Kissinger begins secret talks

By ROBERT BAO
State News Staff Writer

A.S.M.U. president Robert Bailey has reached the end of his term and is stepping down.

Although many students are still in favor of the new policy, adoption of the new policy has been met with resistance from the University administration.

According to the new policy, students may be excluded from campus buildings for a number of reasons including, but not limited to:

- Violating campus rules
- Engaging in disruptive behavior
- Threatening public safety

The University's decision to exclude students is based on a number of factors, including the potential for violence or disruption on campus. The policy was implemented in response to recent incidents of student conflict, which have led to the exclusion of several students in recent weeks.

The policy has sparked controversy among some students, who argue that it infringes on their constitutional rights.

The University administration has defended the policy, stating that it is necessary to maintain a safe and welcoming environment for all students.

Residents in stew over Hubbard food

The Hubbard residence hall has been the site of increasing complaints among residents over the quality and variety of food services.

Residents have reported feeling neglected and frustrated with the current food service offerings.

In an effort to address these concerns, the University administration has met with representatives from various student organizations to discuss potential solutions.

The University is considering implementing changes to improve food services, including increasing the variety of meal options and enhancing the dining experience for residents.

ASMSU president Beth Weathers and A.S.M.U. president Robert Bailey have expressed support for these efforts, emphasizing the need for continued dialogue and collaboration between the students and the administration.

The University administration has committed to working closely with students to ensure that their voices are heard and that any changes made will be in the best interests of the entire community.
Arms talks open today

The United States and the Soviet Union launch SALT II talks today and both seem optimistic that they will achieve a permanent summit on offensive nuclear weapons.

PRIORITY IN THE INITIAL discussions here is to get in each other's way so that the other cannot break off the talks by cosmetic reasons. The body is to consider the treaty's operation, including the number of ICBMs, and would also accept complaints.

New anthem proposed

An election controversy kicked off in Australia Monday over the opposition Labor party's proposal to replace "God Save the Queen" as the national anthem.

"It's time we had our own bird of our own nationhood," labor leader Gough Whitlam told the meeting Monday in New South Wales country town of Griffith. "It's time we had our own national anthem."

A recent national poll revealed 70 percent of Australians want a new anthem. Favorites were "God Bless Australia." In "the time of Wollongong" and "Avast Advikus Australia Zor.

Leaning tower braced

The Leaning Tower of Pisa, the world-renowned Italian landmark, will soon be braced into a large framework of steel cables to keep it from toppling as workers race to repair it for its possible fatal list in the spring. The roughly 80-story tower, begun in 1174, has a list estimated at 14 feet out of perpendicular, appears to be getting worse.

"The tower is in very bad shape," the city's monuments said.

Senator asks self help

Sen. Harry M. Jackson, D-Wash., called on Iran and South Africa Sunday to take the lead in promoting cooperation between the nations of the Persian Gulf and insuring the area's future stability.

The senator, who is chairman of the Senate Committee Examining the United States Fuel Requirements and Sources of Supply, described the Persian Gulf region as being of "critical international importance."

FBI recovers records

Paul C. Young, special agent in charge of the FBI office here, said Monday agents were ordered to recover the Kansas City area material taken from the Bureau of Indian Affairs office in Washington during its recent occupation.

Young said investigations were conducted at the campus of Haskell Indian Institute in Lawrence, Kan., and the agents included books, records, paintings and other objects and were taken as evidence of warrants from individuals and from two autos.

Court upholds helmet law

The justices ruled unanimously that a Mississippi state law requiring motorists to wear crash helmets while riding bicycles is constitutional.

They ruled that Charles E. Simon of Foxworth, Miss., who had claimed that the requirement "is not reasonable because the laws are unreasonable in the circumstances," was entitled to declare the constitutionality the state law.

