Drive hinges on council vote

By PATRICIA ALLEN

The People’s Cooperative Council plans to meet tonight in downtown East Lansing to kick off and record the first annual “alternative community fund” drive. The meeting could prove to be a major stumbling block to these plans if the city council decides not to give the council’s request.

The people’s council is attempting to raise $150,000 to fund community agencies not covered by the East Lansing Community Fund. The key to this fund is the belief that placing funds into the community will give the people’s council’s ability to actually fund community groups that exist.

The program started by the Volunteer Bureau to help low income individuals and families hurt by the recent inflation潮 flooded out its ten forms last year of operation Monday.

Persons can move from job to job but find it hard to set themselves up again. Another benefit is the making of the tax forms. Many persons, according to Peoples’ advocacy, think the forms are a means of the different tax deductions.

Two other overlooked deductions are medical expenses and interest expenses having less than $200 income, and Peoples’ advocates volunteer in two more than four hours of volunteer time.

Greek rejects U.S. aid

Greece has decided to reject U.S. direct grant aid scheduled for this year, the government announced Monday.

Direct grant aid scheduled for this year totaled $115 million.

The Greek government now will rely on credit sales of military or other goods for most of its U.S. aid requirements. The action is seen as an attempt to limit the risk to the U.S. government, during debate on aid bills, of the embargo on sales to Premier George Papadopoulos.

Irish guerrillas threatened

Two more powerful bombs ripped through downtown Beirut on Monday and security chiefs warned that tough anti guerrilla restrictions will be imposed on Northern Ireland unless the violence is halted.

There were no casualties in either of the explosions, which came as political and church leaders unanimously condemned the weekend bomb blitz across the province which left three priests dead and thirty-two people injured.

At least 638 people have died in the violence which now spread across Northern Ireland in the past 3 years.

Judge ejects defendant

Bills hurl a Rachael Magee, defeat and housing, from a San Francisco courtroom Monday in the prosecutor started his opening statement in the trial by noting the black box on the defendant and kidnapping charges.

Black militant Angela Davis was acquitted last June in a 13-week trial in U.S. judge San Jose on charges of supplying guns and conspiring in the courtroom kidnap raid.

Study links pot to cancer

A report published in London says marijuana smoking may be just as likely to cause cancer as tobacco.

The Swiss Institute for Experimental Cancer Research exposed some 1,300 specimens of lung tissue cultures to both tobacco and marijuana smoke for 45 days and found that both produced abnormalities of a potentially cancerous nature.

The Swiss institute reports, however, that because the smoking of marijuana cigarettes is so difficult, the effect would be minimal. The institute said more air was needed in the marijuana smoke than those who smoked cigarettes made of tobacco.

Industrial output advances

Industrial production, one of the key indicators of the nation’s economic strength in December, the Federal Reserve Board reported Monday.

The board said that its index which measures total output in manufacturing, mining and utilities gained by 0.8 per cent last month compared with one per cent lower in October.

The December advance closed out 1972 with production figures higher than the previous year.

The index stood 20 per cent higher at the end of the year than at the end of 1971.

Students offer income tax help

More than 30 students have volunteered their services to the IRS Income Tax Volunteer Service for students and other groups, testifying against Pelkey, chief editor, and this year’s URI president.

The programs started by the Volunteer Bureau to help low income individuals and families hurt by the recent inflation潮 flooded out its ten forms last year of operation Monday.

Persons can move from job to job but find it hard to set themselves up again. Another benefit is the making of the tax forms. Many persons, according to Peoples’ advocacy, think the forms are a means of the different tax deductions.

3 items await decision of Academic Council

The East Lansing City Council will hold a public hearing during its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. today to consider whether to proceed with a cooperative project to build a University Student Center, a counseling and health services center.

The council, located at 617 E. Grand Ave., is now under its funds from the federal government awarding the center.

An information room is also proposed for the undergraduate interdisciplinary courses and the religious education of the Center.

The city made a recommendation to the council to proceed with the proposal.

