Voters OK $1 tax on PIRGIM

By JANE SEABERRY State News Staff Writer

The Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) by a 3 to 1 margin, won the $1 per student per term tax question Wednesday.

The tax, approved by a 2,374 to 753 margin, will now be collected each term, beginning next fall. However, Harold Buckner, ASMSU chairman, said he will challenge the results on the grounds that some of the voters were not eligible.

Charles Massoglia, elections commissioner, said that 1,600 or more discrepancies must be found for the results to be questionable.

"There shouldn't be any problem. but we have to check just to make sure," Massoglia said.

To be an eligible voter in the PIRGIM election, a student must carry at least 10 credits, Massoglia, said. Buckner said that some students with eight and nine credits voted.

However, Buckner's challenge will not affect the representative elections also held Wednesday. The four remaining seats on the ASMSU board were filled as a result of the election.

Van Tassell criticizes reappointment policies

By BARBARA PARNESS State News Staff Writer

Eileen R. Van Tassell, asst. professor of natural science, charged Wednesday that decisions not to renew her contract were not based on her teaching, research or public service records and that procedures followed in her department violated the "spirit of due process."

The charges were made at a hearing before the University College Faculty Affairs Committee (FAC) which ran more than five hours Wednesday in Wonders Kiva. No date has been set for a final decision by FAC.

Van Tassell is appealing the Dept. of Natural Science's decision not to renew her contract, which was set to expire in August. The trustees in May gave her a one - year contract extension to allow exhaustion of all University appeal channels.

Van Tassell called 11 witnesses to testify at the open hearing which began at 3 p.m., recessed at 5:30 p.m. and reconvened at 7 p.m. The audience ranged from a peak of more than 100 persons in midafternoon to about 50 spectators at the evening

Emanuel Hackel, department chairman and the other party in the dispute, called no witnesses during the session. Van Tassell, Hackel and the witnesses were questioned by the nine committee members based on written statements prepared earlier by the two parties outlining the dispute.

The FAC decision, based on majority vote, will be advisory to Edward A. Carlin, dean of University College. Carlin can decide to overturn or affirm the department decision based on the FAC recommendation.

If FAC denies the appeal, Van Tassell can appeal at the University level under the new grievance procedures approved by the trustees in May. These procedures are expected to be operable by the fall.

The department originally voted not to renew Van Tassell's contract in February 1970. The contract was set to expire in August 1971, but in April

He plans to announce his candidacy sometime in the next two weeks for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 6th District. The seat is presently held by Charles E. Chamberlain.

"Government really can't be trusted," Carr said.

Carr, 29, is a member of the state and national boards of the American Civil Liberties Union. He spent two years as an assistant state attorney general in Michigan and was an administrative assistant in the attorney general's office previous to that.

He said he expects to run uncontested for the Democratic nomination in August, which will leave him with more energy and money for the fall campaign

Carr stressed the principle of accountability in government and said that, if elected, he would push for legislative reform that would require congressmen to disclose not only their voting records, but committee activities and personal ties that might affect their legislative performance.

Even if reforms are not successful, Carr said he will adopt a policy of keeping his own personal legislative records. On the issue of the war in Vietnam, he said that many of the nations economic problems were tied to the war "We have to get out now," he said.

Too much strife in Ulster

As the province of Ulster already present in the hand in decision making by nears the brink of an all out civil war between Protestants and Catholics, the Official wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) has made a commendable move towards peace.

The Officials recently announced that they only will reserve the right of self-defense and the defense of areas against attack by British military and Protestant militants.

Contrary to the official pronouncement, the Provisional wing of the IRA said that it would continue its campaign until Britain declared an amnesty for all political prisoners and withdrew her troops from the streets of Ulster.

The Official wing, in its announcement, asserted that the bombing campaign of the Provisionals could provoke a civil war.

While the most desirable goal would be to give all of Ireland back to the Irish and end foreign domination, the present hope is just for peace for all the people.

The Official wing of the IRA has made a most impressive stride towards establishing peace in Ulster. How far their action will go in accomplishing peace remains debatable.

We can only hope that in time the province will return to a realistic attitude toward religion. Killings for the sake of religious affiliation never serves the spirit of Christian brotherhood. The funeral directors and other scavengers of doom seem to be the only ones profiting from the vicious battle. Can we let the macabre forces of

School board merits votes

The editors of the State News earlier this week decided that this newspaper would not editorially endorse candidates for the East Lansing School Board in the June 12 election.

I disagree with this decision of the editors not to endorse school board candidates. My personal opinion is that the State News should take an active interest in recommending the election of certain candidates to the East Lansing School Board.

Actually, the June 12 school board race presents an illustration of a philosophical issue is whether the State News should remain a University - based newspaper, or expand into the East Lansing community. I take the position that the State News should report and editorialize the local community including the school board.

John Borger, State News editor - in chief, is among the editors who favor an emphasis on University rather than East Lansing coverage. Broger argues, as I understand it, that our predominately student readership does not concern itself with nonstudent issues like the East Lansing School Board.

I consider myself a citizen of East Lansing and a resident of Ingham County.

People need to identify with a local community in order to feel a part of the society. For some individuals, the local community does not extend further than a residence hall floor or a residential street. Oftentimes, these small geographical "communities" provide the basis for social interaction, mutual protection, and social services the foundation of civilization.

