Police identify body found under bridge

Michigan State Police are still waiting for an autopsy report to determine the cause of death of a 19-year-old Lansing man found Monday under a railroad track bridge.

James A. Molenda, 3105 W. Willow St., was found about 11 a.m. Monday by a railroad worker under the Grand River Avenue bridge east of East Lansing. He was apparently sprawled across the tracks.

State Police Detective Sgt. Arnold Johnson would not say if police suspect foul play in the incident but did say Molenda definitely died as a result of the fall from the bridge.

Molenda was last seen at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at his sister's East Lansing apartment. He apparently walked out onto Grand River Avenue but did not say where he was going.

Police said when he left the apartment, Molenda was wearing a hunting jacket, brown shirt and jeans

The board of trustees is expected to pass an administrative proposal today establishing a Dept. of Human Relations for women's and minority concerns at a special 3:30 p.m. open session.

On Sept. 15, the board defeated a similar proposal by a split vote, 4-4.

President Wharton said Tuesday he discussed the issue with trustees who had voted against the proposal earlier and decided the special meeting would be necessary.

"In those discussions I think we were able to supply additional information and clear up a number of misperceptions," Wharton said. "As a result, there is a willingness among some trustees to reconsider the matter and I am hopeful that it will now pass."

Trustees voting against the proposal in the earlier session were Warren Huff, D-Plymouth; Frank Hartman, D-Flint; Frank Merriman, R-DeKerville and Clair White, D-Bay City.

In favor of the proposal were: Patricia Carrigan, D-Ann Arbor; Don Stevens, D-Okemos; Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing and Kenneth Thompson, R-East Lansing.

The administrative proposal to create a Dept. of Human Relations stems from a 58-page report to President Wharton on June 1 by a 17-member Women's Steering Committee.

In the report, the women called for the establishment of a women's center to be coordinated under the efforts of a woman to have the status — but not the title — of University vice president. The steering committee also requested that this person be given office space on the fourth floor of the Administration Building where other top university officials have their offices.

After reviewing the report during the early summer, Wharton announced his disagreement with both women's center bid and the vice-presidential proposal. Instead, an administrative alternative was proposed — reorganizing the existing Office of Equal Opportunity Programs into the new Dept. of Human Relations.

Offices for minority and women's programs would be included in the new department. The head of the Human Relations Dept. would be titled an assistant vice president.

Differences between the Sept. 15 proposal and today's proposal are not expected to be great.

Though some members of the steering committee view the special board meeting and expected passage of the proposal as a "foot in the door" to ending sexism and inequality on campus, more is yet to come.

Mary K. Scullion, chairwoman for the steering committee, is still optimistic that there will someday be a woman vice president.

"Right now, there is no way that the University will be giving us a woman in that office. But that is no reason that we should stop pushing for one," she said.

"The ills of this University were by no means all corrected when the University considered our report. We have, to my knowledge, only one woman in the marching band and our new women's director of athletics only has a title and more responsibilities — no appropriate salary increase," she continued.

Scullion explained that the steering committee was disappointed that the human relations proposal was constructed without any assistance from the women's group.

"Not once during the entire summer did I receive a phone call from administrative officials concerning the new proposal that they were writing. Members of the steering committee were appalled not to have been asked for input," she said.

Scullion charged the University was stalling for time before taking affirmative action.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, Tuesday disagreed with Scullion.

The suggestions made in the women's report were carefully considered and were certainly referred to during the making of the administrative proposal," he said.

15 PER CENT RISE

Hike in rate seen with no-fault planBy RAY ANDERSON
State News Staff Writer

Contrary to expectations, the proposed Michigan no-fault automobile insurance plan will cost the average motorist 15 per cent more than his present rate, House Insurance Committee member James H. Heinze, R-Battle Creek, told the House Tuesday.

Heinze explained minimum coverage of public liability and property damage, will increase an estimated 30 per cent, which could hit the pocketbooks of students with low-cost coverage particularly hard.

"The package will reduce his (the average motorist's) premium for public liability but then require him to buy insurance on himself," Heinze said, because the personal coverage has been so generous.

Under the present law a motorist is required to have only $20,000 maximum for one person injured, $40,000 for more than one injured party and $10,000 damage caused to property as a result of the accident.

Under the proposed no-fault bill any one person injured in an accident would be eligible for up to $60,000 in medical expenses, $25,000 in retraining expenses and $1,500 in funeral expenses.

The bill would also provide up to $200 per week for three years to any wage earner injured in a specific accident, and $20 per day for three years to a nonwage earner.

Rep. James Del Rio, D-Detroit, charged the legislature and news media with political expediency in endorsing the bill.

"All we're really doing is cutting a deal or reaching a consensus to charge more money for the same darn thing," he said.

Nearly an hour of vehement discussion centered on a section of the bill that would restrict litigation and suits for noneconomic personal injury, unless "the injured person dies or sustains serious impairment of body function or permanent serious disfigurement." The House postponed action until today.

Heinze explained the reason and the necessity for the limitation on recovery for noneconomic suffering under the proposed legislation.

Plans offered to aid
academic electionsBy DANIEL DEVER
State News Staff Writer

With the entire matter of student participation in academic governance coming under review next May, here are several events, past and present, which will help to determine the ultimate success or failure of the two-year experiment.

After two student elections to the Academic Council which were surrounded with confusion and controversy, something has been done to help end some of the problems of the elections.

A special task force created this summer has come up with the following recommendations which, if enacted, could facilitate more organized student elections.

- An equivalent of the secretary of the faculties be appointed to conduct the business of student elections.

- Student at-large elections to the Academic Council to be held during spring election to reduce confusion.

- The student members of the council be formed into an elected student council chaired by the president to conduct regular student business as outlined in the Bylaws for Academic Governance.

- Any appeals of student elections to the council should go first to student committee on nominations and then to a final judicial body consisting of four persons from the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) Judiciary.

These recommendations were agreed upon after the task force, consisting of both students and faculty members, held several sessions and heard testimony from a total of eight student leaders including Clyde Best, student member of the Steering Committee, Harold Buckner, former chairman of Associated Students of MSU and Rob Menon, president of COGS.

Gallup polls showing Richard Nixon leading Sen. George McGovern by a large margin among voters under 30 are not accurate and the new Lou Harris poll showing McGovern narrowing Nixon's lead will help the South Dakotan, according to Charles K. Atkin, asst. professor of communication.

Atkin, who testified last week before a U.S. House subcommittee on the misuse of political polls, said Tuesday the testimony of George Gallup indicated the pollster is underestimating McGovern support by a substantial margin.

Gallup revealed under questioning that in drawing up a polling sample his organization specifically excludes on-campus housing areas. Atkin said.

Atkin said this "systematic bias" is hurting McGovern because it ignores the Democratic candidate's strongest area of support. He added that Lou Harris, another nationally recognized pollster, more than likely fails to include on-campus housing as well.

McGovern's strength among under-30 voters will be further magnified, Atkin predicted, due to the higher election day turnout by college

Uruguay fights for 'breath of freedom'

By ROBERT BAO
State News Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: While post-Munich terrorism spreads around the globe, Uruguay is quietly winning a war against an internal band of terrorists. Under martial law and an atmosphere of crisis, staff writer Robert Bao spent three months in Uruguay this summer studying the situation, talking with both terrorists and high government officials.

The Tupamaros of Uruguay could teach Black September a few lessons in sophisticated savagery.

They rob, bomb, kidnap and assassinate with the ruthless precision of Mission Impossible. Their secret headquarters, some with entrances that open like Ali Baba's cave, resemble military arsenals. Earlier this year, they staged two spectacular prison breaks followed by six simultaneous ambushes against Montevideo police, thus bolstering their image as the most highly-organized terrorist gang in Latin America.

For more than four years, Uruguayan authorities watched helplessly from the sidelines while the insurgents brought the "model South American democracy" to the verge of chaos. But now, with the help of drastic measures, the security forces are finally crushing the Tupamaro organization.

The new Uruguayan strategy, in a nutshell, is good old repression.

Temporarily sweeping their democratic heritage under the rug, most Uruguayans are supporting a total suspension of constitutional guarantees which went into effect April 15 when President Juan Maria Bordaberry declared a "state of internal war."

As a result, the Uruguayan army, navy, air force and police, combined as the "Joint Forces," were given carte blanche to arrest and search without warrants, to deny suspects habeas corpus, and to employ brutal methods of what the government calls "interrogation."

This approach, as disturbing as it sounds, has apparently succeeded where more civilized tactics have failed.

In less than four months, more than 1,000 guerrillas and suspects have been rounded up and more than 70 hideouts — including an underground hospital equipped to perform any type of surgery — have been discovered.

The Joint Forces have also seized incredible quantities of rifles, submachineguns, pistols, hand grenades and explosives — enough to arm several battalions.

Each discovery of a new terrorist hideout has in turn led to the uncovering of another chain of clandestine operations. The underground trail — cleverly linked by Montevideo's sewer system — included guerrilla workshops manufacturing everything from false uniforms to armored cars.

The most crucial incident, in the last week of August, was a police patrol gun-down of the founder and mastermind of the Tupamaros, Raul Sendic, a medical school dropout who underwent plastic surgery to conceal his identity. Only days before, the No. 2 leader had been arrested.

While the demise of the Tupamaros has been forecast as many times in the past as the shepherd called wolf, evidence now strongly suggests that they are being mauled, not just scratched.

Several captured documents, however, indicate that the war against the Tupamaros, like the war in Vietnam, may never be won. Among other revelations, one document boasted that the subversive organization constituted virtually a "parallel government" in Uruguay.

Most of the guerrillas actually belong to the Uruguayan establishment. They are doctors, lawyers, priests, bank executives, and even "estancieros," who lead double lives.

U.S. extending war, Gromyko says

American pullout demanded

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Soviet Union declared on Tuesday that the United States is carrying on an "unprecedented expansion" of the Vietnam War and demanded the withdrawal of all American troops.

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told the UN General Assembly: "The Vietnamese people cannot be defeated. Their staunchness will not be broken either by heavier bombing, or by the blockade of their ports, or by damage to their hydro-technical installations."

It was the strongest speech Gromyko has made here on the subject of Vietnam in at least four years.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush said Gromyko had reiterated the Soviet position "with which we certainly cannot agree."

"Our position is well known on Vietnam and is in contradiction of the Soviet views," Bush added.

Gromyko also said the Munich massacre of 11 Israeli athletes by Palestinian commandos was criminal. He did not say, however, whether the Soviet Union supported the proposal made by Secretary of State William P. Rogers on Monday to convene a conference next year to adopt a convention that would bind ratifying governments to prosecute or extradite terrorists.

The Soviet minister submitted to the assembly, which opened its 27th session last week, a draft resolution providing for the 132 members to renounce the use of force, including nuclear weapons.

Gromyko noted that less powerful nations are concerned that nuclear weapons might be used against them and that his proposal would remove that threat and strengthen the security of all countries.

The draft also asks the Security Council to make the declaration mandatory for all nations.

Gromyko said the renunciation of force would not prevent "states and peoples subjected to aggression to rebuff it by employing all possible means so long as the aggressor continues to use force."

Gromyko said the Soviet Union supports the "just struggle" of the Palestinians but that it is "impossible to condone the acts of terrorism committed by certain elements from among the participants in the Palestinian movement which have led, notably, to the recent tragic events in Munich."

"Their criminal actions deal a blow also at the national interest and aspirations of the Palestinians, these acts are used by the Israeli criminals in order to cover up their bandit-like policy against the Arab peoples."

Gromyko said if the United States wants the Paris peace talks to succeed it should give a "positive reply" to the Viet Cong proposal for a tripartite government in South Vietnam.

"If, however, it is pursuing some other goal, the negotiations in Paris cannot fail to end in deadlock, the war will go on and all the responsibility will rest with the United States," he said.

He said the three-part government would deal with transitional matters and organize general elections "on truly free and democratic lines."

Gromyko said that despite U.S. promises to get out of Vietnam and stop the war, there was "in fact an unprecedented expansion of the acts of war, and of their cruelty inhumanity."

A U.S. spokesman said he was not sure the Soviets had associated themselves with antiterrorism.

A British spokesman with specific comment on the Soviet renunciation proposal but gave no indication of the general British view.

"We're not 'agin' it," but it's a substitute for getting down to talking on specific views," he said. "Our general approach is to avoid sounding declarations."

Chinese Ambassador Huang read a copy of the speech. Gromyko spoke but did not join in applause at the end.

Senate OKs arms bill, kills end-war measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Tuesday voted down a four-month deadline for withdrawal of U.S. troops from Indochina and passed a $1.8-billion foreign-military-aid bill on its second try.

The 45-42 vote striking the end-of-war amendment from the bill reversed two previous Senate votes this year.

On Aug. 2, the Senate added the identical amendment to the military procurement bill, but it was lost in conference in the face of a recent 201-160 negative vote in the House.

On July 24, the Senate had voted 50-44 to cut off funds from U.S. participation in the Vietnam War but then killed the foreign-aid bill to which the measure was attached.

The aid bill was passed 46-41 Tuesday after adoption of an amendment by Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania increasing its total from the $1.55 billion approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to $1.82 billion.

