Viet peace may spur new rivalry

JOHNSON (AP) — Vietnam peace talks must be accelerated Thursday, or the United States and South Vietnam may be facing a new era.

The United States and South Vietnam have been in talks for more than two years. But the peace talks have been slow and have not produced any agreement. The two nations are facing new challenges, such as the North Vietnamese military buildup and the possibility of a new War.

A long list of conditions on a proposal for building an East Lansing Cable CommunicationTransmission Wednesday night at the meeting.

Mayor Paul L. Milliken, in response to questions from several groups, indicated that the city's cable ordinance would be rewritten to cover any questions, and provision would be made to handle them.

The mayor promised to have the city's cable office ready for the opening of the new cable system. The city's cable office would be located on the first floor of the city hall, and would be open to the public.

The city council also approved a resolution that would be sent to the Federal Communications Commission, asking for the city to be included in the national cable program.

So tomorrow the killing will end and the treaty will be signed. But there is little cause for celebration when there was only death and degradation in war. There is only a sigh of relief that the war—at long, long last—is over.

Let this be the final ending.

RACIAL WAR CHARGED

Stronger black unity urged

By JIMMY BARFIELD
State News Staff Writer

The black community in America is burning. In Atlanta, a black church burned. In blacks, a southern civil rights activist said Wednesday: "All my black friends are in Atlanta and we will tell you, every black church in Atlanta was burned."

The activist then went on to say that in America to try to avoid the kind of legislation being proposed by Congress the black community must redouble its efforts and organize among their own people. He said, "In Atlanta, there was not a single black church that did not burn."

The activist also said that in Atlanta, a black child was burned. Bradley said that the child was burned because he was ashamed of black leaders who had let him down. Bradley said that the child was burned because he was ashamed of the black leaders who had let him down.

Bradley's remarks were in response to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's report on the rioting in Atlanta. The report stated that the rioting was caused by black leaders who had let down their people.

Bradley said that the rioting was caused by black leaders who had let down their people. He said, "We cannot let the black leaders who have let us down continue to lead us."

Bradley's remarks were met with applause from the audience.

PIRGAM INVESTIGATION

FDA toy study blasted

By JOHN LINDSTROM
State News Staff Writer

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has released a report which blasts the organization for failing to protect children from unsafe toys.

The report, released by the PIRG (Public Interest Research Group), states that the FDA has failed to take action on unsafe toys, even after receiving complaints from consumers.

"The FDA has been slow to act on complaints about unsafe toys," said PIRG's executive director. "This is unacceptable and we demand better from the FDA."

The report states that the FDA has received thousands of complaints about unsafe toys, but has taken no action to address the problem.

"It's clear that the FDA is not doing enough to protect children," said the executive director. "We demand that the FDA take action immediately to ensure the safety of the products that children are playing with."

The report calls on Congress to hold hearings on the issue and to pass legislation to ensure the safety of toys for children.

"We need Congress to step in and protect children," said the executive director. "The FDA is not doing its job and Congress must act."

The report concludes by urging consumers to be cautious when purchasing toys and to report any unsafe toys to the FDA.

"We urge consumers to be vigilant when shopping for toys," said the executive director. "If you find a toy that you believe is unsafe, please report it to the FDA."

The report has been widely criticized by the toy industry, which claims that the FDA's actions are driving consumers to buy foreign-made toys that are even more dangerous.

"The FDA is trying to protect children," said a spokesperson for the toy industry. "We disagree with this report and believe that the FDA is doing everything it can to ensure the safety of toys for children."

The report has been endorsed by a number of consumer groups, who say that the FDA needs to do more to protect children from unsafe toys.

"The FDA needs to do more to protect children," said a spokesperson for a consumer group. "This report shows that the FDA is not doing enough and that Congress must act to protect children."
L.t. governor outlines duties

Michigan

Lt. Gov. James Brickley recently outlined some of the duties the lieutenant governor faces.

"Traditionally, the lieutenant governor has been part-time and has had no formal role in legislative sessions," Brickley said. "However, the governor's role in legislative sessions has expanded over the years." Brickley said that he would be responsible for a number of duties, including:

- Voting on bills in the Senate
- Serving as presiding officer during legislative sessions
- Acting as governor in the event of the governor's absence
- Serving as a member of various state agencies and boards

Brickley said that he would work closely with the governor to ensure that the state's needs are met.

Counseling urge in abortion cases

Abortion counseling has been a sensitive issue in recent years. The Michigan Supreme Court ruled that abortion counseling is constitutional. However, some anti-abortion groups have been fighting the decision.