Beyond the street neighborhoods and other small geographical groupings, the units of city government exist to unify and service people in such things as police protection, water supply, garbage collection, and so forth. As the cities have become less and less distinct geographically, the psychological need of people to identify with a certain area has not diminished. In other words, I desire to identify myself with the community where I live most of the time: East Lansing. I vote in East Lansing, pay taxes through rent, and participate in other ways with the local community. Indeed, my identification with the local area in the past year has shifted from being an MSU student to being an East Lansing

UNS DON'T OLL PEOPLE-

resident — this shift in identification metaphysical one, for I still am ju much a student now as a year ago.

Part of my identification with Lansing includes an interest in public school system. I believe American school systems have n faults, and as a citizen I am interest the local school system where I live interest is not because I have child East Lansing schools - for I prob never will have children in East La schools - but rather because philosophical concern about educ and children.

'U' should aid day care center

By KENNETH AND MARILYN OLSON

Mason graduate students

A serious problem exists on this campus about which very few people are aware. The problem specifically affects married students with children, but certain aspects of the problem may indirectly affect a great many others.

The Married Student's Activities Unit (MSAU), more commonly understood to be the day care center in Spartan Village (on Cresent Road), is in serious financial trouble. In order to maintain its services next year (just as this year) financial aid is imperative. Parents of the children enrolled cannot be asked to pay much more: a full time child's parents must pay over $100 per month for a child's care. For most student parents this represents a very sizable proportion of our monthly income.

MSAU was financed by the University, and it stands on University property; the University has provided the married student community with a day care center which provides care for 100 children (in terms of expressed need, this is not large enough). The parents are paying the University back for the opportunity of day care, as well as attempting to provide adequate funds to run an effective program for the children. In addition, the center provides numerous on campus laboratory experiences for students from a varying number of disciplines. The relationship is reciprocal. We, therefore, implore the University administration, and the board of trustees to help us keep the center running. We need day care; we need to the whole issue of day care. particularily on the national level. We at MSU have the potential to illustrate just how quality day care can be a reality if just given a chance. True, it is expensive, but as parents, we attest to its value. Here at MSU we have the background in terms of staff to make it work. All staff are active members of the University community, well - educated in child development, child - guidance, and with a deep concern for the welfare of the children in their care.

'I SEE YOU'VE BEEN DOING SOME RE-THINKING, CHARLIE."

MSAU has one of the few infant toddler day - care centers in the nation. Infant - toddler care is a thing of the very near future. Indeed it is here now!

Very little is known though, about what sorts of programs work best in this age range. MSAU is thus a pioneer of sorts, and it would be a dreadful shame to have to discontinue this program for lack of sufficient funds, just when the need is so great to establish effective criteria for the efficient running of an infant - toddler program geared toward socio - emotional and cognitive intellectual development as well as teh expected physical custodial care.

MSAU can provide such a program which can be used as a model for other centers around the nation. The staff, the building, and the equipment all exist now to accomplish the task.

MSAU parents are actively interest the continuation of the day . program - we desperately need qu care for our children. MSAU ch need the continuation of this day environment — its education social opportunities are extre valuable to them too.

And so, President What administration, and board of tru we ask that you hear our plea for for our children. We can't fur effectively without it. MSU fac represent education - and education means the best po education, no matter what the ag years, 21 years, 85 years, or 18 mg

Term papers: we may vomit

To the Editor:

Michael Fox's portrait of the student as a young dog was indeed touching. The student who buys a term - paper is not really cheating - this is unimportant compared to his spiritual struggle against the system. This student is not really lazy - he has just been turned off by grades and/or trivia. He is a victim, and any act he commits must be one of innocence. He is characterized by his great righteousness in a corrupt society of stuffy professors whose main interest is "busy work."

Yet this student, armed with a $75 termpaper ($3.75 x 20 pages) that someone else has written, will triumph. He is a pragmatist sacrificing his ideals to the juggernaut of American education. Yet he will not go down without a fight - he will defy. How noble. How pure. How positively biblical. In the words of the man who came to dinner, "I may vomit."

People who buy term papers do so because they can afford to have someone else do their work for them. We are not convinced that the idea of protesting American education is as' attractive a motivation as the fact that money will buy almost anything - even term papers.

Since termpaper topics are very often chosen by students themselves, the claim that students are "controlled" does not hold much weight. As for "busy work" and "regurgitation," why pay anyone to something that is relatively simple to do yourself for nothing? And if a term paper is not challenging enough, most professors are delighted to assign something that is.

The pragmatist who buys his way through college is not likely to stop at a B.A. — once he gets a job and has to do something he thinks is "beneath his dignity" it will be the same old thing again. At any rate, covering up bald cheating with a host of platitudes about the evils of American education is just a snow - job, convincing only the most simple - minded.

The student who is willing to pay to have himself ghost - written th college can have no gripes with as that robs him of "integrity" - th nothing there to rob. How ironi those who scream the loudest abo evils of American capitalism a taken in by the extension of capi to education that they are willing it "protest,"

Canoe safety hazards

To the Editor:

That the canoe rental service operated from the south end of Bessey Hall is enjoyed by many people is obvious from the two plus hours required to obtain a canoe yesterday. It is appalling, at least, to find that the safety equipment available consists of several pieces of styrofoam, apparently from a broken shipping package. Sure no good swimmer would have any difficutly in returning to an overturned canoe (which would float), or reaching shore in the Red Cedar. However, no questions about a person's ability to swim are raised, and indeed small

Advisory council project outlined in 3-month report

BY CINDI STEINWAY state News Staff Writer

After three months of research, the Women's Steering Committee recommended to President Wharton Thursday that the University establish a Women's Advisory Council (WAC), to be located off campus, to aid in defining and ending discrimination within the University at all levels.