The amount still is $431 million less than requested by the Nixon administration and $311 million less than voted by the House.

The bill now goes to a House-Senate conference to work out compromises on the money authorization, and a dozen non-money differences.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., led the fight against the Indochina troop-withdrawal deadline and offered the motion to strike it from the bill.

He called it "impractical, unworkable and a delusion."

Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, argued that under the Constitution "the power and responsibility of ending any war rests with the president."

"Let's not relieve him of it," Stennis told the Senate. "When we try to override the President and cripple his power, I think we are encouraging the enemy to hold out."

Stennis said he believes President Nixon "has done everything the head of a self-respecting nation can do" to bring to an end the war with "toughest enemy we have ever faced."

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., chief sponsor of the fund cutoff for U.S. military action in Indochina conditioned upon release of prisoners of war, countered that Congress has constitutional responsibility concerning war and peace.

"We are still endangering the lives of 36,000 land troops in Vietnam," Brooke said. "We are still losing pilots and planes."

"We have given the South Vietnamese all the time they could ask."

Vice President Spiro Agnew interrupted his re-election campaign to fly in from Texas and preside in case his vote was needed to break a tie on the Stennis motion to strike the end-of-war amendment.

RELEASE SPARKS DEBATE

Three U.S. POWs head home

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three American prisoners of war were heading for home from Hanoi Tuesday, their oft-delayed and roundabout release through U.S. antiwar go-betweens a hot new issue in the presidential campaign.

Cocooned with Communist aircraft, the trio had yet to make contact with U.S. military or government officials. "They are just exploiting these people for their own propaganda aims," Vice President Spiro T. Agnew charged.

In San Francisco, Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern blamed what he described as interference by the Nixon administration for the delay of a week in the departure of the prisoners from Hanoi.

"In the last several days," McGovern declared, "we have seen that the Nixon administration is more concerned about the opinions these men might express than it is about speeding their release."

"I believe the President is afraid these prisoners will tell the awful truth about the war — that it is the bombing that keeps them in prison."

At the core of the mounting controversy were the three POWs — Navy Lt. j.g. Mark Gartley, Navy Lt. j.g. Norris Charles and Air Force Maj.

In a farewell toast to the three fliers, Tran Trong Quat, acting chairman of the Vietnamese Committee for Solidarity with the American People, told them:

"You don't have to be our friends, because friendship is almost too much to ask for. Friendship maybe can come later. All we ask now is that you not be our enemies. We don't want you to be our enemies. We don't want enemies anywhere."

The three had spent a total of 5½ years in North Vietnamese prison camps. Gartley, shaking his head in wonder, mused:

"I used to sit in my cell and think about how I would eventually get out. I would talk about it with my buddies and we came up with some fantastic ideas. But I never in wildest dreams imagined it would be this way."

ESPIONAGE BY MAIL?

Hanoi charges spying

PEKING (AP) — American antiwar activists, in Peking with three prisoners of war released by North Vietnam, disclosed Tuesday a charge by Hanoi that U.S. packages mailed to prisoners of war (POW) have contained spying devices rigged into such things as cans of milk.

The Pentagon called the charge ridiculous.

Cora Weiss, leader of the four Americans who went to Hanoi to receive the released servicemen, said: "It looks to us an unmistakably professional job."

The charge was first made broadly on the American delegation's second day in Hanoi, Sept. 17.

The activist delegation — Weiss, David Dellinger, the Rev. William Sloane Coffin and Prof. Richard Falk — said they asked for evidence to back up the charge. This evidence, they assert, was displayed Monday.

A Pentagon spokesman, Maj. Gen. Daniel James, said when asked for comment in Washington: "The charges are too ridiculous to dignify by trying to address them in detail."

Weiss' group told of the following:

- An extra-large tube of toothpaste which when squeezed out revealed what Hanoi said was a receiving apparatus with a battery compartment and an earpiece.
- Inside a candy bar were two pieces of cellulose paper, 2 by 4 inches, with instructions for writing messages that would not be detected.

A peanut shell that had been hollowed out and contained a message and also cans of milk and instant coffee which Hanoi said also contained messages.

A toy hippopotamus about 4 inches long, sealed, which when opened showed an enclosure with raised writing on one side reading "secret hiding place" and on the other "hold together, stand up."

A bar of soap with the wrapper cut in half, each half gouged and containing plastic bags full of capsules said by the North Vietnamese to be used for secret writing.

U.S. lays down plan to alter dollar's role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States seized the initiative in world monetary reform Tuesday by laying down a comprehensive plan for more flexible currency values, a greater role for "paper gold" and abandonment of the key-stone role of the dollar.

Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz presented the proposals — which include tough penalties for nations running heavy balance-of-payments deficits or surpluses — to the annual meeting of the 124-nation International Monetary Fund (IMF).

The other delegations were taken by surprise. Many, including British Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber, welcomed the breadth and objectives of the plan but withheld judgement on its specifics.

The German finance minister, Helmut Schmidt, said he welcomed what he called the "clear and coherent" U.S. proposal. Japanese delegates said they were not prepared to comment on details, but did object to what they saw as an implied suggestion that the yen should be revalued upward again.

The Shultz proposals were enforced in advance by President Nixon in a personal appearance at Monday's opening session of the IMF and World Bank boards of governors.

The U.S. plan will be on the table when the IMF's Committee of 20 — a new policymaking task force representing both great and small countries — holds its first meeting Thursday.

Some of the U.S. proposals are:

- Allowing the dollar the same flexibility as other currencies to float above or below its stated par value also permitting the U.S. government to buy and sell currencies in foreign exchange markets, as other countries do, to protect the value of its dollar.

The IMF's artificial Special Drawing Rights, or SDR, would gradually become the standard of value for all currencies, replacing the dollar in that role.

Providing pressures on "surplus countries" — those with rising reserves of gold, SDRs and foreign currencies — to correct such surpluses by revaluing their currencies or other means. Countries with deepening deficits would be required to devalue or take other steps to close the payments gap.

The last proposal would give formal sanction to the device used by President Nixon on Aug. 15, 1971. Unable to persuade Europe and Japan to revalue their currencies upward in terms of dollars, he imposed a 10 percent surcharge on all imports into the U.S.

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern said Tuesday he believes that if President Nixon is re-elected he will ask for a national right-to-work law.

And he repeated allegations that the Nixon administration plans also to ask for a national sales tax, lower federal wage ceilings and move toward compulsory arbitration.

The Democratic presidential nominee's assertions were made at a breakfast meeting of friendly labor union officials in San Francisco.

McGovern said later that there have been numerous "leaks" from the administration about a national right-to-work law outlawing compulsory union membership.

McGovern also said he believes his "nudging" of the administration is partly responsible for Hanoi's decision to allow three freed American prisoners to return home. McGovern had said Sunday the administration was "playing politics" with the men by insisting that they undergo military briefings on their return. Defense Secretary Melvin Laird said McGovern was making himself "a spokesman for the enemy."

Tuesday McGovern renewed his attack, claiming that Nixon delayed release of the prisoners to keep them from telling "the awful truth about the war — that it is the bombing which keeps them in prison."

McGovern appeared at the labor breakfast with a former rival, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who urged the union men to get behind him.

In his remarks McGovern attacked Nixon on issues about which labor unions feel strongly.

Only the right-to-work charge is new. For the first time in many presidential campaigns the Republican national convention this year refrained from adopting a plank opposed to compulsory unionization.

In other moves apparently aimed at currying support from labor unions, the administration recently dropped its vigorous efforts to get Congress to pass a law to use a form of compulsory arbitration to settle national emergency transportation disputes.

Making a point

Sen. George McGovern chats with farm labor leader Cesar Chavez in San Francisco Tuesday at a breakfast in honor of McGovern. He told the meeting he was proud to be on the same stage as Chavez.

IN UGANDA, TANZANIA

Peace plan accepted

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Foreign Minister Omar Arteh of Somalia, Uganda and Tanzania have accepted a five-point peace plan to be in effect by the week's end and a cease-fire already in operation.

Arteh told newsmen he expected details of the peace formula to be announced in a few days.

Tanzania's information minister, Daudi Mwakawago, told a news conference in Dar es Salaam that his country has accepted in principle the withdrawal of army units from the Uganda-Tanzania border, meeting one point of the peace plan. He said details must still be negotiated.

In another development, military spokesmen in the Ugandan capital of Kampala accused India and Zambia of planning a fresh invasion of Uganda from Tanzania. India called the claim

"totally false."

The airlift of 50,000 noncitizen Asians from Uganda continued and Asians staying on in the East African country began obtaining identity cards.

Arteh, who stopped briefly in Nairobi en route back to Mogadishu after visits to Tanzania and Uganda, said "one or two points" in the peace plan remained to be discussed.

ASMSU elects new president

By TERI ALBRECHT
State News Staff Writer

Ron Wahula, Roseville senior from the College of Business, has been elected the new president of the Associated Students of MSU.

The election was scheduled to take place last spring but was postponed until a special board meeting Monday night because of a series of invalidations and appeals of individual positions.

Wahula won on the 15th ballot. The other candidates were Charles Massoglia, Off - Campus Council president, and Ed Grafton, College of Social Science representative. After the eighth ballot Bob Shubert, a past member of the board placed his name in nomination. He later withdrew.

The votes were split with consistent support for Massoglia and Wahula and four - vote fraternity bloc for Grafton. Recurring votes were made by a few board members for abstentions.

The 15 - member board is made up of representatives from 10 colleges and from residence halls, sororities, fraternities, cooperatives and off - campus students.

Wahula contrasted the positions of the other two prime candidates with his favoring organizational change and maintenance of the $1 mandatory student tax.

"The primary function of ASMSU is to act as a lobbying institution with the administration for matters of social, economic, and academic importance," Wahula said.

"The secondary function of ASMSU is to provide programs for undergraduate students in areas where funds are not readily available for this purpose," he added. He cited pop entertainment as an area where ASMSU could provide the necessary finances.

Wahula said he favored continuing the mandatory student tax. Without it, he said ASMSU would be hindered in helping student groups. He said the endowment given to the Grapevine Journal, a minority publication, would not have been possible otherwise.

After his election Wahula outlined how he would change the board.

Wahula said he would pool every student on every advisory board so that we can work as one for better bargaining. With their knowledge and our power we should be able to get things accomplished."

Wahula has set up a slate of priorities for the board's immediate attention. He cited a self - sustaining universitywide recycling program which would create jobs for some students.

He also listed an outline for student property insurance that would operate like a health insurance plan.

The third area he wants to investigate is the problem of unsafe areas on campus for women students at night. Wahula said the board would work with the police in finding dangerous areas and setting up proper lighting or increased police surveillance.

Ron Wahula, a Roseville senior, was elected president of the Associated Students of MSU at a four-hour meeting Monday night.

MISSING SINCE JULY

Police seek woman

Lansing police are seeking the aid of students and local residents in finding Diane Osinski, 19, who mysteriously disappeared just over two months ago.

Osinski was last seen July 11 a.m. at her rooming house in East Lansing, policewoman Sue Brown of the East Lansing Police Dept. said. No one knows what happened to her after that.

"There has to be someone who saw this young lady somewhere," Brown said. "It seems incredible that she could disappear in broad daylight."

Brown believes the key to the whole case is that Osinski was looking for a babysitting job for the summer. She had applied at several local agencies in an attempt to find a job.

According to other residents at the rooming house, Osinski received a call the morning she disappeared, apparently regarding a babysitting job. A short time later, she received another call and was overheard to say she had to get out to the country immediately.

"The only thing we know is that the address had a number three and the word 'rose' in it somewhere,"

Brown said. "Since she didn't have a driver's license and her bicycle was still at the house, we believe that she either hitchhiked or walked to her destination."

Police have run out of leads in their investigation and will begin going back to retrace their information. All the tips so far have led nowhere.

Osinski is described as five-feet tall, 110 pounds, with brown-blond hair and blue eyes.

"If anyone in the area has had an unusual request for babysitting or has experienced something unusual while babysitting, please contact this department," Brown added.

Coed, 18, reported missing

Campus police along with Michigan State Police are looking for an 18 - year - old Hubbard Hall woman who has been missing since Friday at 8 p.m.

Jaquelyn J. Thompson was last seen at 8 p.m. Friday when she left the residence hall to attend a Presbyterian church camp in Greenville. She was supposed to take a bus to Greenville, but apparently never reached the camp.

According to Capt. Adam Zutaut, of the MSU Dept. of Public Safety, Thompson's roommate became worried when she failed to return for classes on Monday. After making a few phone calls, it was discovered that Thompson never reached the camp.

Police are circulating the woman's picture at local bus stations in an attempt to get some lead in the investigation. State Police are also searching the Greenville area.

When last seen, Thompson was wearing an orange, brown and beige blouse with a white tank - top sweater. She also had a blue waist coat and a brown suede shoulder bag.

She has gold wire rim glasses, a gold watch and a South Lake High School class ring.

Thompson is a St. Clair Shores freshman majoring in veterinary medicine. Anyone with information is asked to contact the Dept. of Public Safety.