"We believe that abortion counseling is a violation of the constitution," said Dr. Peter Driscoll, head of the Michigan Anti-Abortion League.

On the other hand, Dr. Diane Deutsch, a psychologist at the University of Michigan, said that abortion counseling is necessary for the health of women.

"Abortion counseling is a crucial part of the abortion process," Deutsch said. "It helps women make informed decisions about their bodies."
'Owl Killer' theme lies in symbolism

By W. KIM KEROU

The main character, the "Owl Killer," is based on Jack the Ripper, a series of slayings that occurred in London during the 1880s. The Ripper's reign of terror was a dark period in London's history, and the story of his exploits has been the subject of many films, books, and plays. The "Owl Killer" is a nod to this historical figure, but with a modern twist.

The setting of the film is a small town in England, where a murder investigation is being conducted. The Thursday's Wife, a local newspaper editor, is leading the investigation. She is a tough and determined woman, and her determination to solve the case is evident throughout the film.

The main suspect in the case is a man named Tom, who is suspected of being the "Owl Killer." However, as the investigation progresses, it becomes clear that the real killer is someone else. The Thursday's Wife must use her wit and skills to uncover the truth.

The film is a suspenseful mystery, with plenty of twists and turns. The Thursday's Wife is a complex character, and her motivation to solve the case is captivating. The film is a tribute to the work of Agatha Christie, who is considered one of the greatest mystery writers of all time.

The film was directed by John Ford, who is known for his work in Westerns. Ford's direction is excellent, and he brings the story to life in a way that is both thrilling and engaging. The cinematography is stunning, with beautiful shots of the English countryside.

The film was released in 1941, and it was a critical and commercial success. It was nominated for several awards, including Best Picture, and it won several awards at the Academy Awards.

Overall, 'Owl Killer' is a well-crafted mystery that is sure to entertain audiences of all ages. The Thursday's Wife is a strong and believable character, and her determination to solve the case is a testament to her intelligence and resourcefulness.

Mariah performance refreshing, humorous

BY STEVEN ALLEN
From Home Box Office

David Bromberg’s Thursday night Mariah performance was refreshing because instead of attempting to amuse or ذات the audience, he set out simply to amuse them. It was a size change of pace to see an artist who was honest about his situation and his work. He came at himself a decade in disguise. And this disguise - from being a star one would think he was a refugee from the pop mold.

But remember it’s just a disguise. Bromberg has been around. He knows what it’s like to be stuck at the bottom. After all, he’s been there. But he’s also been up top. All the way to the top. And he’s back down now. He’s come down from the pop mold to the pop mold again. And he’s back down again. And he’s back down again.

This brings Bromberg with all sorts of promise that he could make his own audience’s attention. It makes him more than a pop artist. He’s also a real artist. And he’s also a real artist.

His songs reflect his reflection. His songs are about him, his distance from things - in short, the kind of things the young musicians in the mold formed to become familiar with. In fact, the songs themselves often become adventures in and of themselves.

The problem, though, is that Bromberg is now on a disc. He wants just a lot more of that pop mold. He wants to be more than a pop artist. He wants to be a real artist. But he’s also a pop artist. And he’s also a real artist.

Staying in the beautiful simplicity of a pedagogical position, he could be more in tune with himself if he could have done more numbers like it. The obvious question left unanswered by Bromberg’s performance is why does a man who has made such good and bad things do this? Because the Bromberg is a man who is about to a man who is about to do another. He is about to do another. He is about to do another. He is about to do another. He is about to do another.

This brings Bromberg with all sorts of promise that he could make his own audience’s attention. It makes him more than a pop artist. He’s also a real artist. And he’s also a real artist.

WASHINGTON D.C. - On the church steps following the memorial tribute to former President Lyndon B. Johnson, several bemused guests stopped Don Bush and congratulated him.

"An honor to see," said one of the guest. "It was a privilege to be in the presence of one of America's greatest presidents."

"He was a great man," said another. "He did so much for our country.

Another remembered Johnson for being "a practical politician.""He was not a man who would say "no," even when there was no chance of it being done."

Near all mentioned his civil rights legislation. See Philip A. Bush, Jr., another recalled Johnson's civil rights achievements. He recalled a trip this fall to the White House to meet with Johnson. "I feel as if he were here still."

Hart said he stopped and talked to None and the various buildings. "I'm glad to see that we can report to you that we could find no indication anywhere that democracy is in any way threatened," he continued.

"Then of course it was. Foyle had a mayor named Charles Evers." Hart said and before leaving and the conversation at the White House, he said, "I had a difficult time."

For more information, visit our website at www.whitehouse.gov. His staff said it was a difficult time."