PH. D. job market improves

By LAURA MULLER

The full-time employment market was brighter this past couple years, the total graduate enrollment at Michigan State University has increased from 12,000 in 1970 to 15,000 in 1972, and this year's outlook is even better. According to the Graduate School, the number of new graduate students is 15 percent above the average for previous years.

While the full-time graduate market was brighter this past couple years, the total graduate enrollment at Michigan State University has increased from 12,000 in 1970 to 15,000 in 1972, and this year's outlook is even better. According to the Graduate School, the number of new graduate students is 15 percent above the average for previous years.

The public's sights of the nation's higher education system, however, are not bright. A new survey of employers' and institutions' opinions was conducted by the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES). The survey found that employers are not satisfied with the education of new graduates. They are concerned that graduates are not prepared for the workplace and that they lack marketable skills.

The results of the survey are alarming. Only 30 percent of employers said they were satisfied with the education of new graduates. This is a significant decrease from the 40 percent who were satisfied in 1970. The survey also found that many employers believe that graduates are not prepared for the workplace.

The survey results are troubling. Employers are concerned that graduates are not prepared for the workplace and that they lack marketable skills. This is a cause for concern and action. The higher education system needs to address the concerns of employers and provide a better education for its students.

Will Wharton have a better idea??

Eldorado

President Wharton has the opportunity to bring University and public influence and ideas to his Board of Visitors, as a member of the Ford Motor Co. board. Though it will be easy for some students to accept a post with Ford because of its influence and regard for the war and the economy, Wharton's action should be withheld pending his actions on the board.

There is some question whether a public member or representative can actually speak for the public. Often this is true, but Wharton will be able to bring influence and ideas because of his close contact with the public, University officials and policies.

In addition to his relationship with influential powers and public interests, President Wharton would be bringing experienced knowledge in economic and sociological matters that can be very pertinent to the policies of Ford.

All the fees that he receives from Ford will be paid directly to the University. And it will allow him to work solely for the good of the public without being influenced by personal financial interest, but this financial independence must be balanced by independence of thought and action.

His appointment is beneficial to the University, as a public spokesman, to oppose the Ford war policies of using more safety devices on the automobiles to the ends for which the money may or may not be appro

Although a one-man opposition against the power of Ford may seem futile, his influence and position to the students could be crucial in any outcome.

What should be expected of him in a university president, a member of other boards of directors, and someone who has been continuously involved with the public he should be able to handle not only the public but various private interests in a wise and imaginative, yet down-to-earth cl

It should be given to charge Ford with change, not to have Ford change him.

His appointment is an opportunity to test what the public and University would like Ford to hear. He will be in a position to decide what type of board member he would like to be.

Student traffic plan needs some revision

The hold card policy of the All University Traffic Committee violates basic individual rights. The traffic committee hold card policy violates the University policies because it allows students to appeal before a hold card is issued. It violates the right of innocence before proven guilt. Therefore, it should not be a hold card system.

Students given a traffic violation have five days to pay the fine and appeal. Even if the student appeals the decision, he must pay the fine within five days or receive a hold card. This is the same fault with the present system but as to whether the student knows he has received the ticket. If it is blown off the windshield or removed the student does not know he has been ticketed and because no previous warning is issued.

Some things can be done now to better the traffic appeals system. The time allowed for appeals should be extended to at least ten days. The process of hearing appeals should be speeded up by the Student Traffic Appeals Board.

In addition, the traffic appeals court should provide the Department of the Office of Registrars to look at students appealing tickets, so from one point to another, it is hard to give hold cards to students who are not appealing but are later paid in cash by the court.

Thus it is safe to conclude that though the University State is a great place, Mr. Wharton will bring to the University a great deal of influence and ideas that can be very pertinent to the policies of Ford.

Kissinger tries his best

JAMES RESTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 11- The new Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, may be looking a little tense and a little less than he was yesterday, but he still seems to have the same tough look in his eyes and the same bony expression on his face. The more key a person is to the president, the better he looks in that position, and Kissinger is no exception.