Local electricity rates could jump 7 per cent

Students living in Lansing and East Lansing will have their light bills next year if Lansing Board of Water and Light approves a 7 per cent rate increase.

General Manager of Brush said company officials asked for the rate increase to combat a $2 million deficit incurred over the two years.

64-cent increase of the current average monthly rate of $9.10.

Also included in the new rate proposal is the elimination of the maximum 20-cent-per-month extra charge to suburban users in Delta Township and 90 per cent of East Lansing, thereby equalizing the rates.

According to Brush, the current Lansing rate ($9.10) will increase 64 cents to ($9.74), while payments in East Lansing and Delta Township ($9.30) will only increase 44 cents ($9.74).

Power for the rest of East Lansing and Meridian Township is handled by Consumers Power Co. which Tuesday agreed upon a compromise rate increase of 7.6 per cent for next year. Both proposed rate hikes are subject to the additional approval of the U.S. Price Commission.

IT SOUNDS INCREDIBLE

BUT EVELYN WOOD GRADUATES CAN READ THE GODFATHER IN 64 MINUTES

AT THAT SPEED THE 477 PAGES COME ACROSS WITH MORE IMPACT THAN THE MOVIE IN LIVING BLOOD, YOU MIGHT SAY...

Imagine what this ability can do for students. At 1000 words per minute, (that's 3 times faster than you read), Evelyn Wood graduates can devour a textbook like Hofstadter's "American Political Tradition" and wrap up each chapter in 11 minutes.

This means instead of spending 800 hours a year reading - that's what's what a college freshman does - an Evelyn Wood graduate spends 170 hours. Without any drop in comprehension! Without any drop in retention!

If there ever was a time to do something about this, it's now.

Don't goof away another day!

P.S. If you think this is another advertising con - job, take a free mini-lesson and settle it once and for all. Find out if we've pulled the wool over 500,000 graduates eyes... or we really do have something.

Women's plan rates belated trustee OK

A significant contribution to the fight against racial and sex discrimination in University policies and procedures can be made today by trustee approval of the new Dept. of Human Relations.

The proposed Dept. of Human Relations is basically an administrative reorganization and strengthening of the existing Office of Equal Opportunity Programs.

At the Sept. 15 board of trustees meeting, a deadlocked 4-4 vote prevented approval of the new department. The proposal had been rejected in July when it was first proposed in sketchy terms by the administration.

While it was anticipated that President Wharton would bring up the proposal at the October board meeting, the unusual scheduling of today's special board meeting displays the urgency of the issue.

As planned, the department would be headed by an asst. vice president for human relations. A director of women's programs and a director of minority programs would report to this director.

Basically, the parallel directors for women's and minority programs would serve as central administration focus points for assuring that equal access and opportunity is provided to these two traditional class victims of discrimination. The development of new programs, monitoring of existing efforts, encouragement of recruiting, and investigation of possible inequities are among the duties of these proposed offices.

Perhaps Wharton's revised proposal is not utopian. However, Trustee Patricia Carrigan has lent her sincere and conscientious efforts in the area of women's rights to this department proposal. If a women's advocate like Carrigan supports this proposal, other trustees less inclined to research should shed their chauvinist base and hear her out.

The new department will cost the University about $100,000 a year for salaries. In light of probable new requirements from the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare that all universities receiving federal funds have such a human relations program, pragmatics dictates implementing the department now rather than risk the future loss of federal funds.

One possible weakness of the new department is that it reports to the vice president for university relations, an office charged with publicizing the good things about MSU. The integrity of that vice president, Robert Perrin, must be relied upon so that the department can aggressively search out without internal conflict the bad aspects of the University.

Three trustees cannot apologize enough for rejecting the plan Sept. 15 for ephemeral and absurd notions. Conservative Trustee Frank Merriman at least grounded his "no" vote on a concern about spending any more funds for equality.

Trustees Warren Huff, Clair White, and Frank Hartman owe it to the University and the people of Michigan to be fully informed today and vote on the basis of logical analysis. Personal grudges and whims which might have prompted their "no" votes Sept. 15 have no place on campus today.

Hopefully, all trustees will vote intelligently or abstain today. Indeed, the longer the department is procrastinated, the less effective and immediate its efforts at assuring equality will be.

Newest Agnew a real doll

(c) 1972 NEW YORK TIMES NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 — The New Agnew which is being used for this year's political campaign was built by Himmel & Hump of Houston, Texas, the same firm that built the first three new Nixons back in the mid-1950s.

Republican money managers are furious about the cost, which has already reached $7 million, with vital replacement parts still to be delivered. Knute Hump, founder of the distinguished old politician-renovating firm, rejects Republican charges that mismanagement and inefficiency resulted in the cost overrun of $6.5 million.

"Naturally," says Hump, "we added a few million to the price after we got into production. The new Agnew, after all, was basically a government contract."

Most of the added cost, however, resulted from the Republican Party's indecision about what they wanted, he insists.

"When they came down to the plant," Hump says, "the only specification they had was that they wanted something completely innocuous and didn't want to go over $500,000. They said the President was getting a new car at a cost of $500,000, and he thought it silly to pay more than that for a new Agnew, since they would probably trade it in anyhow right after the election."

Hump turned the Republicans over to his partner, Slim Himmel, the technical genius whose name is a household word among renovated politicians. Himmel showed them a new Humphrey he had put together last spring in the hope of making a quick sale to the Democrats. He said he would take off the dove feathers, reduce the noise level, put on the characteristic Agnew nose and let them have it for $500,000 in time for the Republican National Convention.

This was substantially the Agnew that appeared in Miami Beach in August and told reporters they were going to see a different Agnew in the coming campaign.

Flying home from Miami, this Agnew began to talk at extreme length and to buttonhole passengers in the aisle, telling them that Lyndon Johnson had forced him to support policies he hated. The new Agnew, in short, was turning back into the new Humphrey. Somebody at Himmel & Hump had neglected to solder the vital identity ratchet, without which new politicians cannot remember which new politicians they are supposed to be.

There was a factory recall. Republicans were furious. They demanded a brand-new new Agnew with elaborate safety devices.

Slim Himmel is proud of what resulted. The new Agnew, Himmel says, has more back-up systems than the Boeing 747. If, for example, it feels a long piece of alliteration coming on, a red warning light flashes under the eyebrows and a shrill buzzer concealed in the nose is immediately activated, making it impossible for anybody to hear the rest of the speech.

Should either safety device fail, other fantastic circuitry automatically activates a loud amplifier under the lapels. This is programmed to play "The Star Spangled Banner," thus bringing the audience to its feet and averting potential disaster by bringing the speech to a premature but patriotically-satisfying conclusion.

Himmel & Hump hope that the new Agnew will prove so successful that they will get the post-election contract for the next new Nixon. The last new Nixon built by Slim Himmel was the one that led the Republicans' 1958 Congressional campaign, and it always seemed to have a cold.

The new Nixons since then have been the work of Flarb, Bohm and Associates of Nashville or of Pincus's New Wash-and-Election Days Miracles Inc., of Fresno, Calif. Many Republicans are outraged about the present new Nixon, which is a Pincus model.

This, of course, is the ugly fact at the bottom of the Watergate mystery. What the Republicans were really looking for at Democratic headquarters was evidence to confirm their terrible suspicion that the latest new Nixon is actually an old Humphrey in new Nixon's clothing.

TWO CENT'S WORTH

Ticket rule unfair

To the Editor:

During last Thursday's night's broadcast of the "Duffy Daugherty Show" on Channel 6, the Spartan football coach made comments regarding the true benefit of moral support to the team on the field. He pointed out once again that the Spartans can do much better when they know their fellow students are behind them in spirit; that spirit is best expressed through spectator participation in the sporting events at MSU.

Unfortunately, some MSU administrative policies make it difficult for many full-time students to express their full-time support of the Spartans.

First, there seems to be a definite discrimination against transfer students purchasing fall football discount tickets. Though a student might be recognized as a junior or senior academically on campus, he is permitted to purchase only sophomore priority activity tickets. The priority is based on the total number of credits earned at MSU, so theoretically, a transfer student could graduate from MSU with out every being granted senior priority on the purchase of discount football tickets. Does the student's transfer indicate any less enthusiasm for his Spartans now?

Secondly, many hundreds of MSU students would like to treat a nonstudent guest to a great day of football in Spartan Stadium (capacity 76,000). Yet, under the present policy, an MSU student is unable to bring one nonstudent friend to the game, whether that friend be a date, a cousin, or whoever. There are ways of alleviating the problem: illegally borrow a look-alike MSU ID, buy two regular price tickets, or get a spouse — they are admitted free. If the MSU

Athletic Dept. would really like to see student support, they should recognize this problem.

Bring that student section out of its south-end corner out to the east-side 50-yard line. When Chris Schenkel and his ABC sports cameras arrive this season to watch the Spartans gain their Big Ten championship, you'll see the biggest and most enthusiastic student crowd ever.

But perhaps the money income is more important than the student's moral support. Under the present policies, it would appear to be so.

POINT OF VIEW

Capitalism not the answer

By JOHN PODULKA
East Lansing senior

The grape boycott. The lettuce boycott. More rights for farm workers. The grape-pickers had no union, the lettuce-pickers have one they did not ask for. The United Farm Workers now represents one, is trying to represent the other and wants to insure that all farm workers receive livable wages and have decent living conditions.

Are they actually able to do this? Because they are trying to work inside the capitalist system as it exists in the United States the answer is no.

Capitalists exist to make money. Many of them have no indelible connection to any particular type of business and can shift their investments of capital fairly easily. The sort of business or the particular company that receives their investments depends only on which looks like it will show the greatest profit. When the amount of profit expected in a given business goes down, investors will seek out some other area where expectation is better.

To increase the wages and benefits a particular group of farm workers receive means that the profits growers make will go down. This in turn means that the amount of money invested in that growing will decrease. Some land will probably be switched to the production of some other crop. This means that the number of jobs available to farm workers in that area will drop. In addition, since growers will have to pay each individual worker more, they will try to get more work out of him and get by with still fewer workers.

In the case of the "successful" grape boycott, the number of workers employed by the grape-growers went down so sharply that the total amount of wages being paid out was lower than it had been before unionization. Obviously it was not all the grape pickers, but only those who still had jobs, what is there? Practically nothing. Most itinerant farm workers don't qualify for welfare. Even for those who do, the amount of money given to families by our government is hardly what would be considered livable.

And that is one of the evils of capitalism. Any attempt to help the people exploited by the system results in worsening their situation.

In light of this it might appear that the board of trustees decision not to have MSU join lettuce boycott was a good one. This cannot be. It is not good enough to say that the system and exploitation must continue as they are for fear of making things worse.

At the very least, the welfare system in this country must be overhauled so that it provides a decent income. That way, when conditions and wages are improved, decency tells us they must be, those who are thrown out of work that someone else will continue make profits will be taken care adequately. Capitalists must not be allowed to continue their profits, but we cannot allow innocent to be hurt further.

Even better would be to change the whole economic system. Instead of trying to reform the present system, make the inequities a little more noticeable, a new economic system could be established which would serve the needs of all the people rather than those of a small group. The wealth of a country like the U.S. would be quite possible to provide comfortable living for everybody.

Such a system carries the name "socialism." In some manner people of this country have been convinced that it would be bad for them and that only in capitalism their salvation. Obviously this is true.

The Doctor's Bag

by ARNOLD WERNER MD

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at University Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is wanted.

I am a 20-year-old coed with a problem of sorts. Recently, while home from school, I took ill. My mother thinks that everytime someone in the house gets ill, they need a hot, soapy enema. The last time I argued violently, but to no avail.

My roommate at school agrees with my mother, and my doctor said it may not be helpful but there isn't much danger of any harm resulting. I contend that if an enema is a must, it should be neither hot nor soapy.

The role of enemas in medicine has declined in importance compared to what it was earlier in the century. In years past when much less was known, many illnesses were attributed to the large intestine and its contents. There was a theory of illness based on the absorption of bacterial toxins from the large intestine, for instance. The anus, by providing such ready access to the "filth" - containing intestines, became a favorite place to stick in things. Great imagination was shown in the diversity of enema solutions and means of administration. The best one I heard of was milk and molasses which may have been used more for its optimistic expectations of sweetness and wholesomeness than for its therapeutic efficacy.

Little children almost invariably greet an enema with terror and link it with punishment. For your mother to persist in giving you an enema at age 20 is not justified on physiological grounds and it places you in an inappropriately infantile position. Rape is unhealthy no matter what form it takes. Gentle enemas are recommended by physicians in cases of severe constipation and before certain diagnostic or surgical procedures.

During orgasm, a friend of mine passes considerable air from the vaginal opening with accompanying noises not unlike the ordinary passing of gas. While it is true that the phenomenon is associated with some pattern of vaginal contractions, neither of us have encountered it in others.

Would you comment on the cause and relative frequency of the occurrence among women?