Hart continued: "Charles Evers knew that was responsible for the alleviation of democracy, and he said it was a price to pay."

Cagers gun for Minnesota

Michigan State News Sports Writer

In this era of expanded population, MSU's basketball team is closely backed for competition in the Big Ten title run and the next season's NCAA tournament. MSU's current record is 13-3 in Big Ten play and 19-4 overall. The Spartans are one of four unbeaten teams in the conference, and they are favored in the final two weeks of the season.

Massoulie claimed Minnesota is the team to beat in the Big Ten, and he backed the team's recent efforts against Iowa, where the Spartans scored a 65-55 victory.

Minnesota is still the team to beat, Spartans coach John Behagen said, but the Gophers' team is not the same one that beat the Spartans.

"They are a tough team to beat," Behagen said. "They have been playing well in recent games, but we are a different team than we were in November."

The Gophers have two losses this season, and the Spartans are looking forward to meeting them on the court.

The Spartans will face Notre Dame in a weekend doubleheader at the Breslin Center on Saturday and Sunday.

Unbeaten fencers face four squads

The Spartan fencing team will face four opponents this weekend, including Notre Dame, Ohio State, and Michigan. The Spartans are looking for a strong showing against these top teams.

The team is led by senior captain Chris Holder, who has been a key player in the Spartans' success.

"I am confident that we will be able to compete against these top teams," Holder said. "Our team has been working hard and we are ready to face any challenge.

The Spartans will face Notre Dame on Saturday night at the Breslin Center. The game will begin at 7:00 PM.
Wrestlers to taste Big Ten opposition

Mike PATRICK

The Big Ten wrestling meet is only the beginning for a several of the Michigan wrestlers; Friday and Saturday, Feb. 1, and Feb. 2, will be crucial nights for the Wolverines. The meet is an opportunity for them not only to gain experience in a Big Ten atmosphere, but also to gain confidence and momentum for future inter-collegiate meets.

The Michigan wrestlers have a strong tradition of success in Big Ten meets, and they will be looking to continue that tradition this year. The meet will feature several top teams, including Iowa, Minnesota, and Ohio State, who have consistently been strong in recent years.

Michigan Wrestling Coach John W. Peninger is confident in his team's ability to perform well at the meet. He has been preparing his wrestlers throughout the season, and they are ready to take on the challenge of the Big Ten meet. Credit myths about women dismissed

By MAUREEN McNERALD

When a single woman buys furniture, a dealer might worry about her credit. Is she a good risk? Will she stay in her home? Is this a home she can afford? Is she likely to be a good customer?

The dealer wonders whether she would pay the price of what he has to offer, and what would happen if she missed a payment? And certainly many examples of credit failures are known to us all.

The dealer's questions are often answered by the credit agencies, which rate many people, both men and women, as better or worse credit risks. How accurate are these agencies? How do they determine who is a good risk and who is a bad risk?

Consumer Reports has recently studied the rating agencies known to the consumer. The agencies rate millions of people each year, but they have their faults. They often rate people inaccurately, and their ratings can change from year to year.

The agencies rate people by their income, their credit history, their payment habits, and other factors. They also rate people by the percentage of debt they carry. If a person carries a large amount of debt, the agency might rate him or her as a poor credit risk.

A person's credit rating can affect many things, including the price of insurance, the amount of money he or she can borrow, and the interest rate he or she pays on loans.

In this article, we will explore the credit rating agencies and the factors they use to determine a person's credit rating. We will also discuss how to improve your credit rating.
U.S. begins truce role

India and Poland, which may account for some of the arms and military equipment sent to the Viet Cong, also participate in the truce. The agreement is expected to last for four months, until the end of the truce. However, the agreement will be reviewed and may be extended.

The agreement is seen as a positive step towards a more stable peace in the region. It is hoped that the agreement will lead to increased economic development and improve the living conditions of the local people.

However, there are concerns about the implementation of the agreement and the possibility of it being violated. Some parties are worried about the reliability of the Viet Cong and the potential for renewed hostilities.

The U.S. government has welcomed the agreement and has expressed its commitment to supporting the peace process. The U.S. has been a major contributor to the peace talks and has played a crucial role in facilitating the negotiations.

The agreement is also seen as a acknowledgment of the importance of diplomatic relations and the need for cooperation between countries. The U.S. has emphasized the importance of maintaining a positive relationship with India and Poland, as well as other countries in the region.

In conclusion, the agreement is viewed as a significant step towards a more peaceful and stable region. It is hoped that the agreement will lead to increased economic development and improved living conditions for the local people.