May Kay Scullion, for the steering committee, explained that the WAC would revolve around a woman's coordinator at the level of a vice president within the University.

"The woman's coordinator would hold the rank of a vice president but not the title, thus enabling her to serve in the capacity of an ex - officio member at the administrative level," Scullion said. "She would report to the president and coordinate the functions of the WAC staff."

Scullion also said President Wharton and concerns of women. had offered no response to the report that he received Thursday.

Robert Perrin, vice president for individual with visibility so necessary in University relations said Thursday that terms of the administration while also the report will be carefully considered by the administration.

"University units with responsibilities in the areas covered will be asked to review the various recommendations," Perrin said. "Following this, President Wharton is expected to present an analysis of the report to the board of trustees with any administrative recommendations."

The report states that the WAC office be housed in an off - campus women's center, easily accessible to public transportation, to better serve the needs of all women, not just those located on campus. The women's coordinator would have her office located at the center, as well as an office on the fourth floor of the Administration Building to enable her to maintain constant communication with the president and board of trustees concerning the needs

"This type of dual location would, in the view of the committee, provide the allowing her easy access to the women's center," the report states.

The women's center would be staffed by the WAC, a grievance panel called the advocacy - action office, a research team, and a coordinator for women's programs, all at a cost of $100,000 for the first year.

"This funding would be over a two to three - year period, following an initial grant for the first year from the University. We would hope future funds would come from outside the University in the form of community donations and foundations," Scullion said.

The report also stipulates that a minimum of one - fourth of the total funding is to be raised by the vice president for development.

Scullion explained the WAC would be composed of six regular members, and six alternates chosen by lots from volunteers of the total University community. Each member would serve a six months as an alternate, then six months as a full member with staggered terms of office.

As stated in the report, this council would serve the capacity of a search and selection body for the rest of the women's center staff, and be a communications and advising agent to the University.

The advocacy - action office as outlined in the report would handle individual problems, act as advisor to Equal Opportunity Programs, and follow cases brought before the WAC. They would also provide professional counseling services for all community women to give them a definite place to come for help.

"The grievance panel would be representative of women and minorities, using peer group pressure to relieve the sex - group bias in the University," Scullion said.

The report states the responsibilities of the research team as working in conjunction with the EOP office and the Office of Institutional Research to conduct community studies on women. They are also to provide an on - going evaluation of the women's center by publishing a quarterly journal.

Workshops, seminars, conferences, and "consciousness - raising" programs, along with media presentations and audio - visual aids would be coordinated under program development in the center. These programs would be action - oriented to meet specific community needs, the report states. The committee also recommended that this body establish a bureau for public speakers's

"As a nonhierarchical structure, the positions of associate coordinators for the Women's Advocacy Office, the research group, and program development would all be at the same salary level," Scullion stated. The report sets these positions at $10,000 for six months.

Included in report were appendixes resulting from the public hearing for women from the board of trustees, and the subcommittee reports. These dealt with the areas of employment practices and policies, minority concerns, women in the media, student concerns and family services.

"Employment practices is one of our biggest concerns, as the majority of minority women are working in nonacademic, labor postitions at the bottom of the employment scale,"

Is MSU an equal opportunity employer?

According to the Women's Steering Committee study on minority concerns, the answer is a flat "no," and the statement is "trite and grossly misleading."

In their report, the minority subcommittee criticized "token representation" of women in University positions. The group suggested that the women who are hired reflect the ages, educational attainments, marital status, races and income levels of women in the state of Michigan.

"The administration must make a firm public stand on its new attitudes in hiring and the treatment of women and minorities," the report said.

The women praised the University for publicly committing itself to an affirmative action plan for increasing Chicano enrollment and offered guidelines to insure that action.

Hiring a full - time Chicano aide coordinator by fall 1972 to develop a program that would meet the needs of current Chicano students and possible incoming freshmen was recommended. In addition, the minority subcommittee requested that the number of Chicano adies be increased to 10 people.

A need for greater sensitivity on the part of residence hall advisers and assistants to the unique cultures of Chicanos, Indians and black students was also suggested.

The women proposed the establishment of a "stable Chicano curriculum" to be developed sometime in the future and at least one class be initiated on the role of the Chicano (Mexican - American woman) by fall

Keeping MSU true to its land - grant philosophy and responsibility to "serve those who work for the land," the committee suggested immediately increasing the number of Chicanas involved in the University's Agricultural Cooperative Extension Program. 'The seven counties in the state of Michigan with the highest migrant populations must as rule hire Chicanas as extension agents," the minority demanded. The report also suggested that the University offer driver's training classes for Spanish speaking people and courses on child care, marriage and the family, all with special empahsis on Chicanas. Similar affiramtive action plans must

A splinter group of the Women's Steering Committee recommended to President Wharton Thursday that an Office of Women's Affairs be established within the existing framework of the Office of Equal Opportunity Programs (EOP).

'Although we are entirely in agreement with other members of the steering committee that immediate attention must be given by this University to correct certain inequities as they pertain to women, we believe that such corrections can best be attained by using the existing structure of EOP and not through the establishment of a separate women's center," Joann R. Collins, steering committee member and counselor in financial aids, said.