He will be confirmed by the Senate, and no one doubts that he will be a success. He is an experienced diplomat, and he understands the political players and the political communities, and will be able to work with them. He has known them for a long time; he has been the Secretary of Defense for a long time and has been a key player in foreign policy.

Yet stays on in Paris and tries to do what he was ordered to do by the president. In any office, of his own experience that is a problem, and Kissinger is no exception. He has been at the center of foreign policy and controlled the only player that can all of the sudden and the only player that can all of the sudden kissinger, the man who is best to be able to do the job.

Great Issues presents variety of perspectives

By SUSAN ADER

"Discourse contains not in seeking new landmasses but in having new ideas..." This is what the author of the book is trying to convey.

A kaleidoscope of perspectives awaits the student in a Great Issues course, and this semester the student is exposed to a broader approach in education.

The student is expected to think on the issues, not just to listen to the speaker. For example, the instructor will present the students with two different points of view on a topic, and the students are expected to discuss the pros and cons of each point of view.

Krupka emphasized that, in a Great Issues class, it is important for the students to think critically and to be able to analyze different perspectives.

"We want students to be able to think about different viewpoints and to be able to evaluate them. We want them to be able to think about their own beliefs and to be able to articulate them," Krupka said.

I'm impressed by the fact that the instructor is not only presenting different points of view, but also encouraging the students to think critically and to be able to express their own beliefs.

The students in the Great Issues course are expected to read a variety of materials, including articles, books, and websites, and to participate in class discussions.

"We want students to be able to participate in discussions, to be able to ask questions, and to be able to express their own ideas," Krupka said.

Moog foresees future of electronics in music

By ALEX McGHEE
Staff News Bureau

Alton, Ill. (AP) — Robert Moog, the man who revolutionized music out of the laboratory and into the concert hall through the invention of the Moog synthesizer, died Tuesday of cancer. He was 70.

Moog, who was considered one of the greatest inventors of the modern era, had been working on his music synthesizers for more than 30 years. He was best known for his work with electronic instruments such as the synthesizer, which he called the "Moog synthesizer." He was also known for his work with the Moog theremin, which he used extensively in his compositions.

Moog was born in New York City in 1915. He began his career as a music teacher and composer, but eventually turned to electronic music. He developed the Moog synthesizer in the 1960s, and it quickly became popular among musicians and composers.

Moog was the first to use electronic music in a concert hall setting. He used the synthesizer to create a wide range of sounds, from the softest to the most intense. He was especially known for his work with the theremin, a device that allows a musician to control the sound of an electronic instrument by moving their hands.

Moog was a true pioneer in the field of electronic music, and his work has had a lasting impact on the world of music. His synthesizers were widely used by musicians, composers, and performers, and his work continues to inspire new generations of musicians.

Efi I. Kamaras, a professor of music at the University of Michigan, said Moog was a true innovator who changed the way we think about music.

"His work was groundbreaking," Kamaras said. "He introduced a new way of hearing music, and his synthesizers were a true revolution in the world of electronic music."

END TO CASHIER ERRORS

Grocer computer aid

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

A computer aid for cashiers at Meijer stores was introduced Thursday by Chris Daniels, president of Meijer.

The new cash register system, which can cost as much as $15,000, will be in use in the downtown store. The new system will allow customers to purchase multiple items in one location.

The system, which will be introduced to all Meijer stores in the near future, was developed by an employee of the company.

The new system will allow customers to purchase multiple items in one location, which will save time and money.

WASHINGTON, D.C.--April 17 and residents of the nation's capital, was a day of unusual events. In various parts of the city, on the streets and in the homes of the residents, there was a sense of excitement and anticipation. The day was filled with activities that were unusual and unexpected, adding to the sense of wonder and curiosity among the people.

The day was marked by a series of events that were planned and organized to create a unique atmosphere. These included the staging of a play in a local theater, the holding of a public meeting in a community center, and the hosting of a concert in a local venue. In addition, there were several spontaneous happenings that added to the overall sense of excitement and anticipation. These included the appearance of a mysterio...
