Nation gives Nixon landslide win

Michigan supports President

Presidential Nixon swept Michigan's 109 electoral votes, making the state a solid part of the 4991 margin that gave him the presidency.

McGovern urges "loyal opposition"

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Nixon except to traveling reconnoiter, rerouting from the state capital to the nation's capital. He held his own, however, and promised benefits of one high in the heart of Dixie.

But in the eyes of the polls and the returns, the nation voted for Nixon. The Holland, Michigan Republican presidential candidate was victorious in the nation's largest state capital. He made the victory speech in the nation's capital.

The national revolution carried control of the Senate and Republicans toward the White House, it was said. But it would not be enough.

The vote, which was a sign of the times in Michigan, was a clear indication of the nation's desire for change.

In defeat, McGovern urged his followers to "play the role of the loyal opposition," and said there was no question that his campaign had pushed Nixon to victory.

Four more years

President Nixon and his wife, Pat, waited to see whether voting after early Tuesday at Detroit, Calif. Returns show Nixon assured of another term by the largest voter margin in American history.

Environmental issues were a major focus of interest at Monday's East Lansing City Council meeting when a draft resolution establishing an Environmental Quality Task Force was put to the council by the planning commission. The draft resolution called for a review and recommendations.

The draft resolution was drawn up by city attorney Hannah Laidlaw at the request of the planning commission during an October study session.

The council was asked to give the resolution its approval. It was approved and the resolution was sent to the planning commission for review and recommendations.

The council now plans to hold a public hearing, according to George Griffiths, the planning commission chairman. Griffiths said the public hearing would be held on November 1st.

Calkins said the council would like to see the planning commission announce an agenda for the city's future.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans have won the House and Senate in the November 4 election, capturing seats to put a majority of the seats in the hands of the opposing party.

Democrats controlled the House, 253 to 165, and the Senate, 51 to 49.

The House of Representatives and the Senate were overwhelmingly Republican.

Tenants, landlords must seek end to off-campus house fires

It is way past time that students living in off-campus houses become concerned with the safety of their living conditions. There have been four fires in student houses in the last eight months and no one knows when and where the next one may occur.

So far damage costs from fire have exceeded $526,000. There have been seven injuries. Luckily no lives have been lost, but the possibility of loss of life exists as long as fire hazards prevail.

In many instances there are just too many people living in the space provided. Many landlords rent space to a seemingly unlimited number of students. While this is cheaper for the student in the short run because individual rent is less, the overcrowded conditions create a hazard for which a rent cut cannot compensate.

Under the present East Lansing housing ordinance, only houses licensed as rooming houses can be inspected on the initiative of the fire department. Ultimately, many owners fail to register their building as a rooming house to eliminate costly inspections.

One solution to the crowded conditions would be the construction of more and better low-cost housing. If this were available, the financial aspect of finding a place to live would relieve much of the congestion.

More stringent licensing procedures would also help, but after inspection a landlord could easily revert back to the poor but more economical living conditions until the next inspection.

As the city ordinance stands, inspections cannot be made unless requested by an occupant. A provision in the proposed city housing ordinance will restructure the rating requirements, possibly allowing for inspection of all buildings on a yearly basis. The present situation makes it imperative that such a provision be passed.

But none of these regulations would really be necessary if tenants were more scrupulous about their living conditions. If a tenant feels that the building is not in proper maintenance, a call to the fire department for an inspection could easily clear up the situation.

Pamphlets on fire safety drafted by the fire department are distributed to all fraternities, sororities, and cooperatives each fall, but few pay attention to them.

Many of the houses are old and therefore require scrupulous attention to fire hazards. People not concerned about living conditions should be concerned about them. When poor living conditions exist it becomes the responsibility of the tenant to report it if the owner to report it if it is corrected or responsibility must be shouldered now before someone is killed.
The Doctor's Bag

by Arnold R. Werner, M.D.

A woman may be addressed as "Mrs." or "Sister," but she was not called "mrs." or "sister" in the medieval period. The term "mrs." was not in use until the 18th century, and "sister" was used as a religious title. The term "doctor" was originally used to describe a medical practitioner, and since then has become synonymous with the title for medical professionals in many countries.
Wastewater directors hold training seminars

Managers of wastewater treatment plants were meeting this week at Kalamazoo Center to learn the latest principles of technology and management.

The training program is part of a g r a n t f r o m the Environmental Protection Agency and is the pilot program for two additional seminars to be held at the University of Michigan and Michigan State University this month. The operators of one-half dozen wastewater treatment plants are participating in the training.

Conference talks were given by the following people: Frank Lapensee, manager of the City of Kalamazoo treatment plant; and Dr. Robert K. Schut, assistant professor of engineering at Michigan State University.

during the training sessions, a single seminar was held on the subject of the new development in sewage treatment techniques. The seminar was held on the campus of Michigan State University.

Other seminars were devoted to topics such as the use of new technology in sewage treatment, the role of the state government in controlling sewage treatment, and the importance of public education in sewage treatment.

The seminars were sponsored by the Michigan State University Water Resources Research Institute and the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

The conference was attended by wastewater treatment plant managers from throughout the state, as well as representatives from local government and environmental groups.

CHANGES PROPOSED

Traffic rules studied

Last week's official announcement from the Downtown Ann Arbor police department that the city will be moving to a new traffic management system has sparked a debate among Ann Arbor residents.

Under the new system, residents will be able to use one-way streets and make turns in any direction, allowing for more efficient traffic flow.

However, some residents are concerned about the safety of the new system and the potential for increased accidents.

The city has been working on the new system for several months and has already made some changes to the downtown area.