The other two members voicing this concern were Josephine Wharton, assistant to the director of EOP, and Verna Bradley, supervisor of McDonel Hall Food Services.

These women asked that EOP be empowered to enforce an Affirmative Action Program in all hiring units of the University, with the director responsible only to the president.

"EOP should coordinate coomunity research through the College of Urban Development and establish in - service training and sensitivity programs to improve the status of women at this University," Collins said.

EQUAL RECRUITMENT

Balanced hiring practices encouraged by panel reps

By TONI PELLILLO State News Staff Writer

Sexist practices in hiring men for top-notch University administrative positions must end and equality should reign in MSU's hiring policies, the Women's Steering Committee 22-page report on employment concluded.

'Ideally, one-half of the total employment in the University at all levels should be women in two years," Mary Kay Scullion, East Lansing graduate student in education and chairman of the steering committee

"But more realistically, it probably won't happen until 1975," she estimated.

The subcommittee report recommended that a black woman be given priority as a candidate for associate or assistant dean in the office of the vice president for student affairs. Black students will then have more input into the decision-making processes of the University, the women claim.

The steering committee also urged that females be recruited and considered for upcoming vacancies for the dean of Human Ecology, chairperson of Family Ecology and director of the Office of Medical Education.

The exclusively and traditionally male staff in the offices of president, vice president, provost, Financial Aids, Alumni Assn., Internal Audit and Public Safety were criticized by the report, which suggested that all administrative offices must employ

Traditionally, women have been employed in large numbers in University clerical-technical and labor payroll positions which are usually low

"It should neither be assumed that women seeking employment should automatically be referred to a clerical-technical opening or to the labor payroll, nor should it be assumed that they must start at the lower levels," the report said.

In the area of student employment, the women urged that the University courses are relevant to the employe's offer equal job opportunities to students that live off-campus as well as those living on-campus. Currently, some University jobs are limited to residence hall students.

The women blasted the MSU Personnel Office by recommending that it "should change its poor image in the University and the Lansing metropolitan area by better meeting the needs of women and minorities and by doing so, attaining the degree of respectability and confidence necessary for an employment agency."

Specifically, the group suggested the initiation of a centralized personnel system where all positions in all categories and all levels of employment can be announced and posted to inform women of the opportunities available.

Claiming vast salary inequities for University-employed women, the report emphasized that salaries for female employes must be comparable to those of male employes in similar job classifications.

Any inequities of job classifications, pay rates or promotional opportunities should be retroactively corrected, the report suggested.

The women examined the area of employe benefits and recommended more liberal sickness and maternity leaves for both women and men. "Some leave during the birth of a child must also be an option for new fathers to enable them to carry out family responsibilities," the subcommittee said. The creation of an employment benefit office in the personnel center for the benefit of first-time employes was suggested by the subcommittee.

Counselors working in the office would

Opportunities for further education while being a female employe of the University are limited, the report claimed. To remedy the situation, the steering committee recommended that MSU allow women at all levels of employment to enroll in credit or noncredit courses on a tuition reimbursement plan wherever the position

Flexible work schedules for women should also be allowed so that working women may enroll in credit courses, the report suggested.

In addition, the University must develop seminars and conferences which will especially benefit women as 'learning experiences," the women Even with the recent passage of the Equal Rights Amendment in Michigan guaranteeing lack of discrimination in job opportunities, Scullion emphasized that the subcommittee report on employment is necessary.

"In the past, problems of discrimination have not been eradicated by the passage of federal laws. MSU is another instance where this will be the case," she said.

The group will be headed by Robert F. Banks, Madison dean, and Gary Frost, asst. dean of the college.

The press policy was adopted in response to a senate wednesday elected a new chairman, established a member's action last week. Chitra Smith, associate olicy and discussed plans for a group that will meet professor in Madison, left the meeting to protest the presence of a State News reporter and photographer. Smith said the question of press access should have been discussed by the senate in advance.

The policy, originally proposed by Michael Rubner, Madison instructor, and later amended, gives "fully accredited members of the press" access to open meetings of the senate. This access "shall be based on an understanding that their presence will not disrupt normal proceedings of the meetings." The latter provision was the most active during the added because some council members felt the photographer demonstrations, and not disrupted proceedings by moving around to take pictures, students. often near the person speaking.

The establishment of a Community Advocacy Office to speak for all women and provide outreach services for the community at large was urged by the subcommittee.

The office would be composed of professional counselors, lawyers, gynecologists, and community individuals. Two thirds of the funding would come from community businesses, individuals and large corporations and one - third of the costs would be covered by the University.

Guidelines to provide for smoother and more efficient functioning of Equal Opportunity Programs (EOP) were also furnished by the minority women. Specifically, the group called for more University allegations. If the EOP refuses to hear a case, the women's report then urged EOP to give the grievant a written reason for the refusal and an explanation of alternative stesp open to the individual.

To alter the assessment system would reduce the effectiveness of the State News as a vehicle for campus communication. If that were done, the State News might have to develop a subscription system, including the use of off campus postal services, for distribution. Drives for state's primary quicken

By CRAIG GEHRING State News Staff Writer

Though the August 8 state primary is still two months away, the races for the various elective offices are beginning to get up a head of steam.

Already two candidates, one Democrat and one Republican, have announced their intentions to run for the 6th Congressional District seat currently held by 16-year incumbent Republican Charles Chamberlain.

