger announced that he thought both Riddle and the arresting officer, Patrolmen Robert Sybrandy, behaved "ridiculously," in the original traffic violation incident, but that was not Using what he called "cheap hindsight," Judge Schoenberger said that the officers could have avoided the entire confrontation by serving Riddle's citation to him at a later date and they also should have obtained an arrest warrant from the prosecutor.

"They knew Riddle didn't like police, but I think there were problems with both parties," Schoenberger said.

Some tenants decided to withhold half of April's rent for the same general reasons - they were paying for services which were not being rendered. They also wanted to know where their security deposits were.

Halstead replied with eviction notices. But to make matters more difficult for Halstead, the tenants' enterprising lawyer, Kenneth Smith, noticed a slight discrepancy on the eviction notices. The notices read "Halstead Management for Haslett Arms vs. . . ," a nonexistent legal entity. A hearing is scheduled Tuesday to

Of course, landlord - tenant problems in the East Lansing area are not the exclusive province of Halstead Management. Other management companies and a number of owner - managed apartment complexes have also come under fire. And it would be foolish to ignore the abuses some tenants have heaped on individual landlords. The Halstead situation is just a symptom of the current lack of safeguards for both landlord and tenant. TRB FROM WASHINGTON

Nixon seen as king-president

By RICHARD LEE STROUT

If you want to know who's regarded as king around town these days, drop in on a congressional hearing where an administration official is testifying. It's not quite a case - yet - of l'etat, c'est moi. But from the way the officials talk, you would think that the only person in Washington with any ideas, any proposals is Mr. Nixon.

There is almost a standard format now for any administration testimony. Start off with several words of praise for the President and his accomplishments. Then on to the specific proposal. Whether it's a broad foreign policy or some insignificant grant for free buses in a New England town, it is something "the President proposes" with the accent always on the word "the."

Even cabinet members are indulging in this form of self - effacement. Take Secretary of State Rogers of Defense Secratary Laird the other day before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Everything we're doing in Vietnam - from Vietnamization to bombing - was something "President Nixon proposed," which is probably fair enough; he deserves the credit or the blame. But if a senator dares to raise a question challenging the policy, the customary answer is "but President Nixon has proposed" - as if the mere invocation of the name answered the not hesitating on occasion even to say "I think" or "My department believes." Maybe the depersonalization and demotion of the cabinet is just another symptom of the way we're heading. With the possible exceptions of John Connally and Melvin Laird, there doesn't seem to be a strong man in his own right on the cabinet. More are just ciphers on Capitol Hill, and around the White House they obviously are outranked by the Palace Guard.

The trend toward the king-president didn't start with this administration. The isolation of a president surrounded by a bunch of yes - men was something that bothered George Reedy, whose "The Twilight of the Presidency" is undoubtedly the most perceptive book yet to come out of the Johnson

Hessian guard uniforms that were tried out on the White House policemen or the way the military honor guard has been turned into something out of medieval pageantry. Those are amusing but peripheral. Nor is the problem completely one of the way the "Palace Guard" has grown by leaps and bounds in the Nixon administration, as Rep. Morris Udall pointed out in a report last week to the House Civil Service and Post Office Committee. The emergence of a large group of policy makers in the White House not responsive or responsible to Congress raises some serious constitutional questions of checks and balances. But if that's the way Nixon want to run the administration, it's his choice, and maybe he has been driven to it by the administration. And before Johnson, Kennedy and Eisenhower reveled in the royal trappings that have come to decorate the White House. In retrospect, Harry Truman seems an aberration, the way he used to venture out the White House gates to walk down Pennsylvania Avenue.

Still, the trend seems to have picked up speed under Nixon. It's not just the supineness of the rest of the bureaucracy. Ultimately there is a check; the people can throw him out of office if they don't like the way he is doing the job.