During sexual excitement in a woman, the inner two-thirds of the vagina tend to expand considerably in size, ballooning outward. Air becomes trapped in the vagina with inserted penis acting as a one-way valve. With the contractions of orgasm, or any other increase in intra-vaginal pressure, the air can escape not through the vagina but through the rectum. The occurrence of the phenomenon would be dependent upon the vigor of the sexual intercourse engaged in, the position assumed, the anatomy of the people involved, auditory acuity. Be assured, there is no way that I can comment on the frequency of this occurrence. As with most other erotic phenomena, the fact that it can be explained on normal physiological grounds should be sufficiently reassuring, and the need for precise statistical definitions is gilding the lily.

Is there any danger of eating food which has been cooked over a charcoal fire, such as gasoline?

A good charcoal lighter fluid will have the following properties: it will ignite slowly rather than suddenly and explosively; it will not burn with high flame and smoke excessively; it will burn off rapidly and would leave any residual odor. Gasoline is an appropriate fluid to use to start charcoal fires. It is highly explosive and flares very highly. Liquid charcoal lighter fluids should not be added to charcoal fire once the coals have started burning since there is a risk of fluid catching fire and exploding backward into its container. Lighter fluid usually burns completely before one begins to cook so there is no danger from it.

An additional word of caution: charcoal fires produce tremendous amounts of carbon monoxide under no circumstances should they be used indoors. There have been a number of reported deaths from charcoal fires indoors and quite a few of these have come from people who were in camper trailers where the enclosed space is small and toxic levels of carbon monoxide can build up within a few minutes. TWO CENT'S WORTH

Internal group best for C-Ts

The Editor:
It appears that the State News' "Two Cents' Worth" column is becoming a ball park for controversial issues concerning the clerical-technical employees of the University. The letter written by Barbara Parness doesn't get a reply per se, because the University of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) on the front page of the same State News (Sept. 22) fully explains the agency of its supporters, attempts to prevent an early election. Union funds and concentrated publicity combine to make a powerful weapon and it is encouragingly apparent how much we are allowed the flagrant use of this weapon to seep into our, as well as other, teaching-learning institutions. AFSCME might well consider the danger to itself in resorting to testing the exclusion of the less than 20 hour per week part-time employees, temporary employees, student employees, and its many other excuses for further delays on an election. Its screaming only makes it less desirable. It shouldn't be necessary to be reminded that we are employed by an academic institution, that we are essential back-up for the people who are educating today's generation — some of whom might well be our leaders one day. We are not employed by a factory who can raise the cost of its product to cover the luxury of carpeted johns, a four-day week at higher wages, or wasting time wrangling whether or not our job descriptions permit us to perform such menial tasks as making a pot of coffee. The product we're here for is human. Sometimes I feel as though we're all forgetting this, and I especially wonder what kind of part AFSCME, or any other union, think they might play in this setting.

True, perhaps the time has come when the clerical-technical people need an association to look out for their interests, but if so, then let them elect a body from their own group to represent them — not a foreign body. Those of us who have been around campus for the last 10 or 20 years cannot deny, considering the tremendous expansion the University has seen in its student body, employees, colleges, and even housing, that MSU has undergone far less employee problems than most other institutions of equal size and rank. This should tell us something. A healthy balance can be maintained between administration and the clerical-technical employees with our own MSU Employees' Assn. far better than with an external union.

Diversion tactic

To the Editor:

This is in reply to John Podulka's letter last Thursday in the State News. First, I would like to point out that the words "Jewish vote" in Podulka's first paragraph have been objected to by the Anti-Defamation League. There is no Jewish vote. Some Jewish persons vote one way, some another. Secondly, the rise of Israel to a state long preceded the Nazi holocaust. It was engendered by Russian persecutions of the late 1800s. These persecutions have continued to date and as recently as 1952 there was a secret slaughter of the Jewish intelligentsia.

As a state, Israel's position towards the Arabs who fled around 1948 has been rather complicated. Some families have been reunited, and I believe there has been a willingness to discuss reparations for other displaced persons. After 25 years, I think someone who has been displaced should not brood over it, but rather should turn to more productive activities. Practically every family in American came here originally as displaced persons. My own thought is that the young Arabs who are guerrillas are being used by feudal overlords to create popular excitement which causes the Arab peoples to not notice their own poor life.

Bargaining studied

The Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation of the article by Michael Fox that appeared in last Thursday's edition, concerning the Michigan Employment Relations Commission's announcement for an election Oct. 13 to determine the collective bargaining agent for MSU clerical-technical (C-T) employees. However, the third choice on the ballot will read "no collective bargaining," not "no union" as Fox stated. If the majority of those voting that election vote for no representation, it will mean that according to state labor law, no election can take place for another year.

bargaining" votes would leave the CTs without a collective voice, thereby perpetuating our present condition of having to act individually rather than as a group. Past and present history demonstrates that there is strength in numbers. I hope that C-Ts will educate themselves thoroughly on all the ramifications for choosing "no collective bargaining" before the election takes place. I believe that when this is done the logical choice will be to vote for representation by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Nixon Vietnam pullout costly

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — By the end of this week, President Nixon will have presided over the Vietnam War for longer than it took the United States to fight and win World War II. From Pearl Harbor to Japan's surrender it was three years, eight months and one week.

This is, therefore, an appropriate time to look at the record. What have been the costs and the achievements of the Nixon policy in Vietnam over the last three years, eight months and one week?

The direct cost in American lives is 15,243 men killed in action and 5,164 "nonhostile deaths," as the Pentagon calls them — Americans killed in Indochina by such things as aircraft failure, not enemy action. Another 53,375 men have been wounded seriously enough to be hospitalized. Asian military casualties are less certain. South Vietnam has listed more than 80,000 of its own soldiers killed during the Nixon years, and 240,000 wounded; it claims more than 400,000 Communist troops killed and 600,000 wounded.

Civilian victims are much more numerous, although again precision is not possible. A Senate subcommittee has made these estimates for the last 3½ years: 165,000 South Vietnamese civilians killed, 400,000 wounded and 1,850,000 made refugees; 2 million Cambodians were also made refugees. There are no reliable figures for North Vietnamese civilian victims.

From President Nixon's inaugural through the month of August 1972, American planes dropped around 3,750,000 tons of bombs on North and South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. The figure is currently running close to 100,000 tons a month.

According to cautious estimates by Professors Arthur H. Westing and E. W. Pfeiffer the bombs dropped during the Nixon administration have left approximately 7,500,000 crates in Indochina. They have displaced 750-million cubic yards of earth.

Budget figures put the cost of the Vietnam War to the United States since January, 1969, at $60 billion. But that does not include much of the cost of outside bases serving the war or of aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia. The true cost of carrying on the war has probably exceeded $100 billion.

All this has been spent — lives and money and nature — to carry out a stated policy of American withdrawal from Vietnam.

U.S. ground forces have largely been withdrawn. There were 542,000 American soldiers in Vietnam in January 1969. Today there are 36,000. But in other respects the trend is different.

In January 1959, there were 72,000 Navy and Air Force men of the Seventh Fleet off Vietnam and at the bomber bases in Thailand. Today the official figure is 84,000. The number serving the war at the B-52 base in Guam and in other places is not disclosed, but it would bring the total of Americans involved in the war in September 1972, to over 100,000.

The U.S. is now using 200 B-52's in Vietnam, North and South — almost double the number deployed in January 1969. There are 800 smaller U.S. planes, fighter-bombers, compared with 1,000 to 2,000 in 1969. Four aircraft carriers are operating off Vietnam, twice as many as in January 1969.

With the high level of American air activity, substantial losses continue. Since the U.S. resumed heavy bombing of the North last April, the Saigon command has reported the loss of 101 planes. Reports from Vietnam at the number of American airmen missing or captured in that time at 106.

What have we achieved in those three years, eight months and one week, in the war that still goes on?

In the official Washington view the significant accomplishment is that the Saigon government has survived. Despite the massive American ground withdrawal, General Thieu is still in office.

On the other hand, the greatest use of explosive power by any country in any war in the history of the world has not crushed the other side, politically or militarily. The Communists have substantial control or influence in many parts of South Vietnam — probably as much there as in 1969, and certainly more in the other countries of Indochina. The Time correspondent in Saigon wrote this month that the Communists' "military position in the south is vastly better than it was a year ago and is virtually unchallenged in Laos and Cambodia."

In short, three years, eight months and one week of American fighting in Indochina have not achieved stability on our terms. The reason is no secret: We are trying to impose an alien intrusion, against a political force that is the legitimate representative of Vietnamese nationalism. Until we stop that attempt, there can be no stability and no peace.

The other day an American officer in Danang said: "We are really giving it to them with B-52 strikes. Out in the hills around Quangtri, wherever there are reports or two or three people gathered together, they are being hit with B-52's." In terms of military effectiveness, politics and morals, that is where we are in Vietnam."

DuPree, USC's "Tree" in showdown

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

How do you dwarf a tree? It's tough, especially when the tree resides in sunny southern California, home of the massive Redwood forests.

But the tree in this case doesn't shed leaves in the fall. It blooms. And Charles Young, veteran tight end for the University of Southern California and bearer of the nickname "Tree", is in full bloom.

The task of dwarfing the tree rests with MSU's own tree of sorts, tight end Billy Joe DuPree. DuPree and Young have been put in a class of their own by sports writers around the nation and the head-to-head showdown will have a big say in who gets that first-team all-American berth and who gets the second-team honors for 1972.

Young, like DuPree, was applauded by many preseason pollsters as college football's best tight end. Young was a USC representative, along with Spartan safety Brad VanPelt, to the Playboy Magazine all-Americans squad and was also given the nod as the best tight end in the country by Gameplan Magazine.

With 45 catches this season, Young ranks 12th on the career reception list at Southern Cal, ahead of former USC players and now professionals Earl McCullough, Marlin McKeever and Bob Klein.

As a sophomore, Young was on a platoon basis with the USC offense, alternating with Gerry Mullins. "I was the pass catcher, Gerry the blocker," Young proudly states.

In full command of the position as a junior, Young came through with 23 receptions for 298 yards and six touchdowns. For his efforts, he was named second-team all-American by The Associated Press and honorable mention by United Press International. He was also all-PAC-8 by both wire services.

"Young could be the best tight end in the nation," USC coach John McKay said. "He's got the size that is needed to block from his position but finds his true value in his speed. He can go deep as well as short, almost like a split receiver. He should be the best tight end in Southern Cal's history."

Young was a high school all-American in both football and basketball. He also played baseball, tennis and ran track. He turned down an offer to play for the San Francisco Giants, preferring to continue in his football education by attending Southern California.

"Tree" had his best game this year against Arkansas as the underdog Trojans — whose underdog exploits have projected them to the top of the polls as the No. 1 team in the nation — stunned an offensively explosive Razorback unit in Little Rock, Ark., 31-10. Young caught three passes for 51 yards, including a long gainer of 35 yards. The USC tight end also ripped off a 37-yard reception for a touchdown against Oregon State the following week.

"Young is fantastic. . . a super football player," Sherm Lewis, defensive back coach and the man whose job it is to devise a way of stopping the USC gem, said. "I'm surprised they don't go to him more. But when they need him, he's there."

DuPree, at 6 foot, 5 inches and 228 pounds, is the twin to Young in offensive capabilities, serving as a mainstay on the Spartan blocking wall and leader on the team in receptions. The lumbering DuPree has seven receptions to his credit this season for 157 yards.

Last fall, DuPree caught eight passes in a single game against Illinois enroute to a squad high of 25 catches for 414 yards. He accounted for three touchdowns and also the longest pass play of the year for MSU in snaring 61-yard bomb from Mike Rasmussen in the game with Minnesota.

DuPree is playing what would normally be his fourth year of college ball as he was given an extension by the Big Ten to cover the 1969 season he missed with a back injury. In his career, DuPree has caught 53 passes and could conceivably claim the No. 2 spot on the all-time Spartan list this year. He needs only 21 more receptions to move ahead of Al Brenner (73) and insert himself next to Gene Washington (102) as the all-time greatest receivers in MSU history.

"Billy Joe is a very gifted athlete," Spartan offensive end coach Jimmy Raye said.

Balancing act

MSU tight end Billy Joe DuPree (89) will have a chance to display his wares Saturday night when he matches blocks and receptions with Southern California's Charles Young, a tight end of equal preseason recognition. "They're the two best tight ends in the country," Duffy Daugherty has said.

NEW CO-REC TEAMS

Fall IM sports begin

By LINDA DROEGER
State News Sports Writer

The old-fashioned tradition of separate facilities and competition for men and women is out the door according to the chairman of MSU's Women's intramural program, Carol Harding.

"Mass communication, cultural phenomena and style have greatly influenced female participation in sports. In 1962, 2,000 women used the women's IM facilities compared to the 150,000 men and women participants last year," Harding said.

Harding views the Men's and Women's IM buildings as nonsexist community centers devoted to the service of all students interested in recreation.

The IM program offers three facets of recreation: competitive sports with scheduled games; informal daily recreation; and club sports, organized mainly through students and serviced by the IM program.

In competitive sports, games are played within three divisions: the independents, fraternities and sororities, and residence halls. Victors of each division compete for the all-University championship.

For the first time this year corecreational team competition will be scheduled in the independent division.

Women's touch football teams will be sharing the spotlight with men and corec teams evenings at the IM fields.

Volleyball and paddleball teams will also be competing this fall in the three divisions and for all-University championships. Courts at both IM buildings and Jenison will be utilized.