Now the city is looking to the public for feedback on the new system.

The city has set up a website where residents can submit their comments and suggestions.

The website is available at www.annarbor.gov/newtraffic.
Indians face aid shortage at MSU

By BILL TAYLOR
State News Staff Writer

One of the biggest problems of the North American Indian student at MSU is that the University has not given the Indian the financial aid that it should. According to John E. Winchester, coordinator of the American Indian Student Union, "We have not contributed financial aid to..." This is true for many campus minority groups. However, a lot has been done this past year: full term about the problems of financial aid to the American Indian student. The North American Indian Student Union has supported the efforts of the North American Indian Student Union by obtaining financial aid from the university. They have also attempted to raise funds by holding events such as dances and sales.

The committee on institutional cooperation at MSU and the University of Chicago has been working on the five-year development of the center. The center is expected to provide followings for the various programs for high school and college students: that is, fellowships for five-year study, aids to teachers, research grants, fellowships for five-year study, and fellowships for five-year study. The committee on institutional cooperation is involving their anthropological, archaeological and native social science departments.

Lad explores West, falls in with 'Bad Company'

By BILL MECHANI

State News Reviewer

"Bad Company" is, quite possibly, the best rock picture made last year. It never tries to impress in the "epic" style of "The Godfather," or even a movie like "The Clockwork Orange," or even a movie like "The Godfather," or even a movie like "The Clockwork Orange." Rather, it is honest and human and, with its heart in the right place, "Bad Company" tries to evoke real emotions, not just visual images.

In this respect, the film is similar to "The Godfather." Mike Blakesyes, both movies concern the family business and the complications that arise from it. They are both, for the most part, morality plays that operate on the same level and that, in their own way, mean the same thing.

In "Bad Company," the story takes place in the mid-1960s, during the Vietnam War, and involves the family of John Swain, who loses his life in Vietnam.

The story of "Bad Company" is told through the eyes of John's younger brother, Mike, who is a member of the band. Mike's story is told through flashbacks, and the film is filled with music and songs that help to set the mood.

The film is directed by Barry Levinson, who also coauthored the script. The music is by the band Bad Company, and the film is a celebration of their music and their lives.

Barry Brown, right, gives Dave Dixon, a young man trying to make a name for himself in the music industry. Mike Brown, left, portrays the leader of a young punk rock band.

"Bad Company" is currently playing in theaters across the country.
Mozart opera will run 4 days

The opera, "The Magic Flute," with its colorful and captivating music, will be presented in English by MSU's University Theater on the campus of Michigan Technological University in Houghton.

"The Magic Flute," the only opera Mozart ever wrote to a libretto by Emanuel Schikaneder, is a fairy tale of love, treachery and forgiveness. The操作 will be presented as a partnership between Michigan Technological University and the University of Michigan. Approximately 1,500 tickets will be available for both performances.

The opera will be presented on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. with Sunday's performance at 3 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the University of Michigan Campus Union Box Office, at tickets.michigan.edu, or by phone at 763-7529.

The production is the third of four opera productions scheduled at Michigan Technological University for the fall semester. Previous operas have included "Don Giovanni," "Die Zauberflöte," and "Rusalka." The upcoming opera is "The Flying Dutchman."
Racketeer seized in Miami by FBI

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Meyer Lansky, reputed underworld financial genius, was taken into custody Thursday by FBI agents at the Atlantic International Airport following his departure during which an adjoining hotel was searched.

Lansky, 71, was met by agents who boarded a Bausch airplane and escorted him from his first-class seat to the FBI offices in Fort Lauderdale.

Facing federal charges of running and directing scores of U.S. gambling syndicates, Lansky was booked at the airport on a U.S. Attorney's grand jury holdout for a high bond. He denied all charges.

"This isn't my first time in jail," Lansky said, adding, "I'm just here to see what's new in Miami,FL.

But Lansky was caught away in succession by officials in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Panama; Peru, Bolivia; and other Latin American countries. The exact nature of his activities there was not revealed.

"But Lansky is not suspected of running any gambling operation here," said a Miami police official.

The FBI admitted that Lansky had visited the Miami area before but said he was not known to be involved in any criminal activity.

In the Michigan Supreme Court, the court was presented with a legal decision that could have far-reaching implications for the future of education in Michigan.

The issue in the case was whether the state's constitution requires that the legislature provide adequate funding for public schools. The court's decision will determine whether the state has met its constitutional obligations to provide a free and quality education to all children.

The plaintiffs, a group of parents and educators, argued that the state has not provided adequate funding for public schools, while the state defendants, including the governor and the state legislature, contended that the state is providing adequate funding.

The court's decision in this case will have significant implications for the future of education in Michigan, and it is expected to be closely watched by educators, parents, and policymakers across the state.

Coleman, Levin lead in early tally

Mary Coleman and Charles L. Levin took an early morning lead in the State Supreme Court race with 3 per cent of the vote. The Two candidates for the Republican nomination received 21 per cent and 16 per cent respectively, in the East Lansing, Lansing, and Ingham county areas.

The election was held in the early morning hours of today, and the race for the Republican nomination was decided in favor of Coleman, a Republican from Battle Creek, with 21 per cent of the vote. Levin, a Democrat from Salem, received 16 per cent of the vote.

The vote was tallied in the courthouse in the early morning hours, and the race was decided with a close vote of 2 to 1 in favor of Coleman. However, the vote was marred by irregularities and disputes.

Two a.m., tally showed Mr. Coleman with 13 per cent, Mr. Levin with 8 per cent, Mr. Jondahl with 4 per cent, and Mr. Heyser with 1 per cent of the vote, with 5,220 votes reported.