Wednesday, Rep. Jim Brown, R-Okemos, announced he will challenge Chamberlain in the GOP primary. Brown currently is a second-term state representative. He is the first Republican to challenge Chamberlain in nearly two decades. Robert Carr, a Lansing attorney, indicated Thursday that he plans to announce his candidacy for the Democratic nomination sometime next week. Carr, 29, expects no primary opposition. He is an ACLU lawyer. The race for Brown's vacated 59th District seat is greater, with two Democrats, three Republicans and one independent running for the $17,500 a year post. The lone woman running for the post is Democrat Marion Davis, who has lived in the mid-Michigan area since 1966. Davis will be running against H. Lynn Jondahl in the Democratic primary. Jondahl was an unsuccessful candidate for the state legislature in 1970 and is chairman of the Three Republicans are trying to keep the seat in the GOP hands for at least two more years. William J. Gorman, a supervisor at Lansing Boys' Training School, was the first to announce. He revealed his candidacy over one month ago. He is a 1971 graduate of the MSU From the Dept. of Social Work. James A. Pocock, currently a Republican County Commissioner from East Lansing, jumped into the ring next. Donald Huber, of Okemos, also a Republican County Commissioner, made it a three-way primary fight when he Mickey, an unsuccessful candidate for the East Lansing City Council last fall, is the sixth candidate seeking the legislative seat. Currently running as an independent, Mickey hopes to gain the endorsement of the Human Rights party.

In four Ingham County Board of Commissioner races in East Lansing, four MSU students and a former student have already announced. The only incumbent intending to run is in the August primary. In the 19th District, which include married housing units in Spartan Village, two Democrats ha announced. campus after finals, East Lansing City Clerk Beverly Colizzi said Thursday.

Derwood Boyd in the 9th District. At the present time, there is only one race for nomination

Absentee ballots, not the applications, are presently available for East Lansing's June 12 school board election at the board of education offices at East Lansing High School.

For the school board election, the students can go to the Board offices to vote directly, without involving the exchange of ballot applications, ballots and returns.

City Clerk Colizzi suggested that students requesting ballots for the August primary get their applications and mail them as soon as possible to help avoid confusion for the clerk's office.

On the application for absentee ballot, the student is required to give a statutory reason for applying for the ballot. The list of legal reasons includes, "I expect

Gap between Chicanos, 'U' remains

Last in a series "The University hasn't done a damn thing to help Chicanos," Gilberto Martinez, 30, says bluntly.

Martinez works for Sol D'Aztlan, a Lansing-based Chicano organization supported in part by the MSU Center for Urban Affairs (CUA).

Martinez and other vocal Chicanos, notably Jose Trevino, coordinator of Chicano Students for Progress and Action (CHISPA), frequently lament that University administrators are not responding quickly or strongly enough to needs of the Chicano community.

Perrin, who has been a target of several Chicano verbal assaults, acknowledges that a breakdown in communication between Chicano leaders and University administrators has occurred. But, he said, the breakdown was "not of our doing."

Perrin suggests that part of the mutual misunderstanding has been a lack of understanding on the part of Chicanos as to how a large bureaucracy such as MSU conducts its business.

"They have a problem," he said. "They think they have an answer. They don't understand why the problem isn't solved immediately."

Universe turns to art

By JOHN LINDSTROM State News Staff Writer

Beginning at 12:15 p.m. today at a public ceremony in the Kresge Art Center lobby, the universe will not merely be the universe.

Until July 2 it will be a work of art. The executor of this God like act is a young, bearded mortal - Dan Lisuk, Trenton senior.

"By doing this I hope to ask some basic and, I feel, profound questions such as 'What is art?' " Lisuk said. Lisuk's proposed act is an experiment out of the field of "conceptual art." Though the initial act in conceptual art occurred in the 1920s, it was not until the 1960s that the movement caught on.

"In the late '20s Marcel Duchamps went into a department store, bought a wine rack, declared it an art object and entered it into a show," Lisuk explained. "Then in the '60s two

British artists - Terry Atkinson and Michael Baldwin - decided that if Duchamps could declare a

As a result, Kruger said, "It is apparent that public support of higher education will not be as generous in the immediate years ahead as it has been in the past."

The solution?

Kruger does not see sharp reductions in admissions. That presents a whole new set of problems for publicly supported universities. Rather, hope lies in improved manpower studies by the universities to help them identify areas where graduates can be utilized, and in counseling students to prepare them for the realities of the world of work.

DETROIT (UPI) - Backers of Gov. George C. Wallace Thursday threatened a "messy floor fight" at the Democratic National Convention if the state Democratic party foes not send Wallace - committed delegates to Miami

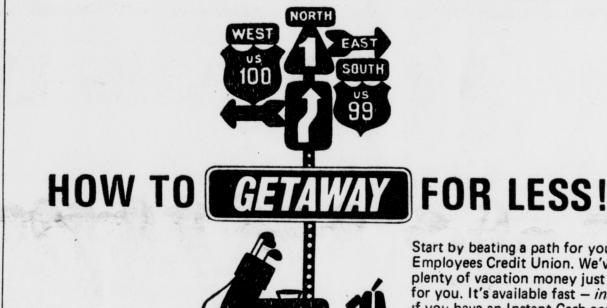

Josephine Chapman, coordinator of the Alabama governor's presidential campaign in Michigan, said she feared that "half - hearted supporters or outright phonies" may be selected at district conventions to represent Wallace received 51 per cent of the popular vote in the state's May 16 presidential primary and the Democratic State Central Committee agreed last Saturday that Wallace would get 66 delegates. Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota was alloted 39 and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota 27.