What is bothersome - and this doesn't apply to Nixon alone - is the reverential attitude that is growing up within the executive branch, and Congress too, toward the presidency. The other day, Joe Clark, who was not above using the word "I" when he was in the Senate, did some counting and found that President Nixon used "I" or "my" 315 times in the 215 pages of his State of the World message this year, "That is nothing new," responded Sen. Fulbright. "This is typical of all leaders of great nations. It assumes the absolute power they think is given to them by virtue of their office."

Maybe the trend is universal, but within this country it is directly related to the way the president's powers are being exercised and expanded. Take Nixon's decision to retaliate for the North Vietnamese "invasion" by bombing Hanoi and Haiphong Sen, Tom Eagleton undoubtedly hit an important psychological motivation when he observed: "The President's power has been threatened, and thereis nothing more vengeful than the 'wounded pride of a king.'"

Or take the administration's expanding use of executive privilege to keep information from Congress Admittedly there is a historical conflict involved, but even the underlings now seem to feel that somehow the President is going to be dethroned if even the most routine bit of information is given Congress.

One of the problems is that Congress, which after all was supposed to keep the President in check, doesn't really object to the majestic ways of the White House. The barons on Capitol Hill find the present arrangement convenient. They pay tribute and get favors in return. There are some members of Congress so anxious to be part of the court that the White House has found that an invitation can influence their votes. Members of Congress who may want to offer criticism, not homage, seem to fall strangely silent when they are ushered by the Palace Guard to see the President, in itself an increasingly rare occurrence. Take Mike Mansfield He probably sees the President privately more often than any other member of Congress. But he seldom offers the advice and criticism that he does so freely and emotionally on the Senate floor. His attitude is that in the presence of the President he should not say anything unless asked, and from all reports the President seldom asks Mansfield anything much over the breakfast table except how he would like his eggs cooked.

is getting confused with reverence. It would be encouraging, as well as god for the future of the country, if on occasion, through word or deed, Congress would tell that man that he has no clothes on.

This provision will severely cripple her already stumbling petition drive, Ms. Beckett says. The drive thus far has collected only 40,000 of the 300,000 signatures needed to put the issue on the ballot.

Rep. Joseph Swallow, R -Alpena, agrees that the primary bill rider was aimed at Ms. Beckett's campaign and also his unicameral petition drive.

Rep. Michael A. Dively, R-Traverse City, said Tuesday night there is a tremendous amount of youth input into the White House at the subcabinet level.

Dively, speaking before the MSU Student Committee to Re-elect President Nixon, noted the average age of White House staff members is under 30.

"Sometimes they're listened to, and sometimes they're not, but their voice is heard," he said.

Dively said that Nixon has responded in a variety of areas which are of interest to young people. "Many college student are totally unaware of what has been done," he said. He cited Nixon's Environmental Protection Agency, the downward thrust of the Vietnam War and the push for an all-volunteer army as examples. Dively pointed out that Nixon has lived up to the promises made in the 1968 election, but has had the flexibility to adapt to a situation when necessary.

"Consistency is not always a virtues," he said. Voter identification is the major focus of the student committee, said Dan Behringer, Lansing senior and spokesman for the group. Behringer said a phone and mail campaign is being conducted to identify potential voters and supporters of the president.

'Gadgets' aid treatment

By CAROL THOMAS State News Staff Writer

Like the television program "Emergency," the technology involved in emergency medical care has much to offer Michigan's ambulance and rescue system in the near future.

At one time, many gadgets used to save lives in hospital emergency rooms were either too large or too expensive to carry in an ambulance. Newer equipment, however, is priced within the range of ambulance companies, so that the patient's condition can be tested or diagnosed on the way to the hospital.

These newest technical advances come generally in the areas of diagnosis and communication equipment. Portable electrocardiographs, as well as radio equipment to transmit the readings to a waiting doctor, are available for ambulances.

In communications, radio relay systems between the ambulance and the scaled down in size and hospital emergency room makes it possible for the ambulance attendant to inform the hospital when a patient will arrive. If surgery or specialized care will be needed, the hospital can have it waiting instead of beginning preparations when the patient arrives at the emergency room.