Gilchrist Hall is all-University defending champion in touch football and Campbell Hall is the current volleyball champ.

Offered in individual women's competition are swimming, with eight events, and the basketball free throw. One night of competition is scheduled for each activity to determine all-University champs. No affiliation is necessary to enter.

Club sports are dependent on the initiative of students for organization and development.

"If a student wants to participate in a recreational activity we do not provide, we try to give him or her all the service we can to get the club started," Harding said.

These clubs are either coached by faculty members or supervised by qualified students. Last year there were about 40 clubs ranging from karate and Chinese boxing to parachuting and promenaders.

The majority of student participation is informal. Both the IMs are open daily to fill the recreational needs of the students. Among the many facilities open are paddleball, handball, basketball, and volleyball courts, exercise rooms and pools.

known for his circus catches, specializing in the one-hand grab and moving for extra yardage even after the initial defensive hit has been made on him.

"DuPree is going to make the unexpected catch because of his size," Raye explained. "He's got that 6-foot 5-inch frame and has good range because of it. He can catch the ball without taking the extra step that receivers of smaller physical stature need."

"But people begin expecting him to catch everything. Even the passes that aren't near him people expect him to make a grab on," Raye added.

"Without a doubt, Billy Joe is the best tight end in the country right now," Raye concluded. "Everyone is comparing him to Charles Young, but I wouldn't trade Billy for anyone."

That fascinating and sometimes amusing sport that you might have watched during the recent Olympic games, water polo, is offered at MSU in the form of a club sport.

Presently sporting 12 members and holding nightly practice sessions at Jenison Fieldhouse, the Spartan water polo club is preparing for its season opener 10:30 a.m. Saturday against Kentucky at the Men's IM Building.

Jeri Johnston is player-coach of the team and for those who are novices to the sport, six players plus a goalie comprise the seven man unit whose objective is to try and throw a ball, similar in size to a volleyball, past the goaltender and into a net that resembles that used in soccer competition. Four eight-minute quarters comprise a game.

All of this is performed while strenuously treading water.

The MSU club actually will be participating in NCAA competition with other schools who sponsor clubs, or as is the case with the University of Kentucky and Loyola of Chicago varsity teams.

The end of fall term does not spell the end of water polo competition, however. AAU competition against large Michigan-based schools during winter term and good deal of conditioning mixed in when the schedule is a little light.

The team is made up of basically sophomores and juniors and anyone expressing interest in trying out for the team is invited to stop by practice session which are held from 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Jenison Fieldhouse pool.

PREPARE FOR IRISH

Conditioning aim of harriers

By PAT FARNAN
State News Sports Writer

Conditioning is a vital element in a successful cross country team, and more adequately explains MSU harriers' loss to the University of Miami of Ohio last weekend.

"We just haven't been together long enough," country mentor Jim Gibbard explained. "You've got to be together in good condition to compete effectively. If you're not, you don't have team balance, and consequently, you come up on the short end."

Miami had completed four weeks of training in addition to two meets, and from that perspective had a decisive edge over the Spartans.

But Gibbard plans to have his squad ready for Friday's match with Notre Dame.

"We're working very hard right now, but we've a ways to go yet. The boys are out every morning and every afternoon and we expect to be much better prepared for this weekend's encounter," Gibbard continued.

The Irish will have to travel to East Lansing from South Bend, run the meet, and then drive back the same day. Gibbard mentioned that such a schedule can be very grueling.

"There's no question about it that it can hurt a team's performance. But we beat them in South Bend under the same conditions, so we're not about to take them lightly," Gibbard mentioned.

Though the Spartans have handled the Irish with relative ease the past four years, the Indiana representatives could have a squad to be reckoned with. Notre Dame has a fine tradition of cross country teams, despite disconcerting performances in recent years.

"They have a fine recruiting program and picked up some good freshman potential this year. They also have a fine runner in Dan Dunn who stayed right with us last year despite a fall," Gibbard commented.

Dunn is the captain of the Irish contingent and along with Jim Heard could pose a serious threat to the Spartans hopes. In the words of Gibbard, "Heard was the third or fourth best runner in the state of Illinois last year."

Though few and far between, there were a couple of bright spots in MSU's loss to Miami. Ron Cool, Fred Teddy, Randy Kilpatrick, and Ed Griffiths showed signs of improvement in capturing the top four positions for the Spartans.

Cool defeated brother Rob for the first time since the identical twin combo transferred from Grand Rapids Junior College in 1971. Gibbard was high in praise for his 6-foot 1-inch senior.

"Ron is running very well for us. He's come a long way and could make a big difference for us this year," Gibbard said. Cool traveled the five mile track in 26:08 for fourth place, just one second behind top Spartan finisher Randy Kilpatrick.

Kilpatrick, also a senior and a three-year letter winner, bettered his own personal record for the five-mile distance by almost one-half of a second.

"Randy is a proven competitor under all conditions," Gibbard declared.

Teddy, a L'Anse freshman, also contributed a fine effort, completing the circuit in eight position overall, and third place for the Spartans.

A pleasant surprise in Saturday's action was sophomore Griffiths. Injured for most of last season, Griffiths turned the track in 26:10 for 11th position.

Two of the Spartan's key performers are presently nursing injuries. Ken Popejoy, who ran a disappointing race Saturday, is suffering from tender shin splints while Ron Cool is hurting from a bruised Achilles tendon.

"Once we get through the pain barrier, we'll be all right," Gibbard concluded.

Basketball

Any eligible students wishing a try-out with the MSU basketball team should report 4 p.m. Thursday to 209 Jenison Fieldhouse for a meeting.

Canada edges Russia; hockey series knotted

MOSCOW (UPI) — Paul Henderson, skidding on his belly, flicked in a winning-minute goal Wednesday to give Team Canada a 4-3 triumph over the Soviet National ice hockey team and set up a winner-take-all finale Thursday.

The Canadian victory in the see-saw seventh game ended the eight-match series at 3-3-1.

Henderson's deciding goal came at 17:54 of the last period. He outaged a Soviet defender, lunging forward and sliding past the left of the goal face on his stomach while nudging the puck through goalie Vladislav Tretiak's legs.

Another packed house of 14,000 at Luzniki Sports Palace watched the Canadians take one-goal leads in the first and third periods only to have the Russians roar back with equalizers.

The first period saw the Canadians lead 1-0, then trail 2-1 and reach the intermission with a 2-2 tie.

A scoreless second period heightened the tension.

In the third stanza, Canada went ahead 3-2 on Rod Gilbert's left-handed push at the right corner of the net but Alexander Yakushev equalized at 3-3 with an angled slap from the right side.

Henderson's winning goal came 90 seconds after a free-for-all erupted behind the Canadian goal, nearly emptying both benches for a donnybrook of flailing fists, skates and knees.

Gary Bergman and Boris Mikhailov, who started it, whipped off their gloves and traded pokes. Both were sent off for the rest of the game.

Canadian sportswriters who saw all seven games said it was the worst brawl so far.

MSU insurance policy stirs COGS concern

By GARY KORRECK
State News Staff Writer

The Council of Graduate Students (COGS) Monday expressed concern over the current graduate student travel insurance policy. In COGS' first official meeting of fall term recording secretary Tom Louis, Roanoke, Va. graduate student, reported that under current University policy graduate students and graduate assistants using University vehicles are not fully covered.

"As I understand it," Louis said, "we do have $50,000 liability coverage from the University, but that is only if we have prior permission for use of the vehicle."

Louis also cited a ruling which stipulates that University vehicles are not covered if they are taken more than one state beyond the Michigan boundary.

"Since we are not considered employees by the University we are not eligible for workmen's compensation should we be injured in an accident," he said.

"The only way you can get anything from the University," he continued, "is to sue."

Louis added that the regulations do not "under any circumstances" cover other passengers in the University vehicle. He encouraged all graduates to check with their departments before using a University vehicle and "get permission in writing" from the department head regarding its use.

Other reports were made by COGS president Rob

Menson, Lansing graduate student, concerning graduate student football tickets and Steve Chazen, Lansing graduate student, on unionization.

Menson said that all graduate students who were given freshman or sophomore tickets could exchange them for senior tickets at the ticket office.

Chazen said that graduate students and graduate assistants are not considered employees of MSU and could not unionize.

"We could declare ourselves a bargaining agent," he concluded, "or go on strike to get the university to recognize us."

Other business included a $50 grant request from the Free Store which was defeated and a $600 request from the Natural Science Dept. for funding an awards program which was defeated.

COGS committee appointments were also announced and vice president for internal affairs Ken Howe, Lansing graduate student, reported that a number of positions were still open.

Chazen was appointed chairman of an ad hoc committee to study the ramifications of Article Four of the Academic Freedom Report, which concerns a new judicial process passed in the spring by the University Student Affairs Committee.

The crux of the debate centered on whether the appeals board of the undergraduates and the graduate students would give graduate students competent judiciary. The need for such an appeals board was also questioned.

The first issue of a new COGS newsletter was introduced at the meeting with a report by graduate welfare vice president Billie Andrus, Lansing graduate student, on a recent graduate student survey.

AAUP, MSU-FA CAMPAIGNS

Faculty units step up efforts as vote nears

By BECKIE HANES
State News Staff Writer

As the election to determine if MSU faculty members want a bargaining unit nears, campaigning has increased in both the MSU-Faculty Associates (MSU-FA) and American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) headquarters.

Not only are they competing against each other in the Oct. 23-24 election, but also against the possibility of faculty voting for the third choice of "no union."

MSU-FA is conducting its business from the multiroomed Spartan suite in the University Inn at Trowbridge Road while AAUP campaigns from its members' offices on campus.

In the election, faculty will vote for AAUP, MSU-FA or "no union." There will be one polling place on campus with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) officiating. MERC will select the polling place and compile the list of faculty members eligible to vote.

The victor in the election must have a simple majority of the votes. If this is not the case, a run-off will occur between the top two votegetters.

Campaign plans for MSU-FA include personal contact with faculty members, and a presentation of MSU-FA's platform, not yet formulated. Presently their staff is compiling the results of a two week telephone survey, MSU-FA president Calhoun Collier said, Tuesday.

"The ideas expressed in the survey will be pivotal when the time for preparing a contract comes," Collier said.

AAUP is planning to reach faculty through direct mailings and bulletin board postings. Lester Mandersheid, AAUP president said, Tuesday.

AAUP wants to stress what can be accomplished not what cannot be, he added. He also hoped for clean campaign.

"We cannot conceive of MSU faculty accepting the sort of campaign that involved name-calling or other obnoxious tactics," Collier said.

Officers of the MSU-FA are optimistic about the election. Mary Tomkin, MSU-FA president-elect, said the organization is in the election for the faculty.

"When the salary came out in cold print, last year, people realized the inequities were inexcusable. That is why we're here today," she said.

"It is my opinion that when our faculty determines and understands that professional negotiations is a desirable functional means of improving our situation then MSU-FA will win."

"We will win the election because the faculty will come to understand that we are the only group in the election capable of undertaking negotiations with skill and the full use of resources and support services needed to gain a good contract," Collier said.

Africa discovered on tour

Visits Africa

Billye Suttles, an undergraduate black adviser, visited several West African nations recently and noted the contrasts between life there and at MSU.

By GEORGE WHITE
State News Staff Writer

Many young black Americans are discovering that Africa is a land that has much to offer.

Two MSU students, Billye Suttles and Jackie Wilson, learned lessons about themselves and about Africa by touring several West African nations recently.

"Africans are friendlier with foreigners and with each other," Suttles said after returning to MSU. "Black people have been Americanized enough to think strongly in terms of personal gains. Our 'me first' attitude is very selfish when compared to West Africans."

Suttles, a black research assistant for the MSU African Studies Center, was part of a group of about 100 American students who toured the countries, including Nigeria, Mali and Ghana.

"Many go to Africa and return telling their friends, 'it's beautiful, you just have to go if you can,'" she explained. "But that type of information is incomplete and in many ways misleading."

Though Suttles had a previous background in African studies, she and her entire group were surprised to find they had been stereotyped by African people.

It is generally assumed that all Americans are wealthy, she said, "And therefore black Americans must all be rich as well."

Though the inaccurate American stereotype is typical it is not unchangeable.

"Once you acquaint yourself on a personal level, you'll find that Africans show a strong interest in finding out how visitors are viewing their country. As an Afro-American they were quite sensitive about my perceptions," she said.

West Africa is composed primarily of developing nations and except for Nigeria with its strong oil economy the other nations are financially struggling. But because all the nations are modernizing, the disparity between the developed and undeveloped areas is great.

"I was amazed with the West African metropolis," Suttles said. "There are many large urban areas. Lagos (in Nigeria) and Accra (Ghana) are much like New York City."

Though there are commonalities between West Africa and the Western world there are also differences. The people and the language are obviously different but Suttles cites other differences.

"The pace of life is slower — the emphasis on time is not as great," she explained. "Even the urban metropolis remains uniquely African." Suttles said skyscrapers and the traditional market place are oftentimes seen together.