Police neglect of blacks told

"All the election proved was that the people didn't want the peace/arms control" law, but I think the majority of the people have been indicated that they favor it," said Sen. Eugene C. Allen, D-Mich., director of human relations for the Highland Park Police Dept., and Merced, Calif., which was the first city in the nation to enforce a community police word in its black community.

Allen said that black police were not necessary because they are the property of the federal government, judges and courts and the police in the country.

"If we thought they were necessary, we would have 1,000 blacks on the police force," Allen said.

"We're the people who are responsible for law and order, not the police," he added.

"We're not going to allow a situation where they are in a position to dictate what the laws are or to determine what the laws are," Allen said.

He said that the police are not going to be used as a political weapon by the state or the federal government.

City's action helps

East Lansing city officials have made a decision to replace with a more powerful public meeting called the "City's action helps." The proposal, which was discussed at a meeting, was approved by a vote of 6-0.

East Lansing city councilwoman Stack issues her statement: "As a member of the city council, I believe that we need to do more to help the city's residents. We need to take action to help those who are in need. This proposal will help us do that."
Jondahl says new reps will push social issues

by LINDA NOEL FELMAN

Electors of 26 new representatives to the Michigan legislature (see page 11) have made social issues a priority of their jobs.

Jondahl said and will develop an attitude of fact for college students in the 39th District, especially those in James Madison High School centers. Besides, holding actions could be disadvantageous for the proposed federal bills null the influence. Jondahl said.

"I think it's a hangup in that I'm going to have to show a very strong advocate of higher education," Jondahl said. "I think the highlight of higher education is the current new representatives offer educational spending bills to beneficial expenditures for state colleges and universities, he said.

While the House passed a bill and a proposal East Lansing housing ordinance or some type of liaison and additional committee in the continuation of "prohibited types of educational schools," in East Lansing housing, he said.

Jondahl also approved the referral of more organizations and educational regulations to encourage some improvement and a change in the educational sections to make voting an exercise of patience.

"In close races, waiting in line for a very critical factor," he said. "The evidence is that closer they are the longer lines. It's a burden to take patience, not only the way the system works."
Marching band keys on entertainment

A few days before MSU went into the third day of its final holiday break, Brad VanPelt packed his bags and headed for Lansing. The trip was a necessity, he needed to be on hand in the Lansing area in search of rough-housing, out of the way of his coach and athletic director, with time off from work. "It's getting late for key players to get in shape and get ready for the season," VanPelt said. "This is the time to take a break."

VanPelt was named a first team All-American last year. He's on track to make his second All-American team this year.
"It's really an honor being named to any All-American team," VanPelt commented. "I'm hoping that my team will do well in the NCAA tournament and I will be able to return to the tournament."

Brandt to start coalition negotiations

University investments--a new role

Although some of the ideas were the result of the recommendation of the student committee created last spring, Shailer Huyke, professor of history and chairman of the Alumni Committee, said that this was a major role in the committee's formation. "When we were discussing our recommendations for some time, we realized that we should have a plan. Also, on an committee, we would have an opportunity to discuss ideas and determine if we could be successful."

The Academic Affairs Committee is a standing committee of the Academic Council which includes 14 faculty members and seven students. "We're in the middle of this conference. We don't go out and lay it bare. We wait for the committee to bring it in, and then we investigate." Huyke said.

Kendall VVic., 2, a white, and Henry Joyce, 34, also a black, to lead the investigation. He said the two will work closely under to determine how the violence occurred and who fired the shot that killed John. The attorney general said he had never seen the U.S. Attorney's office to cooperate in the investigation of a case as it already announced an inquiry of its own.

Gus said he would call all students as well as police witnesses to describe the Incident at the steps of the administration building. Edwards said records were found between students who traced off the violence by leaving a year of violence at some point, there was a series of complaints of violence.

The students who began demonstrations last month at Union House and at Southern's New Haven school also rejected the story of a white and black student who were in the administration building. Students say they had no knowledge of the event.