"This new telemetering equipment will make it easier for emergency room staffs," said James E. Holcomb, area Civil Defense director. "They won't be surpirsed anymore by large scale emergencies.

"When a large number of patients is coming in, the necessary staff and equipment can be waiting," he concluded.

Presently, communications between ambulance and hospital must be handled by the ambulance or fire dispatcher. The ambulance calls the dispatcher by radio, then the dispatcher calls the hospital emergency room by telephone and relays the message.

Simple idea in thought, but in practice the relaying of messages sometimes can't be accomplished by the time the ambulance deposits the victim at the hospital door.

For example, if a Lansing fireman dials the number of Sparrow Hospital, he gets the main switchboard. He asks for the emergency room, and since nobody there usually sits beside the phone waiting for it to ring, it can ring for quite awhile before it is answered and

"It can take as long as five minutes if the hospital is really tied up," said one dispatcher. Holcomb, who oversees Civil Defense emergency operations, said most of these new innovations can improve emergency health care and the quality of the service immensely.

"Sooner or later you get down to the matter of money," he said, " and everything is expensive." "We hope to have our new radio system operational in at least one hospital by Fall, but you can never tell," said Barratt. "If the federal government gives us the go - ahead, we'll get it in as fast as we can."

The Married Students Union has completed the petition drive it began a month ago in an effort to become the governing unit of University married couples.

Dynamics of sex courses examined

By BARBARA PARNESS State News Staff Writer

Teaching human sexuality on television to hundreds to students in one term may be more efficient, but MSU will continue to offer live undergraduate courses in at least three departments.

Second of two articles

Psychology 290, Human Sexuality, taught on close security TV to more than 1,700 students this term, is only the latest in a series of efforts MSU has made to teach students about sexuality.

Andrew M. Barclay, asst. professor of psychology and instructor for the TV class, said he hopes to offer the TV course each fall and spring term to 2,500 students. Psychology 290 would be offered live winter term, he said.

In addition to the Dept. of Psychology, sexuality courses are currently offered in Justin Morrill College (JMC) and the College of Human Ecology.

Many people do not realize that MSU has been teaching human sexuality courses since 1967. because sexuality courses taught on a regular basis have been introduced quietly at MSU.

The first human sexuality course at MSU was team-taught winter term 1967, in JMC by Sandra Warden, associate professor in JMC, and Alex J. Cade, professor of counseling and personnel services.

Since 1967, Ms. Warden said she has taught at least three sections of human sexuality a year with 35 students in each

Sociology link

"I teach it from the viewpoint of social psychology. I think there's a strong sociological component — what do we know about human behavior in this area. Than we move to human dynamics and interaction - games people play," Ms. Warden explained.

She said she deals with the anatomy of sex and sexual mechanics early in the course and then gives an ungraded quiz on the material. Then the class discusses interpersonal dynamics - "sexuality as it includes the whole person," she said. Warden said she believes every college student should take a sexuality course but wouldn't want it to be a required course.

Tonight is

QUART NIGHT:

Now Appearing: Flying Home

"I'd like to see every student take a course in this during his or her college career. But, God-forbid, I'd ever have to teach anything as emotion - laden as that to someone who's required to be there," she said.

Ms. Warden said that since 1967, the dominant theme in the class has changed in response to changes in the social environment. In the early classes, students wanted to discuss the merits of premarital sex and the effects on a relationship, she said.

Then they became interested in individual values and the right of others to impose their values on an individual. About a year and a half ago, Ms. Warden said students wanted to talk mostly about male and female homosexuality. Now the main topic is women's liberation as it affects both men and women, she said.

The main stimulus for expanding sex education at MSU was a human sexuality colloguy held on campus winter term, 1969. The 10-week program attracted more than 20 nationally - known speakers to campus and 34,000 people attended the public lectures offered during the colloguy.

During the colloquy, two courses in human sexuality were offered to undergraduates - IDC 400V and Great Issues. Nearly 30 faculty members from departments all over campus taught sections of 15 to 20 students in the IDC class.