Though West Africa is quickly modernizing the standard of living falls short of Western standards. Items such as telephones and television are considered luxuries. The cost of living is generally higher, the economy priced Volkswagen — a student favorite — would cost roughly $4,000 in much of West Africa.

During the trip the student group visited West African universities. Education in Africa, as in much of the world, is available on the merit system. Students who fare well on exams go on to college — the government paying the cost.

"The universities were huge in land area," Suttles said. "For instance the University of Cape Coast (Ghana) is about three times the size of MSU. The University of Ghana is larger too, but only the cream of the crop is allowed to go... the process is very selective. There are only about 2,500 students at the University of Ghana."

Suttles expressed most surprise at the discovery of the conservative nature of West Africans. Long dresses are the rule and virtually all West Africans stick to the traditional national attire.

"But the older generation is worried about westerners and their influence on young people," she explained. "West Africans frown on tourists wearing blue jeans. They feel that youth-oriented rebellion or drop-out movements are irrelevant to the African situation. The emphasis is on building, not questioning."

Suttles said she will make another trip to Africa, saying that the surprises she experienced may have kept her from fully enjoying herself the first time.

Wilson, a grad student in anthropology, believes there is a safeguard against surprising disappointments.

You can't go to Africa idealistic, seeking a paradise," she said. "You have to go with an open mind to gain the most from the experience."

Wilson said she had an advantage over students who visited Africa in groups. MSU's "Experiment in International Living" enabled her to stay with a family from Ghana for eight weeks.

"Living with a family heightens the human dimension," she continued. "It allows for a better understanding and insight into the culture."

Do Americans get an accurate picture of West Africa through the news media? Suttles thinks not.

"Even if you're a student of Africa, you don't really learn until you have experienced the land," she said. "As for the person without special studies on Africa — his image of the land is quite warped."

up 28 MILLION ASKED Power firm to cut rate hike

LANSING (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley and Consumers Power Co. Tuesday announced they have negotiated an agreement in which consumers will cut in half the most recent rate increase requested by the Public Service Commission (PSC).

Consumers, which asked August for a $56 million rate increase and a $34 million rate increase until the rate is decided, will ask the commission for a $28 million increase. Kelley, the U.S. Defense Dept. all of whom were challenging the original request, will go before the PSC to urge its approval of the $28 million increase.

Consumers also agreed not to request any more rate increases before Oct. 1, 1973, unless a critical, material or unavoidable change in circumstances occurs.

The agreement also provides no increase in rates for persons who use 100 kilowatt hours or less per month of electricity. Consumers spokesmen said about 10 per cent of the company's 1.1 million customers fall in this category.

Consumers also agreed to cut the penalty it charges for late payment of bills from 4 per cent to 2 per cent and to extend the time limit for payment from 10 to 15 days.

The company also promised not to include the cost of mass media environmental advertising in its new rates and in the next rate increase request it makes unless the advertising "is in direct response to the mass media environmental advertising of others."

If the PSC approves the joint request for the increase, company rates will go up an average of 7.6 per cent and the "average residential customer," who used 437 kilowatt hours per month, will have his rates raised 5.7 per cent.

One of the PSC's three members, William Ralls of Okemos, immediately issued a statement saying Consumers, Kelley, the UAW and the Defense Dept. "are to be commended for their efforts to expedite this important rate case."

Ralls made no commitment to approve the settlement, however, saying the PSC "will make a searching review of all provisions of the proposed settlement to assure that the public's interest is fully protected."

McDivitt said one of the reasons the company agreed to the settlement was because it had "short term cash needs" which had to be met.

AGAINST 'U' WAR POLICY

Antimilitary protest slated

By KATHERINE NEILSEN
State News Staff Writer

Students interviewing with Placement Bureau military recruiters this fall may walk through a constructed war environment of defoliated plants and dead people outside the bureau.

"Anyone who goes there will have to walk over a lot of mutilated, bloody bodies," Lois Gertz, member of Crisis in America, said Monday when the group announced fall plans to organize and unify campus antiwar activity.

The group decided to demonstrate at the Placement Bureau again this year as part of an "anti-imperialism program" designed to show how the University aids the war effort, a spokesman said.

The organization will reiterate demands by demonstrators last spring that MSU take an institutional stand against the war with the program.

The spokesmen gave these reasons for their work toward University adoption of an antiwar stand during the meeting held in the Union:

•Because the causes of war are pervasive throughout American society, persons seeking peace can change only institutions that involve them, such as the University.

•MSU, the "pioneer land grant college," has also been a "pioneer in terms of complicity in Vietnam," and elsewhere and should now make reparations. Besides the MSU Vietnam Project in 1955 to 1961, the University has, or has had projects in "almost every right-wing, fascist government in the world."

•Projects in Iran, Korea, Taiwan and Turkey were cited.

•Though the program has been abolished at some other universities, MSU still gives ROTC rent-free space and gives academic credit for classes in marksmanship and leadership on the battlefield.

•The University buys from war contractors even when it would be possible for them to buy from other sources. MSU purchases Hostess brand baked goods, owned by International Telephone and Telegraph Co. (ITT), one of the largest war contractors, was given as an example.

•A large percentage of MSU-owned stocks are held in war-contracting firms.

•Dept. of Public Safety members have apprehended persons for traffic violations, and when those persons were discovered to be draft dodgers, away without leave from the service, they were arrested.

Adam Zutaut, Dept. of Public Safety captain said Tuesday the department does do this because it is standard procedure in any police department to arrest persons for whom a warrant is in effect.

The University was also hit for failing to consider seriously the study of city and MSU policies relating to the war, the Fact-Finding Committee on University and East Lansing Policies, set up after last spring's demonstrations.

Mitchell Stengel, coauthor of the University committee's minority report, said the study has been complete for three months, with no real action taken.

Stengel said he was especially concerned that the University's ignores the University committee's minority report, which was more critical of MSU than the majority report.

President Wharton sent letters of thanks to majority report authors, but did not send letters to minority report authors, Stengel said.

As evidence that the minority report was being ignored, group spokesmen pointed out two undercover Dept. of Public Safety members present at the meeting.

The minority report had requested the University use only uniformed police and send no police to small political meetings.

Stengel also said that Richard Bernitt, Dept. of Public Safety director, told him in interviews last summer that police were sent to political meeting only for crowd control or when it was suspected that unlawful acts would be committed.

Antiwar meeting

A newly-formed antiwar group called Crisis in America met Monday night to discuss plans to protest the military recruiting of students at the Placement Center.

U-M president praises college grade systems

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — A great university must require high quality work of its students and would be inconsistent with "real life" if grading systems were discontinued and all students were considered academically equal, according to the president of the University of Michigan.

"When we act as though all students are equal we deceive only ourselves," U-M President Robben W. Fleming said Monday night in his annual State of the University address. "Moreover, we are not even acting consistently with our own practices outside the academic arena."

"When we attend the theater or the music hall we know very well that there are differences among the performing artists," he said. "Why, then, should we be so reluctant about rating students?"

"It follows that an academic experience in which one can never fail is contrary to every other life experience which the student will have." Fleming was critical of many of the activist students who have emerged from social science and humanities studies "devoid of the humanistic values which are alleged to reside in the liberal arts and humanities."

"In confrontations, while purporting to have made a supreme commitment to truth, justice and genuine social reform, they displayed incredible intellectual arrogance, an extraordinary intolerance of any view other than their own, and a complete willingness to adopt totalitarian methods in achieving their ends," said Fleming.

In the area of education financing, Fleming said "state universities exist in context of growing resistance to tax increases heavy demands on the public dollar from other areas, and doubts on the part of legislators as to the wisdom with which universities expend their funds."

He said more and more attention is being directed at ways and means of loading more of the cost of education on the individual student, representing "change in our historical attitude that since education benefits society it is appropriate that it be subsidized by society."

Entirely revamped this year...

"THE STARTER"

THE STARTER system is entirely revamped this year. Last year our COMPONENT EVALUATION PROGRAM crew felt that a true component system couldn't be had for $250.00 if it included a tuner. Last year that was true. This year we found that equal performance could be had from the new BSR model R-40A AM/FM stereo receiver matched with the ALM model 202 speakers. And this year, we're using the BSR model 310/x changer. Altogether this system should give assurance that you've chosen a real component system offering top performance and flexibility. Therefore, we've named this THE STARTER system. It's a perfect way to begin in hi-fi if the budget is tight, but the plans for the future are broad. The 50 watt solid state receiver features an F.E.T. (Field Effect Transistor) front end, magnetic cartridge input, dual range tuning meter, main and remote speaker switch, tape monitor, headphone jack, and a walnut cabinet. The ALM 202 (Audio Labs of Michigan) speakers are matched in sound clarity and depth only by their beautiful genuine walnut cabinets. It's a two way sealed, acoustic air suspension speaker, using an 8 inch woofer and 2 inch tweeter. And we chose the BSR 310/x because it has a low mass counter-weighted arm, cue control, anti skating, and a Shure M-75 magnetic cartridge. Total retail value $359.95. Marcos plans broadening of powers

1972 NEW YORK TIMES NEWS SERVICE

MANILA, Sept. 26 — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said Tuesday that he planned to exercise broad legislative and judicial powers under the martial law announced over the weekend.

He said in an interview that he intended to clarify the status of American businesses and land ownership in the Philippines, if necessary, through decrees that would have the effect of legislation.

Later, in a broadcast, he announced a sweeping land-reform program, proclaiming the entire country a land-reform area.

Attributing the current national emergency partly to discontent among farmers, he termed land reform "basic to the entire reforms we must make in the new society."

In another move Tuesday, the government cleared the English-language national daily, The Philippines Herald, to resume publication. When martial law was invoked early Saturday, all newspapers but the Daily Express, which is linked to the Marcos administration, were closed.

In the interview, held in his office, Marcos said that the publishing rights of six other daily newspapers would be withheld indefinitely.

Marcos said that martial law would be necessary until "We have completely dismantled the entire apparatus of the Communist party" and ended the violent and subversive insurrectionary activities that he has cited as the chief reason for the proclamation of martial law.

The president indicated in the interview that martial law might continue at least until his second term in office ends at the end of next year.

The actions that he said he would take in the economic sphere are expected to go far toward allaying apprehension evidenced among Americans here with regard to the future of the American economic stake in the country as a result of recent Philippine Supreme Court rulings.

Marcos indicated in the interview that it would be the policy of his government:

- To permit those holdings whose titles have been nullified by the Supreme Court to be disposed of over a long period of time.

- To permit foreigners to act as directors or serve in executive management positions of certain kinds of companies that the Supreme Court has said could not employ aliens.

- To interpret the Philippine retail trade law in a way that would permit the bulk sale of oil to industrial users.

- To facilitate foreign exploration for oil in the Philippines by not requiring oil companies to obtain leases but instead allowing them to operate on service contracts with the government.

Auditions open for BAC plays

The Black Arts Company (BAC) is holding auditions for three one-act plays at 7 p.m. today and Thursday in the Tower Room of the Union. This audition is open to all students.

The plays include: "Black Dramatis", directed by Kaye McDuffie, Detroit sophomore; "The Toilet," the winner of an Obie Award for best off broadway play of 1964 written by Amiri Imamu Baraka and directed by G. Les Washington, Milan graduate assistant in the Dept. of Theater; and an original play written and directed by Gerald Lemmons, Detroit senior.

The productions are scheduled for Nov. 2, 3, and 4 in the Fairchild Theatre.

Election plans offered

chairman of the task force, presented these recommendations to the Steering Committee Monday at its first meeting of fall term.

The Steering Committee was the body which originally created the task force after verbal disputes and charges of improper procedure were levied at the handling of last spring's student at-large election to the Academic Council.

The very first student at-large election held fall term 1971 was also saturated with judicial appeals.

Student elections in the individual colleges were not free from controversy either.

Since each college determines its own method of selecting its representatives to the council, there has been a lack of uniformity and cooperation.

In fact, nine of the 16 colleges have yet to select their student representatives to the Academic Council for this fall.

After discussing the recommendations, the Steering Committee decided to present them to the student members of Academic Council, as soon as they are all elected, for action and suggestions.

If the students react favorably, the recommendations will probably go back to the Academic Governance Committee for approval and then to the Academic Council and through the normal channels for changes in the Bylaws for Academic Governance.

As one member of the Steering Committee pointed out, however, the recommendations will only be a temporary solution to some problems.

The question of the need for at-large student members; the question of the overlapping powers and duties of the three student government groups on campus; Academic Council, ASMSU and COGS and the question of a comprehensive student judicial procedure have yet to be answered.

At any rate, the success of student participation in the Academic Governance will be determined next

May as the two-year experiment comes to a close.

All of these factors will be taken into account when the decision is made whether or not student participation will continue.

and carrying a backpack. When found, Molenda was wearing only pants, a t-shirt and a brown sweater.

Also missing from the body were Molenda's wire-frame glasses and a hearing aid. All identification and money was removed from the body.

Johnson described Molenda as a young man with few friends. He was a student at Lansing Community College and worked part-time at the State Journal.

President of the Lansing Chess Club, Molenda was regarded as a good local chess player.

Police are interested in talking to anyone who might have noticed Molenda on Grand River Avenue Sunday night. Molenda was 5 feet 6 inches, with long brown hair and had a full beard and mustache.