Delegates to the national convention will be selected at the Democratic state convention in Detroit June 10 - 11 and are required to vote for the candidate they are committed to on the first two ballots in Miami Beach. After that, they can vote as they wish.

"Because of what's been happening, I'd predict that the posssibility of organizing our own delegation has become a possibility," said Chapman. "It looks like we may be forced to imitate the tactics of the Mississippi blacks, who sent a separate delegation to the last Democratic convention in order to keep our Michigan people from being cheated by political hacks.

"Sending a separate delegation to Miami would mean a messy floor fight before we gain our rightful share of influence over the national convention," she said. "But it worked for the Mississippi people and we're readyto disrupt things too, if necessary.

Criticism and Washington do not mix, though, and for. the most part the jibes have been unjustified. deciding factor. His coach Jim Bibbs said, 'He needs a strong finish to have a good time."

Washington agreed. "When I ran my 5.8 for the world record in the 60 this winter I ran probably one of the most complete races I've ever run. I had a good start, I was strong over the middle 30 yards and strong at the finish."

This spring Washington has been running overdistances to build up his stamina in the 100, including active competition in the 220 a race he admittedly is not fond of. It has paid off.

In the Kansas Relays early in the season he ran a blistering 9.2 in the invitational 100. It came against a strong field and also against a moderately strong wind. It was just .1 off the world mark and it tied his own Spartan best.

MSU's other hopeful is Ken Popejoy, who looks more like a newsboy than a miler, which is what he happens to be. He's small, skinny and he appears easily breakable. But he is not.

Still not at full strength after a spring tonsillectomy, Dill copped the Big Ten 220 last weekend and rates an outside shot at going into the nationals.

Dill and Washington will be joined by LaRue Butchee and Bob Cassleman for the 440-yard relay. Butchee, a top sprinter in his own right, picked up 81/2 points for MSU in the conference meet and Cassleman added 141/2 points for two relay efforts and a victory in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles.

Del Gregory, a junior college transfer was also a solid performer in the Big Ten championships scoring 14 points. He's entered in the long jump and has surpassed 25 feet this year.

were awarded the top event rung in the dual capacity with the two-track-related incidents tying as the year's best. Topping the balloting was the winning of the triple crown by the MSU track and cross country units, as the triple crown feat recorded three first place votes. Also at the top was the record setting night at the MSU Relays by Herb Washington and Marshall Dill as both put a claim in on world records. Washington and Dill found their accomplsihments at the relays on more ballots in the voting than any other event, but recorded only one first.

The third place event was the late October day that saw Eric Allen destroy national records against Purdue by chalking up 350 yards on the ground en route to an MSU 43-10 victory.

Herb Washington

Also in the running for the year's top event was the upset of Michigan by the Spartans in basketball and the Milkovich brothers act in winning NCAA titles in wrestling.

The triple crown accomplishment will be a feat long remembered by Coaches Jim Gibbard and Fran Dittrich. The Spartans were not favored to win any of the titles going away. They were cofavorites for the indoor titles but were heavy underdogs for the cross country crown and one of four teams expected to have an equal shot at winning the outdoor crown.

The Spartans erased a big Illinois lead in the outdoor competition and emerged over the home Illini team 105-104. Washington, Dill and LaRue Butchee picked up 48 points in the two sprint events for the Spartans to build the MSU point base.

Indoors, MSU recorded 65 points, 23 more than Illinois (the Big Ten's second place entry) could muster. Washington (60), Dill (300), Ken Popejoy (mile), John Morrison (low hurdles) and Bob Cassleman (600) were the first place finishers along with the Cassleman anchored mile relay. The Spartans had four more firsts than any other Big Ten team.

In cross country, MSU took places four, five, 12, 13 and 38 for a conference with a one point victory low total of 72. Indiana

The quality point rating (q.p.r.) which determines the second - place finishes in gymnastics and golf, and annual champion, is gymnastics, hockey, and obtained by dividing the total number of sports in which a school participates in Big Ten competition, into the number of points it accumulates in these sports. Ten points are awarded for a first place, nine for second, eight for a third, etc.

Half points are awarded when two or more teams tie for a certain position in the final standings.

The q.p.r. is generally recognized as the most justifiable method of selecting the winner. Considering the number of

Included in any transportation study should "people movers" similar to those currently on display at Transpo '72.

Some broad generalizations can be made about the four prototype vehicles at Transpo which include a suspended monorail system, a system using air pad suspension and systems with electric vehicles, like trains, automatically propelled along a guideway.

All can be more commonly called horizontal elevators. The small, almost pollution free vehicles open their sliding doors at stations spaced according to demand and travel patterns.

The waiting rooms of stations appear very futuristic with maps on the wall to show destination points that a traveler can choose by pushing buttons located on a nearby console.

The automatic vehicles can operate solely according to demand, which would allow a passenger to have almost his own car, similar to a private taxi. This sort of situation would most likely occur at non peak periods.

When demand increased, the vehicles could operate on a schedule, picking up more passengers per car and making more stops.

Size, styling and color vary with the vehicles, but these are not important distinctions at this point. For instance, if the main purpose of a system were to service a closed area, such as a campus, a smaller capacity vehicle might be used. If the vehicle were going to perform a line - haul function, moving from one destination point to another in a linear fashion, a bigger vehicle might be better adapted.

factor which depends on the use or function in an area. On campus, it would not be speeding 60 miles an hour to achieve fast, efficient service.