Classes open

"This class demonstrated that human sexuality is a legitimate academic offering within the University that should be open to all majors," Rev. Don War, cochairman of the colloguy and director of United Ministries in Higher Education, said in a recent interview.

"This was saying that you don't have to be in one area or another to legitimate your participation in this kind of class," Ward said.

He said the colloguy came about because of talks with students in residence halls and off-campus living units as well as urging from some segmens of the public to provide sex education. "We were getting letters saying 'its' the University's responsibility to help my son or daughter make decisions in our more permissive society," Ward said. "People wanted to know why the University wasn't responding. This opened the way to persuade the University to have this kind of program.'

An anthology of the public lectures from the colloguy is being used by students in Barclay's TV class. The lectures were also videotaped and have been rented to groups throughout the state by Continuing Education Service. Both Barclay and Warden served as group leaders for the

The first regular sexuality course developed following the colloguy was Family and Child Sciences (FCS) 365, Human Sexuality in the Family, taught by Eleanor S. Morrison, instructor in FCS. Between 100 and 150 students have enrolled each term since winter term 1970, Morrison

Impetus given

"I think in our case the colloguy gave the impetus and legitimization to go ahead and teach a course that is particularly appropriate to this department," she said. However, Ms. Morrison said the class has attracted students from many departments across the campus, not only from the College of Human Ecology.

students to look at and come to terms with their own sexuality in light of a whole bunch of readings and interaction with peers," she said.

Ms. Morrison said she does not lecture much in the class. Each class is divided into groups of five or six students with a student leader for each group. The leaders are enrolled in a small group dynamics class.

She said the class has been affected by the women's liberation movement.

"I've seen women much more active, overt, articulate in class and in countering men and in taking a position that is essentially women's liberation. I've also seen a number of men taking a different position not wanting to be male chauvinists," she said.

While Ms. Morrison was developing FCS 365, Donald Grummon, professor of psychology, and Barclay began to talk about a class in human sexuality in the psychology department. The result was Psychology 290, team-taught by Grummon and Barclay until this term when Barclay took to the TV alone

Small groups

"I don't like that large group stuff," Grummon said in a recent interview. "I feel that one of the more valuable parts of the class is the small group discussion groups. Ideally I'd like to have small discussion groups with 15 people."

Though the public has not reacted adversely to human

"It's primarily an attempt to help undergraduate sexuality courses at MSU to date, some educators in in teaching and planning the courses fear the effect public exposure of what the University is doing.

"Unfortunately, it's still something to snicker about one's taking or teaching a course in human sexuality." Morrison said.

But beyond laughter, the educators fear that legislature might threaten to cut off funds completely by these programs or force the University to limit the offer to only one department.

Dr. Amold Werner, director of psychiatric services the University Health Center, said he is surprised that pen fear public outcry against the classes. Werner counsels students with sexual problems.

"I'm surprised that people think that. It's been experience that many people are relieved that respons educators are providing accurate information in a health setting. I think many of the programs in this school looked upon with favor," Werner said.

He said he believes it is good for the University to of sexuality courses in different departments with different

"I have a very strong bias that information can pres difficulties and that courses in human sexuality can bend people. But obviously, people have to register forth classes and people who have problems may be the last to so," he said.

Drama vivid, moving

"This Bird of Dawning Singeth all Night Long," a two-character play set in the 1950s, may turn out to be the most exciting play presented in the Black Art Company's Symposium of Black Theater.

"This Bird of Dawning" involves an upper-class black prostitute and her prodigal 'poor country' sister. Linda Calloway, Detroit sophomore, portrays the high - society sister, Anne, who in addition to her neuroses is a schizophrenic.

Marian Cooks, Detroit junior, is convincing in her role as Nancy, the tattered, ignorant and boisterous twin sister.

Both Ms. Books and Ms. Calloway are strong in their roles as they bickered and fought to the play's end. The performances were natural type-casting.