Sellers' new film hurts

Peter Sellers' latest film "Where Does It Hurt?" continues his decline as one of the more inventive comedians on the screen.

In "Where Does It Hurt?" Sellers turns to spoofing the practices of the medical profession. Unfortunately for the film, the subject was better handled in last year's "The Hospital."

Sellers, who fancies himself as a successful Woody Allen with the ladies, portrays the corrupt hospital administrator Albert T. Hopfnagel. His major concerns are making money, seducing his "all too dumb" nurses, and blackmailing his rebellious staff.

The humor of the film is supposed to be derived through the plight of an unsuspecting patient who comes to the hospital for a seemingly simple chest X-ray. What follows is, of course, a successful operation for an ailment that never existed. Hopfnagel calls it preventive medicine.

The rest of the film is just as obvious. The patient realizes that he has been duped by Hopfnagel and sets out to get him ousted.

By BILL MECHANIC
State News Reviewer

Peter Sellers. In the same way "The Hospital" depended on George C. Scott to carry its weaker parts, so depends "Where Does It Hurt?" on Sellers.

Sellers, however, is not equal to the task. The hilarious Peter Sellers of "A Shot in the Dark," no longer is able to communicate his humor.

As the fumbling detective in "A Shot in the Dark," Sellers gave his audience a character to identify with. His humor was more subtle and less dependent on ethnic jokes and tiresome situations.

After "The Pink Panther," which continued the role, Sellers seemed to rely on the same characterization regardless of the role. The result was movies like the disastrous "Casino Royale" and "Alice B. Toklas."

Comedy depends on originality which brings to the audience a fresh perspective to enjoy. The great comedians have been able to alter their situations effectively enough to communicate their humor over and over.

Sellers, it seems, does not have that sense of depth to continue with the same heavy-handed characterizations. Albert T. Hopfnagel never really comes to life on the screen, and thus neither does the film.

"Where Does It Hurt?" looks like a movie made for television, where the viewer is not as discriminating in his or her humor. Flat characters, ethnic jokes, and awkward situations seem better suited for that media.

Sellers needs to show more vitality in his next outing to make us forget this one. If not, his fans will be doomed to watch his first two films on the late shows and wonder whether those successes were not just "shots in the dark."

"Where Does It Hurt?" is playing at the Spartan Twin East Theater and the M78 Red Drive-In.

Philharmonic director

Zubin Mehta will conduct the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra next Wednesday in the Auditorium. The orchestra is one of the world's newest.

Concert series opens with Israeli orchestra

One of the world's youngest symphony orchestras, the Israel Philharmonic, will perform under the baton of Zubin Mehta at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 3, in the Auditorium.

A Lecture-Concert Series "A" attraction, the concert will present "Symphony No. 2" by Israeli composer, Joseph Tal, "Sinfonia Concertante in E-Flat for Violin, viola and Orchestra, K. 364," by Mozart and "Symphony No. 7 in D Minor, Op. 70," by Dvorak.

Featured as soloists in Mozart's "Sinfonia" will be Liam Taub, concert master, and violinist Daniel Benyamini, leader of the orchestra's viola section.

The Israel Philharmonic was founded in 1936, making it one of the world's youngest. Originally a haven for musicians fleeing Europe, the orchestra is now composed primarily of musicians born and trained in Israel.

Zubin Mehta, in his fourth year as musical adviser to the orchestra, has gained international recognition as the musical director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic and through has numerous recording with orchestras around the world.

A native of Bombay, India, Mehta received early violin training from his father who was a concertmaster and later conductor of the Bombay Symphony Orchestra. At 16

Mahta began conducting concerto accompaniment for his father.

Tickets are available in advance at the MSU Union ticket office.

Brazilian works shown at Kresge

"Brazilian Primitive Paintings," a unique exhibit of the work of 25 artists from Sao Paulo, Brazil, is now showing at the Kresge Art Center Gallery and will continue through Oct. 15.

Organized by art history graduate student, Edna Anderson of East Lansing, the exhibit is the central event of Brazil Week on campus.

"The common denominator in the paintings," Anderson explained, "is the desire of the artists to communicate their experiences in their lives and what their particular region their roots — mean to them."

"The artists," she said, "share a serenity, gentleness, tranquility and love for all things."

Anderson emphasized that "primitive art is not just version of fine art by untrained artists. The primitive is just as much an artist as the academician."

Women discuss center

East Lansing women are hoping to obtain increased funding from the city to expand their program at the Women's Center, 547 E. Grand River Ave. At their meeting Monday, approximately 30 women discussed programs for self defense, and rape and pregnancy counseling.

Women's Center eyes support of funding plan

By DEBBIE CALKINS
State News Staff Writer
Representatives of the Women's Center hope their revised funding proposal will get support from the East Lansing Human Relations Commission, putting them one step closer toward funds for rent and expanded programs.

Raising the monthly rent has been a continual problem at the center which could be remedied if the commission at its Oct. 4 meeting recommends the city council approve the proposal.

In its original request this summer, the Women's Center asked the council for $2,400 to relocate in a larger facility, pay rent and further develop services.

A proposal revising session is slated for 6 p.m.

today at the center, located at 547 E. Grand River Ave.

The importance of women knowing how to defend themselves on the streets was stressed at a center meeting Monday. Walking in pairs at night for protection both on campus and in East Lansing, was also highly recommended by several women.

Margaret Solomon, karate instructor, and Maureen Honey demonstrated techniques of self-defense. Honey, who has received her blue-belt, said she took up karate because, "It seemed like a very useful skill to learn. You get healthier and feel more in tone. When I walk around I don't feel afraid anymore."

Some women at the meeting displayed an interest in participating in rap groups centered on issues such as monogamy and lesbianism. The center will be offering the rap groups to create an awareness of women-oriented problems.

Rape and problem pregnancy counseling is another concern at the center because more women are needed to help provide the services. Therefore, training sessions are planned for October.

One woman advised against hitchhiking because, she explained when a woman hitchhiker is involved in a rape case, "it won't stand up in court."

"Rape is usually planned," another woman added, and occurs between noon and 6 p.m.

The counselors explained their job is to support the victimized woman during police questioning and trials to give her psychological support.

More problem pregnancy counselors are also needed at the center. These counselors provide women with information on abortions, and other alternatives such as giving the child up for adoption. They also deal with the emotional problems of the woman.

The Women's Center is working on additional projects to earn money towards rent and services such as a benefit concert on campus, film showings and asking for donations.

The center is open most afternoons and evenings for women to drop in for talk, study, music and inquiry about information or for coming to meet others.

Drives attract student voters

If newly-enfranchised student voters are not registering to vote, it is not for lack of opportunities in the off-campus area, according to voting officials in Lansing, Lansing township and Meridian townships.

The three areas that have noticeable student population report that they are having "very good response" to efforts to go out and reach unregistered students and younger nonstudents.

In Lansing, 5,481 new voters under the age of 21 have been added to poll lists since the 18-year-old vote was passed, according to Helen Stanton, supervisor of voter registration. Lansing has a total of 67,691 registered voters, she said.

Students living in Fee, Akers and Hubbard halls and in the Twyckingham apartment complex area fit into Meridian Township.

Using booths at registration and in the residence halls, Meridian township officials report that they have registered more than 900 students to date. Approximately 6,000 students living in that area are eligible to register, she said, but statistics are complicated by the large yearly student turnover.

Lansing township registration officials say they have few statistics at present, since their registration facilities are scattered out in several fire stations, but the number of young voters is "average."

We will be able to tell better when voter registrations are over on Oct. 6, but we're pleased with the response to our registration drive," said Ruth Rolfe, Lansing Township clerk.

WNERS-TENANTS TO MEET

Housing code changes eyed

By KAREN ZURAWSKI
State News Staff Writer

A major effort to place tenants on a more equal footing with landlords will come before the public next week.

The East Lansing City Council has reserved a public hearing Tuesday to consider landlord and tenant ordinance changes to a package of two ordinances changing the city building code.

The ordinances, which would change the number of persons allowed to live in a home and bring closer supervision of rental activities, were first released in summer after nearly 10 years of study and work.

A basic change provides for a nine-member housing commission which would enforce and supervise housing, building and zoning codes, make studies and recommendations to the city and supervise any city escrow accounts set up for rent payments or security deposits.

Other duties include mediation and arbitration in landlord disputes, investigating and promoting low cost rental housing programs and developing standard lease clauses.

Included in the changes are provisions to license all rental units with dwelling or rooming units available for more than 30 days a year — insuring an inspection of all units before the license is granted.

Renewal of licenses would be yearly, and failure to comply with housing standards of safety, upkeep and cleanliness could constitute grounds for removal of the license until corrections are made.

If a license is suspended from a landlord, who has renters at the time, provisions are made to allow the tenants to pay their rent to the city.

The city would act as an escrow agent for the owner, collecting the monies, pending reinstatement of the landlord. With reinstatement, the monies would revert back to the landlord, minus service charges to the city for its part in the matter.

Appeals of a decision by the housing commission or building inspector, are possible for the landlord within certain time periods, the housing commission serving as a board of appeals.

The Ordinances also state that the city treasurer may receive or disburse payments of rental housing security deposits, in an escrow situation leaving details as to when, how and where unclear.

A clearer definition of the rights and responsibilities of the landlord and tenant also are provided in the ordinances. Landlords are supposed to provide adequate, clean and sanitary dwellings and maintain them in that manner. The tenant, however, also has obligations, according to the ordinances, that he must fulfill in maintaining the facilities.

Under the proposed ordinances, the definition of a family has been modified, restricting it to "one persons, two unrelated persons, or two or more persons related by bonds of blood, marriage or legal adoption living together as a single housekeeping unit, with a single set of kitchen facilities."

A single family residential dwelling, then, could not house more than one family plus two unrelated persons.

Ann Arbor restricts ads above city

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — An ordinance which was passed unanimously by the Ann Arbor City Council Monday night prohibits aircraft from pulling commercial advertisements on streamers over the city.

Councilman Bruce Benner introduced the measure which he said was prompted by complaints from residents of his ward who were concerned about noise and safety.

Benner's ward includes the University of Michigan stadium, over which commercial airplanes and helicopters often pull advertising banners on football Saturdays.

GM says low-lead gas needed for 1975 models

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — General Motors (GM) has developed exhaust emission systems for its 1975 models which will work successfully only if unleaded or low-lead gasoline is used, GM President Edward N. Cole said Tuesday.

Cole said his company has been able to meet federal emission levels for 1975 and 1976, "but only with prototype systems in experimental cars at low mileage."

In an address prepared for a meeting of the American Petroleum Institute, Cole said GM will need help from the government and the petroleum industry to meet the exhaust emission standards.

Cole said GM has "narrowed down our developments to the two dual catalytic converter systems which appear to have the best potential for meeting the standards." A catalytic system acts to chemically convert pollutants into harmless vapors as the auto's exhaust gases are passed through it.

"The successful operation of our 1975 emission control system depends on our continued development and the availability of unleaded gasoline with low contaminant levels," he said.

GM has already begun recommending the use of 91-octane fuel in its 1973 models, Cole said. He also presented the petroleum industry with ingredients GM needs in its gasoline to make the emissions systems work.

Even with fuel that meets its specifications, GM will have to specify replacement of the catalyst components possibly at two-year or 20,000-mile intervals, he said, although the government has not said if it will allow a catalyst replacement prior to 50,000 miles.

Once again, Cole outlined an industry request for more time to meet federal guidelines. An industry request for a one-year extension of the 1975-model guidelines has been denied.

"Much more progress is required to get from carefully-tuned experimental systems to mass-produced hardware that not only functions in the hands of our customers but also meets the federal requirements. More importantly we need more time to properly develop and test these components and systems."

Council

Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves gives a disapproving look to voting tallies as City Clerk Margaret Fulton calls the roll on the Model Cities funding. The council approved the action.

Model Cities gets budget OK

Model Cities community service programs will continue for at least another year in Lansing. The Lansing City Council voted Monday to appropriate funds for the various community service projects in spite of charges by Mayor Gerald Graves that budgets submitted by Model Cities were "grossly inaccurate."

Health care, legal aid, drug counseling, and financial assistance programs, which are available to Lansing residents, including MSU students, have been operating for two years in the Lansing area. They have been subject to heavy criticism by Graves in the past.

The 21 contracts were passed in a relatively calm vote, with only Councilman William Brenke voting against each one. Brenke explained his repeated "no" by saying that he had not had time to review the 300-page list of contracts sufficiently before voting.

Councilman Joel Ferguson, chairman of the Model Cities Liaison Committee, said he thought a list of synopses had distributed to each councilman should have been sufficient.

Graves said many of the contracts he had reviewed contained "inaccuracies" that were inexcusable in a budget. He had suggested early Monday that the council delay action on the contracts, but the council chose to consider the contracts that evening.

"This council has been trapped too many times into approving something without having any idea of what was approving," Brenke said, as he explained his opposition.

Brenke said he had not received copies of the contracts until Monday afternoon, only hours before he was scheduled to vote on the funding.