Other similarities include tinted glass, air conditioning in the warmer months and heating in the cooler months. More technical differentiations exist among the various models, including their ability to switch from one track to another in a minimal time and the amount of headways, or time between vehicles, that can be allowed. More precision is needed in these areas and others to iron out some of the technical "bugs."

Safety depends in part on the headways and switching. With a "fail safe" system, if the switching did not work, which manufacturers say is not likely, the vehicle stops automatically. If another vehicle becomes an obstacle, the headway allowance will automatically prevent one vehicle from crashing into another.

In cases of emergency, the manufacturers differ on what method they would use to evacuate people or if they would evacuate them at all. Some point out that passengers may be come too panicky if they have to leave an elevated vehicle, which seems to be one of the preferred forms of structure for a campus.

Manufacturers note that most, if not all, of their internal furnishings or equipment are nonflamable anyway. Closed circuit televisions and in some cases attendants, who are not necessary on automatic vehicles, would serve to deler crime, they add.

Problems still remain in the areas of weather effects, cost and aethetics too,

RYAN

Ex-student runs for county board

Patrick J. Ryan, a former MSU student, announced Thursday he is running for the Ingham County Board of Commissioners from the 19th District.

The district includes Spartan Village. Seeing his role as an "ombudsman," Ryan said he will be ready to listen to problems that a constituent may bring up. Ryan said county government should be more responsive to the needs of married housing. "There is a tremendous need for adequate and inexpensive day care facilities," he said.

Ryan also said, "I feel county officials should speak not only on county issues but on matters concerning national priorities since the overwhelming proportion of taxes paid by Ingham County residents are consumed by the federal government."

Speed is another variable actor which depends on the City council to discuss campus, it would not be necessary to send a vehicle speeding 60 miles an hour to pot ordinances at meet

Marijuana is likely to come up for a vote at Tuesday's East Lansing City Council meeting with two marijuana ordinances scheduled to be on the agenda. The council will meet at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

Under consideration will be ordinance 291 which would provide a $1 penalty for the possession and use of marijuana.

The second ordinance 304 calls for the elimination of the current local ordinance which provides a $500 fine for the possession and use of marijuana.

The council also has the city attorney's opinions on marijuana from their last meeting. Daniel C. Learned told the council at that time they could not legalize marijuana, not deal with marijuana distribution to minors. He also informed them that they could not compel the local police to refrain from enforcing the state statute on marijuana.

Learned also presented two ordinances that would provide local penalties similar to those of the state and which would deal with people who sell to minors. However, neither of these have been formally introduced, and until they are, council cannot act on Learned is also expected to present at Tuesday's meeting an ordinance concerning cable television. Council made a committment to the National Cable Co. to have an ordinance by early June.

A rough draft of the housing ordinance under consideration since last year by the attorney has been given to council members, though no formal action is expected on the ordinance at this meeting. City Manager John Patriarche said action could be expected on the ordinance in early July.

A formal agenda for the council meeting will be finished later today for those

The solution, as Gorman sees it, lies in putting addicts on a legalized drug program which would allow them to continue to work as useful members of society.

Gorman also hopes to become a part of the Social Services Committee in order to close some of the loopholes that now exist in the present Michigan welfare program.

"We know that some of the programs we have today don't work" Gorman said, "yet we keep throwing hundreds of thousands of dollars into them.

Van Tassell blasts policies teaching, research and public service activities in making their decision not to reappoint. The official reasons offered by Hackel in October 1971, for firing Van Tassell include "unprofessional conduct," 'deficiency in standards of ordinary performance," "disruptive of the departmental purpose," "unfair treatment of some students," and "unproductive of scholarly activity."

Van Tassell has denied all of these charges. She charged that many of the reasons offered for the firing "are based on misconceptions about me that have nothing to do with my teaching, research and public

Richard Connin, asst. professor of entomology, told the committee about Van Tassell's research for him studying a certain species of beetle. Van Tassell's doctorate is in the field of entomology.

Van Tassell said she sepcifically advised the faculty to consult Connin to find out about her research activity.

Connin said he was never contacted about Van Tassell. Several colleagues in the department testified that from the outset Van Tassell attempted to effect changes in the department, including eliminating the common final exam, expanding the track system and using varied texts in different sections.

The decision not to reappoint in fall 1971, was actually made on two separate occasions. In September, the committee voted not to reappoint and allowed Van Tassell to see the "first ballot" reasons. In October, she was allowed to appear before the tenured faculty (called the ad hoc committee) to refute these charges. Van Tassell was not allowed to see the "second ballot" reasons which came out of the vote at the October meeting following her appearnace. Hackel told FAC he could not release the second ballot reasons without authorization from the ad hoc committee. The FAC refused to allow Van Tassell's witnesses, who participated in the fall decisions, to discuss the substance of the second ballot reasons.

Hackel, who did not participate in the fall 1971, decisions, said he believes the ad hoc committee followed the department bylaws "scrupulously" in making its decision. He denied responsibility for any defects in the committee's procedures. Van Tassell charges in her written petition that the ad hoc committee chairman was blatantly biased and that the department's tenured faculty members never considered her committee refused to consider evidence on how she conducted her classes, refused to accept absentee ballots after stating on the agenda that such ballots would be > accepted and refused to provide "second ballot" reasons. She also charges that "first ballot" reasons were "almost without exception" based on incidents occuring after the department originally made its decision not to reappoint in February 1970.