Though there were only two characters in "This Bird of Dawning," the casting reportedly took weeks.

The tough direction of Les Washington and Rosemary Messenger, the selective casting and months of rehearsal were reflected in the play. "This Bird" did not contain the small mistakes and performing stiffness evident in most amateur performances.

Brig. Gen. Vu Van Giai was relieved as commander of the 3rd Infantry Division that was badly battered at Quang Tri. An announcement said he was put under investigation.

The 3rd Division, formed only last year, received the full shock when the North Vietnamese swept across the demilitarized zone March 30 to launch the spring offensive. It quickly abandoned frontier bases and fell back to Quang Tri, where it was shattered in the battle for that northernmost provincial capital.

The loss of Quang Tri opened the way for a North Vietnamese advance on Hue, the old imperial capital 32 miles to the south.

Disorganized government troops were still finding their way into Hue. Commanders tried, often futilely, to pull them into units to join in the defense of the former seat of along the My Chanh River defense line 20 - 25 miles north

There were reports of clashes six miles southwest of Hue, but no major thrust was reported by North Vietnamese troops coming down from Quang Tri. Associated Press correspondent Richard Blystone reported from the northern front that it had been relatively quiet and that government positions appeared fairly well stabilized defeated Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in Tuesday's other spotlight primary.

The results confirmed the positions of Humphrey and McGovern as the front runners in the Democratic presidential race as they headed for confrontations next week in Nebraska, May 16 in Michigan, May 23 in Oregon and June 6 in California.

Humphrey talked of bypassing some of the intervening tests and going straight to California, which will award 271 delegates - 18 per cent of the 1,509 needed for nomination — to the winner of its primary.

Besides leading for the 38 at - large posts, Humphrey was ahead in nine of the 23 Ohio congressional districts, with 42 the Women's Center and for the older person's program. were among those asking for monetary consideration at the 21/2 hour hearing. City Manager John Patriarche pointed out that a correction had to be made in the proposed budget which was presented April 10 to the council.

He explained that the city tax rate of $17.17 per thousand had been increased to $17.34 due to a change in the assessed evaluation of the city. The assessment had been estimated by the city to be $126 million but the Local Board of Review finalized the figure as $124,967,770.

Ms. Markusen, called the proposed funding for police "excessive." She suggested that a 20 per cent cut in the police force could be worked out as East Lansing is "a fairly peaceful community." In the proposed budget, 20.8 per cent of the general fund is allocated to the police.

She also asked that all funds be eliminated for the Metro Squad. The proposed budget allocates $8,192 as the city's share for the squad.

Comparing East Lansing to other communities, she noted that the city's 4 per cent devoted to parks and recreation is "extremely low statewide' and recommended an increase.

Volunteer workers to substitute for the hiring of full - time people would save money, she continued, adding that in the past volunteers had been

"tremendously successful." Nelson Brown, 1104 N. Hagadorn Road, one of the counter - budget workers, urged city council to encourage and provide subsidies for grassroots groups in community action, such as the Drug Education Center.

He noted that "if the government does not

Terry Johnson from the Listening Ear, the 24-hour funding for the crisis center located on 547 East Grand River Ave., asked council for a yearly subsidy of $2,700. He also asked council to help Listening Ear locate new facilities which it estimated would cost $4,100 a year, and to continue the subsidy if new facilities were found.

Penny Harris and Maureen May, two representatives form the Women's Center, 547 Grand River Ave., requested a monthly subsidy of $225.

Ms. Harris said, "women don't have a place to go with other women to develop their cultural skills." She saw the women's center as filling this need, and indicated that a crisis center, a school or a drop - in center for women were all possibilities if funding were available.

He also urged that he beautification of the central business district not be decreased form the planning commission's recommendation of $46,000.

Mike Cecka, one of the bike path developers, also urged council to provide enough money for the first priority paths. "The first priority paths are a complete system in themselves, and half a path would just inhibit their use," he said.

Representatives for the older persons program and for the proposed Environmental Quality Commission also asked council for budget considerations.