Capital Capsules

THE DEPT. OF STATE Highways has begun posting violation notices on an estimated 15,000 billboards along Michigan interstate and primary highways.

The notices warn that the billboards will be removed by the department if their owners do not bring the signs into compliance with state regulations within 60 days after the warnings are issued.

MICHIGAN ATTY. GEN. FRANK Kelley Monday charged that his Republican opponent had played "sleight-of-hand election year politics with Michigan's senior citizens."

Griffin is "flooding the senior citizens of the state with literature on phony bills which he has dredged up for election year" to mask previous opposition to higher social security payments for the elderly, Kelley said.

He said he would, if elected, propose legislation to increase the amount of money earned without losing Social Security benefits and to provide full benefits for widows.

Kelley Tuesday accused Griffin of failing to vote on pension reform legislation during a meeting of the Senate Finance Committee.

"What is so disturbing is not just that he isn't devoting attention to the matter but that he is failing to do his job while claiming the exact opposite — that he is staying in Washington to keep up with his Senate work," Kelley said.

GOV. MILLIKEN ENDORSED Tuesday the Senate Appropriation Committee version of a bill increasing the bonding capacity for the Michigan State Housing Development Authority.

PRICE BOARD WARNED

Hidden auto profits feared

DETROIT (UPI) — United Auto Workers (UAW) President Leonard Woodcock has warned the Price Commission that some automobile companies may try to spend more in "unnecessary areas" to counterbalance high profit margins.

Woodcock said, in a letter to the Price Commission made public Monday, that he drew this conclusion from a survey done by McKinsey Co., Inc., for a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

The McKinsey study, according to Woodcock, said "the companies in the auto industry and their suppliers indicate that their profit margins are very close to the allowable limit," mostly due to sales records.

"These companies indicated that price rollbacks to avoid profit margin rule violations would probably adversely affect their public and consumer images."

"As a result, some suggested they may increase expenditures in some nonessential areas such as research and development in order to maintain profit margins below the allowable limit."

The Price Commission has ruled that prices cannot be hiked if the resulting sales would push a company's profit margin beyond the average of its two best years between 1968 and 1970.

Spokesmen for General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. said they had not yet seen Woodcock's letter. Fred G. Secrest, Ford Motor Co. vice president and controller said, "I know of no discussions with consulting firms on this subject. We certainly aren't trying to waste money."

Woodcock singled out Ford in his letter, repeating an earlier statement that the UAW "has very serious questions" about the "essentiality" of the 83 percent increase recently claimed by Ford in hourly basic pension costs.

The implication was that Ford may have made unnecessary contributions to its pension fund in order to inflate its costs.

Ford has denied any increases in its pension fund, claiming that a 60 percent increase was due "almost entirely to benefit improvements negotiated in 1970."

Woodcock urged the commission to refuse to consider any cost increase claimed by a company seeking a price boost, unless the company is willing to make its cost details public and subject to verification and public hearings.

The Price Commission has so far denied the Big Four automakers' request for price boosts on 1972 models.

3 public meets slated for candidates' forums

Three public hearings will be held in October to acquaint voters with the candidates running for county offices, the county board of commissioners and the board of trustees.

George A. Colburn, co-chairman of Project: City Hall, announced the hearings this week in a special effort to publicize often neglected county races.

MSU Board of Trustee candidates will meet the public at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 11 at the John A. Hannah Middle School auditorium.

Candidates for county clerk, prosecutor, drain commissioner, treasurer, register of deeds and sheriff will discuss the issues at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 18, in the Hannah Middle School auditorium.

Also at the school auditorium will be the Oct. 25 hearing with County commissioner candidates from the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th and 19th districts.

Project: City Hall, a nonpartisan organization, has asked candidates to prepare a 250-word statement outlining their goals and reasons for running, which will be made available to voters at the hearings. The candidates also will answer questions from the audience.

The Project group includes East Lansing citizens and was organized in 1971 by Colburn to promote more interest in local politics.

Police hold 9 men following concert

Nine people, all nonstudents, were arrested on various charges Monday at the Cheech and Chong performance at the Auditorium.

Five East Lansing youths were arrested on charges of malicious destruction of property in three separate incidents. Three other men were arrested on charges of possession of marijuana.

A 21-year-old man was arrested for attempting to sneak into the concert, police said.

Police estimate that about 2,000 people attended the fund-raising effort for M. Robert Carr, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the 6th Congressional District.

"This is the very gut of the no-fault bill," he said, "and if you eliminate this section you have completely destroyed the concept of no-fault."

He said there must be a limit or threshold, beneath which no compensation can be obtained, or else court costs which result from accidents would continue, thereby destroying the attempt to lessen administrative costs.

Donald E. Holbrook Jr., a Clare, moved to delete the section in an amendment asking the membership. "What does this bill mean by serious or permanent?"

He suggested it would exclude an individual from collecting if his or her injury were not considered serious or permanent.

"What if someone suffers an injury that causes pain, suffering or something else for 15 years?" he asked.

Holbrook was assured by the individual would receive first party benefits, but he conceded that the words "serious" and "permanent" would have to be tested in court, "to establish a definition that lawyers can hang a hat on."

Holbrook explained the wording was a result of months of compromise by the insurance committee and the Michigan insurance industry, trial lawyers association and labor.

His sentiments were echoed by the insurance committee chairman, Matthew McNeely, D-Detroit, who praised the bill as good but likely to be challenged in the courts.

Lee Matthews, manager of the Michigan Assn. of Insurance Companies, said that deletion of the controversial section would "preserve all the court problems that we have been trying to eliminate."

"The only place you can balance the cost of the additional no-fault coverage is to eliminate frivolous litigation that occurs under the fault system of insuring, he said.

"The issue is whether you will have an effective barrier to small suits," Matthews said.

Makes plans

Leslie Scott, the vice president for development, talks of his plans to raise funds for MSU.

1st VP for development to organize alumni gifts

By JOHN LINDSTROM
State News Staff Writer

MSU's newest administrator is Leslie W. Scott, the first vice president for development.

"Development basically means fund raising," Scott said. "But the total concept also includes things like long-range planning for the University."

"Our primary job now," he added, "is to set up some sound organization for our fund raising projects. I'm still getting reacquainted with the University. There have been many changes since I was last here 16 years ago."

Scott has held many different positions, both with MSU and in private business. He was president of Fred Harvey, Inc., which later merged into Amfac, Inc., before returning to MSU as President Wharton's consultant in April 1971.

"President Wharton asked me to act as his consultant to help create a development program here," Scott said.

The first major project being coordinated from Scott's office is a Capital Gifts Program.

"The program will be going as soon as we have finished updating our alumni records," he said, "which could be in another 24 to 36 months."

"The first project that will benefit from the Capital Gifts Program will be the Performing Arts Center. But there's a lot of work left in planning the center, such as finding a site."

Since the creation of his office the Office of Alumni Relations now operates under Scott. Previously it operated under Jack Breslin, executive vice president of the University.

"MSU's alumni are still a very young group of people, very mobile and don't contribute as much," Scott said. "We hope that in two years when our records are updated they'll be a little more mature and a little more concerned about their University."

Along with organizing his office, Scott has also been meeting with alumni and friends of MSU to try to get help for development.

"We're doing well. This year it looks as if our gift totals will be up 10 per cent," he said. "But I can't take credit for that."

"I have a great love affair with MSU," Scott added. "And I hope that I can make a contribution to it."

students than noncollege under-30 voters.

While previous studies indicate only 30 per cent of the noncollege under-30 voters will go to the polls, 70 to 80 per cent of the eligible college voters will exercise their rights, he said.

National polls may not take this into account, Atkin said.

Atkin referred to a study he conducted last spring during the Presidential Preference Primary and predicted that two of every three MSU voters favor McGovern.

In addition, Atkin believes the Lou Harris poll released Monday will help McGovern. The survey showed the South Dakotan trailing Nixon by 59 to 31 per cent.

"The fact McGovern trails Nixon is not as important as the fact that he is closing the gap," Atkin said. He indicated that a Nixon lead of 60 to 40 per cent is not significant since as the incumbent he is expected to show well.

"It becomes important when the lead is either greater or smaller than anticipated," he said. McGovern, initially hurt by his huge deficit, will benefit as he does better than expected.

Atkin said the only harm the current Nixon lead could cause McGovern is a drying up of campaign contributors who still perceive a Nixon victory.

He testified in favor of a bill which would require pollsters of publicly released polls to give the sponsor, a percentage of sampling error, date of the survey and questions asked.

He called this "the best strategy for protecting voters from manipulative or substandard polls."

Atkin agreed with Zolton Ferency, associate professor of criminal justice and currently a Michigan Supreme Court contender, that a conflict of interest may exist in the Detroit News' use of Market Opinion Research polls.

Market Opinion Research conducts polls for the Republican party in the state as well as for the Detroit News.

While a Democratic contender for governor in 1966, Ferency unsuccessfully tried to obtain an injunction prohibiting The News' use of the polls on the grounds of a conflict of interest.

A News spokesman denied, however, any conflict of interest exists. "As long as Fred Currier (Market Opinion Research president) is accurate, there is no problem," he said.

The spokesman added that the polling organization, which has been used by the paper for 15 years, has "been within 1 per cent in every election." He said The News would only drop the organization if it were no longer reliable.

Uruguay fights for peace

Security officials who studied the documents have generally arrived at two alarming conclusions. First, the organization, which limited its previous operations to the capital, may be desperately trying to set up a second front in the interior.

Secondly, they may be trying, with some success, to force the government's repressive tactics to boomerang. Captured guerrillas, for example, will implicate innocent citizens under interrogation. The clarity with which security officers followed up such tips would then stir up public resentment to the point of revolution, the avowed goal of the Tupamaros.

The story of the Tupamaros, their rise and apparent fall, constitutes one of the grimmest chapters in South America's blood-filled history.

Taking their name from Tupac Amaru, an Inca rebel executed by Spanish conquistadors in the 16th century, they began operating in 1965 with the ultimate goal of sending the country into total anarchy.

Initially, by staging imaginative and often humorous robberies, and then distributing the money to the poor, they attained widespread popularity as electronic Robin Hoods.

But beginning with the cold-blooded execution of American adviser Dan Mitrione in 1970, through a series of macabre bloodbaths, their image plunged drastically.

The escalation of violence climaxed on April 14, the "Bloody Friday" of Uruguay, when several coordinated attacks around Montevideo killed two policemen, a high naval officer and a former cabinet undersecretary.

Since then, Bordaberry's "hard line" has received the approval and cooperation of most Uruguayans, where the previous repressive attempts by the administration of Pacheco Arco had not.

But the hard line approach has created a dangerous amount of public tension.

World attention so far has focused only on the dramatic aspects of Uruguay's internal war. Filmmaker Costa-Gravas ("Z"), for example, is currently turning the saga of the Tupamaros into a full-length movie, "State of Siege."

But the Uruguayan experience offers some fundamental lessons that may have international significance, particularly at a time when world leaders are searching for means to stop the wave of post-Olympic terrorism.

POCOCK IS REPRESENTATION

That's what people got at McDonell Hall Monday night: Representation. And at Hubbard Hall Tuesday. Because Jim Pockock was there. Asking questions, listening to their views and exchanging ideas. That's what he'll do tonight at Brody. And that's what he'll do when he comes to your dorm, too.

Isn't that what representation is all about?

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 — The House Agriculture Committee approved Tuesday a bill that would partially compensate farmers in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas who sold their early wheat at low prices because they were unaware of the magnitude of Soviet wheat purchases that were to send prices soaring. The vote on the bill, which was vigorously opposed by the Nixon administration, was 23-10. Twenty Democrats and three Republicans voted for the bill; all 10 negative votes were cast by Republicans. The three Republicans voting for the bill all come from wheat states — Robert D. Price of Texas, Keith G.

Sebelius of Kansas and John M. Zwach of Minnesota. Only the constituents of Price and Sebelius were likely to have suffered from low-priced sales of early wheat. In the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota, where the harvest is in late summer, most farmers have benefited by price increases stimulated by the Soviet purchase of 400 million bushels in July and early August. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Graham Purcell, D-Texas, who is in a close fight with price in a district that has been formed from combining their former districts.

Price's vote for his rival's bill was regarded as an indication that the charges of windfall profits reaped by grain exporters from the Soviet-United States grain deal have become a political issue in Texas and other early harvest states.

During hearings last week into these allegations by the House agriculture subcommittee on livestock and grains, headed by Purcell, Price said: "I regard these hearings as politically charged... I think it is a herring hunt."

There is considerable doubt whether the bill will do anything to score political points against the Nixon administration and Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz, because last week the Senate Agriculture Committee rejected identical bill on a vote, 7-1;

The only member to sponsor the Senate bill was Humphrey of Minnesota, though had there been record vote, he had proxy of Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota the Democratic Presidential nominee.

Estimates vary on cost of reimbursing farmers who sold at prices so that they did not, even an increment of federal payments, get a parity (a theoretical fair price takes account of farm costs.) Sen. Humphrey estimated the cost possibly $50 million; National Farmers Union a statement Monday estimated the cost at $68.4 million.

The actual cost will only be determined after examining the sales made out to farmers' elevators and grain dealers.
