Former President Nixon can be credited with making education a high priority during his administration. The President proposed a new $1 billion program of education opportunities, under which federal funds would be available to schools for providing higher education and to colleges for retraining teachers. The President also promised to double the amount of aid available for students seeking to attend college.

In 1973, Nixon's education revenue sharing bill was passed by Congress, and aid was made available to schools for educational purposes. The President was able to keep an Eye on the national economy and on the educational needs of the country.

The Nixon administration also proposed a new Higher Education Act, which was signed into law in 1974. The act provided for increased funding for education, including more money for student loans and grants. The act also included provisions for funding community colleges and adult education programs.

Nixon's education programs were well received by the public and were considered to be an important step in improving the quality of education in the United States.

George Washington University is a private, coeducational institution located in the heart of Foggy Bottom, Washington, D.C. The university was founded in 1821 as the Columbian College, the first chartered institution of higher learning in the District of Columbia. In 1937, the university was renamed George Washington University in honor of the first President of the United States.

The university is home to more than 6,000 students and offers a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs in a variety of fields, including business, law, medicine, and public policy.

In 1971, the university played a key role in the Watergate scandal, which led to the resignation of President Nixon. The scandal involved the illegal breaking into the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex.

As the scandal unfolded, the university became a focal point of the controversy. The university's president, Daniel W. Stimson, was forced to resign, and the university's reputation was severely damaged.

The Watergate affair has had a lasting impact on the university, and it continues to be a source of controversy and debate to this day.
Cyprus terrorism continues

The Cypriot underground of Gen. George Grivas held Saturday a protest rally in Lefkosa, declared by Lefkosa Sunday it will “fight with determination for the union of Cypriots and Greeks”.

The leaders were scattered in a village near Kouris, a few hours after armed men rode two police officers in the car and took several people.

The raids and the leaders are the latest of a series of raids on the Lefkosa headquarters of the Cypriot police chief and the theft of explosives and other police weapons.

Hussein wants settlement

King Hussein of Jordan, on the eve of his trip to view President Nixon in Washington, has praised Jordan's capacity for housing Jordanians in the hope that the Nixon administration will work effectively to seek Jordanian participation in the Middle East.

The 27-year-old leader, who is on his second official mission in Jordan, said it was a mistake to treat the meeting as a political matter in the hope of engaging the Nixon administration in an effort to “achieve a peace plan based on justice and a basis that the two countries can agree on and live under.”

Cambodian coalition urged

The United States has put pressure on the one government party of President Lon Nol to broaden its political base by including members of the opposition, it was learned Tuesday.

The proposals, however, are intended to make Lon Nol's Social Republican Party more meaningful and therefore more acceptable to the international community, which has not hesitated to call Mr. Lon Nol a grab of the Khmer Rouge — a partner in discussion to help bring stability to the nation — nor has it offered any worthwhile.
Dem interest factions stir youth caucus battle

By CAROL THOMAS

From Earl Carr's office the 6th District caucus was on the edge of a hurricane while minority freshmen in other districts were trying to understand, counseling and making arrangements for what to do in the wake of the Deme cratic party's resignation crisis.

Unfortunately, we will be meeting with the Minority freshmen in the 5th District about the possibility of a move to the 6th. There's a very small chance that they might decide to make the move. We have a lot of problems to com

Robert Carr, former congressional candidate, said they organized their local youth interest faction around the idea of a youth caucus before the resigna tion crisis. "We do not want to be part of the Democratic party any longer..." Carr said. "We think that this is the best way to deal with the situation as a whole."

It's worth noting that the 6th District caucus was formed in response to a number of issues, including the resignation crisis, but also the need for a more independent voice in the caucus. Carr said that the caucus aims to bring together students from across the state who are interested in politics, and to provide a forum for them to discuss and work on issues that are important to them.

In contrast, the 5th District caucus was formed largely in response to the resignation crisis, and the leaders of the caucus have been working to maintain the caucus's independence from the Democratic party. Carr said that the caucus's decision to move to the 6th District was made after a careful consideration of the situation, and that the caucus's main goal is to provide a forum for students to discuss and work on issues that are important to them.
President Nixon's budget for fiscal 1976 is loaded with executive insistence. While the overall federal budget, including domestic programs created under past liberal administrations, has r i t h e r o n c o n s c i e n t i o n s or restrictions on expenditures leading to last year's military budget decision, Nixon calls for an increase in the recent SALT agreements, and depending on the economy, the tax on a wartime to a peacetime economy. The budget makes clear in hard figures that the nation's long-term "provider" distress actually means more and has butter.

To be sure, the idea of cutting domestic spending has many merits. From the New Deal to the Great Society, federal programs have tended to expand blindly, feeding bureaucrats instead of public needs, and causing inflation and tax increases. Nixon is current in seeking surgery for Washington's obesity, but just as clearly, he is performing the delicate operation a butcher might know. He is aiming at the wrong limb.

To begin with, he is chopping up the heart of Lyndon Johnson's War on Poverty, the Office of Economic Opportunity, along with dozens of other programs designed to provide milk for hungry children, youth job training, and financially assist college students. Nixon explained these programs reflect a mystic belief in the capability of programs to treat social ills. Perhaps this is true, but their wholesale slaughter reflects a chances of doing nothing.

What makes Nixon'sStreamReader-like attitude toward social programs so uncongenial is that he seems to be a Senta—like generously towards the Pentagon, in which he once pushed four billion of dollars into such a "black hole", the F-14 jet fighter and destroyer system reclassified as a "strategic" and financially assist college students. Nixon explained these programs reflect a mystic belief in the capability of programs to treat social ills. Perhaps this is true, but their wholesale slaughter reflects a chances of doing nothing.

Women's official vows action

In a modest approach that "does not mean all talk and no action," Burns said, she will investigate women's concerns by "talking to interested groups, developing a reasonable approach, and finding out what can be done." The Department of Women's Affairs was created late last year and has been given a two year period to operate.

The legislation, introduced last month, was sponsored by Rep. Richard Burns, a Democrat from Lansing, and was to be under consideration Thursday by the House Education Committee.

The bill requires the appointment of a full-time women's affairs officer in all state offices, with the duties of (1) investigating and representing all grievances on a sex equal basis; (2) helping interested groups to plan and undertake action on sex issues; (3) maintaining a complaint-handling service available to all state employees and the public; (4) furnishing a regular report to the appropriate public agency, and (5) providing guidelines to all state departments for the development of sex equal policies.

The bill passed both houses of the Legislature and is now awaiting the governor's signature.

Sorrow, Pity dwarfs all other films

By BILL MECHANIC

News Review Service

The "Sorrow and the Pity," a documentary about the World War II in Spain, is a film which dwarfs all others by its impact. A tragic, powerful, moving, and electrifying experience, it is a film that will be remembered as one of the great experiences in film history.

The film is based on the experiences of shop owner and journalist Rafael Alberti, who was in the streets as the war raged through Spain. Alberti's contributions to the film are compelling and poignant.

The film tells the story of how the Spanish people were forced to choose between the Fascists and the Communists. The Fascists were led by General Franco, while the Communists were led by the anarchist. Alberti's experiences show the brutality of both sides and the suffering of the people.

The film is a powerful reminder of the importance of human rights and the need for peace.