> Hackel told the FAC that the ad hoc committee did not discuss reasons for recommending Van Tassell's firing in 1970, because the Unviersity policy didn't require presentation of reasons.

> Paul Barrett, professor of natural science, testified that in the three times the department met to consider Van Tassell's appointment, "it is my general impression that not enough attention was given to some factors of her performance."

> Donald Weinshank, asst. professor of natural science, told FAC that as the nontenured representative on the department advisory council, which reviewed the decision not to reappoint, he wrote a letter to Hackel questioning the ad hoc committee's procedures.

> Weinshank would not release the letter to FAC without Hackel's approvad. Hackel said he would notify FAC of his decision Thurs day afternoon.

> Later in the proceedings, Hackel told the FAC that Weinshank recommended reconvening the ad hoc commistee to consider providing reasons for firing Van

> In his written statement to FAC, Hackel cites a critical letter from a senior faculty member assigned to work with Van Tassell assier "mentor" duing her fist year at MSU. He also cites a report from the Orientation Committee criticizing Van Tassell's role in a program to acquaint new people with department procedures and subject matter.

Hackel said these reports were written in February 1972, becuase of the "rapidly developing legalistic atmosphere" surrounding the case. Van Tassell has not seen these reports in full. Hackel said he would make the full reports available

He said the decision not to reappoint was based on "a number of different things (that), added together, forced the recommendation." He said incidents of lateness to classes, missing classes, student complaints on grading and research activity did not alone account for the decision.

"There are several persons on this campus who know how to run an election, but he refuses any help," Buckner said.

According to Charlie Massoglia, ASMSU elections commissioner, today's ballot may not be legitimate because it has a section that requires the students to vote for one male and one female but does not point out which sex the candidates are.

In addition, Massoglia says that today's election is being conducted without the use of the official ASMSU ballot boxes.

"Our ballot boxes are sealed and will not be opened until 5 p.m. (today) according to our elections regulations,' Massoglia said.

Buckner further charged that the elections commissioner which Best chose is biased because of his former position as director of the Office of Black Affairs

"OBA is supporting several of the candidates on the ballot," Buckner claimed.

"This whole election is going to turn out just as I said it would-that is why I did not want to make my appointments," Menson said.

He was referring to his and Buckner's joint refusal early this term to make their appointments to the nominations committee to force some changes in the election procedure.

After the Academic Council killed a proposal which would have eliminated the at-large seats, Menson and Best made their appointments.

Menson said Thursday that he will appeal the election.

Best is trying to railroad this election through so that his hand picked candidates will win," Buckner said.

Best was unavailable for further comment following Buckner's remarks late

Davis acquittal urged

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) -Angela Davis' chief defense attorney asked the all - white jury on Thursday "to think black, to be black," and in their deliberations share the fears that haunted her as a black, militant Communist.

Attorney Leo Branton pleaded for Davis' acquittal on charges of murder, kidnap and conspiracy in connection with the 1970 invasion of the Marin County courthouse.

Branton said the prosecution was "trying to convict a woman on the weakest evidence ever presented in a court of law in a case that has attracted this much attention."

But the main thrust of his final argument was that

Davis, wanted in connection with the invasion, fled California because she feared political and racial persecution. Four persons, including a judge, died in the Aug. 7, 1970, violence, and guns owned by Davis were

In the College of Human Ecology election, Thomas VanDusern defeated his opponents by antuning 10 votes, 28 more than his closest rival. amies Glover won by six votes in the College of Education election. Debra Locke, who won an appeal against the elections commission regarding the previous election, was the winner in the College of Communication Arts race with 35 votes. In Social Science-James Madison election, Ed Grafton was the winner, with 81 votes.

The four new members will be verified tonight.

Because of the lateness of the election, the selection of board president will not be held until next week, Buckner

The new board will select a new board president Sunday, from past and present board members.

Parker Pennington, PIRGIM steering committee member, was dissappointed by the low voter turnout in Wednesday's referendum.

"We are pleased the majority was a 3 to 1 victory. We had hoped for a higher victory. I was disappointed that students didn't even come out to vote 'no'."

The kickoff point of the group's massive campaign began May 3, when its petition drive was launched. The drive, originally set for April 24, collected over 8,000 student signatures, more than twice the 3,200 signatures necessary to hold a referendum.

Probably the height of its effort was the appearance of the brainchild of the PIRGIM, Ralph Nader, May 17 in the Men's IM Arena. Nader addressed a crowd of nearly 2,000 about the student's role in affecting social change. Much opposition to the PIRGIM idea came from the New Right Coalition (NRC), a group of right-wing students on campus. The NRC claimed that students were being forced into accepting the services of PIRGIM and paying the tax with an inconvenient refund policy. The PIRGIM organizing committee, in response to NRC's charges, hopes to distribute refunds during registration.

"All things look good that we will have it (refunds) at registration," Pennington said. ', Negotiations are being made as to whether the tables for refunds will be outside or inside, as many other groups have done."

The PIRGIM forces hope to bring about change in the areas of consumer protection, environmental preservation, discrimination, corporate responsibility and racial and secual discrimination, according to spokesmen. The group plans to hire a staff of at least 10 full time professionals, including attorneys, accountants and scientists.
