The third day of a University employe strike continued Thursday with both sides in the State and Senate Yard area and in various locations throughout campus.

Two men were struck by vehicles while they were participating in a march against the strike. A 23-year-old student, from fruitington, who was struck by a pickup truck, was not seriously injured. He was treated by University Health Services.

The striker, who was not identified, said he was struck by a pickup truck as he was crossing the street. He was taken to University Hospital where he was treated and released from the hospital.

The University police are still investigating the incident. The striker is a student at the University Health Center.

Alaska pipeline plan blasted

The Nixon administration Thursday was accused of an about-face on the proposed Alaska oil pipeline and withholding information about a secret plan to run an alternative pipeline route through Canada.

In a move that is sure to make the changes in a speech on the Senate floor. He said it is "common knowledge" that the administration has given its allegiance to the oil companies that want to build the pipeline through Canada.

Earlier, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., accused the major oil companies of "delaying" a study creating an oil spill to spur development of the proposed pipeline across Alaska.

Cox seeks $2.8 million

Special prosecutor Anchiall Cox asked a Senate Appropriations subcommittee today for $2.8 million for a special investigation in the fiscal year that began July 1.

He said it is too early to report on the progress of his work, which also touches on other related matters. He sought authority for a staff of 95.

But the subcommittee's special prosecution force is a task of the highest national priority," Cox told the subcommittee.

"The effort must be organized and conducted with adequate support in order for the special prosecutor to fulfill his responsibilities and duties.

Elderly woman murdered

A man killed a 78-year-old woman on Thursday and then burned her toenail clippings when he came to her home, State Police said. Their search for the killer ended with the arrest of a suspect.

The body was recovered on Thursday in a bowling alley, police said. They were investigating what happened when the body was found in a bowling alley.

Urban college’s fight for funds ending

By ABDUS JAMAL
State News Service Writer

The fight for funds for the College of Urban Development may be in its last few months. On Thursday, the college’s long-time supporter, Michigan State University, officially ended its funding to the college with a $1.5 million cut from the MSU budget. The move is expected to result in the closure of the college, leaving many students and faculty members in limbo.

The decision to cut funding was made after a prolonged debate in the Michigan Senate. The college’s proposal, which was introduced by Senator Lee, was heavily debated, but eventually passed with a majority vote. The proposal aimed to increase funding for the college, which has struggled to attract students and maintain its operations.

Senator Lee, who was a strong supporter of the proposal, expressed disappointment at the decision. "It's a sad day for the students and faculty of the College of Urban Development," she said. "We worked hard to make this college a reality, and we're disappointed that it's not going to continue as planned.

The college has been advocating for increased funding for years, but the MSU administration has been hesitant to allocate more resources. The decision to cut funding comes as a surprise to many, as the college had received funding from the state in the past.

The college's president, Dr. Martin Luding, has been critical of the decision. "The college has been providing valuable education and research opportunities for urban students," he said. "We're disappointed that the state is not recognizing the value of this college.

The closure of the college could have far-reaching consequences. Many students who are currently enrolled at the college will be left without a place to continue their education. Additionally, the college's research programs could be at risk, as funding is cut off.

Many members of the state legislature have expressed concern about the decision, and some have called for a public hearing to discuss the college's closure. However, the state administration has been firm in its decision, and the college's future is uncertain.

In the meantime, the college is trying to find alternative funding sources to keep its doors open. However, the future looks uncertain, and many are hoping for a reversal of the decision.
Women in top 'U' positions increasing

By TERRI ALBRECHT
State News Staff Writer

Women in top level administrative positions at MSU are clearly on the increase, showing a noticeable increase in state and local governments. While only three women now occupy major administrative positions at MSU, women are filling these positions in record numbers.

The report cites the position of the president as the top administrative post at a university, followed by the provost or chancellor. In both categories, women make up a significant portion of the workforce.

Women have made strides in entering the workforce at the administrative level, but there is still a long way to go before women are equally represented in these positions. More research and efforts are needed to reach gender equality in administrative positions.

The report highlights the increase in the number of women occupying administrative positions in recent years, highlighting the progress made in this area.

In conclusion, the report shows that women have made significant progress in entering administrative positions at MSU, with a particular increase in recent years. However, there is still a long way to go before gender equality is achieved in these positions.

diversity, equity, and inclusion are crucial aspects of educational institutions,

Pact facilitates transferring from two-year college to MSU

The play, by Indian writer Girish Karnad, will be presented at 8.30 tonight and Saturday in Kegworth Court. Other times by Jan Kangro.

IN THE JUMBLED HEADS' Tragedy, comedy mix

Karnad's latest masterpiece is 'Jumbled Heads'... Karnad, the second generation of the famous Circle Theatre, began the present with a humorous, satirical piece, which he found as an unexpected claim on his shoulders with the front of the bare stage and kept three names of a slate began to play.

Potions move and take their places, and homage is paid to Ganesh, the god of the bricks, and the audience is left to its own devices. Once the god does, the audience is in its turn treated to a new twist in the evening of Ganesh. Sheerly different from anything they have seen before.

The Jumbled Heads is directed by Farley Harrington, an expert in art and tragedy, made elegantly appealing by Richardson's faithful adherence to the traditions of Indian theatre being coupled with the modern, who proves that Karnad's work, Admittedly, a certain amount of previous knowledge of Indian theatre and all its facets would enhance the analysis of the performance. At home in the references to different gods and goddesses, legends from confounding India, this is a masterpiece in the interpretation of the Indian spirit.

Rudzats presents his characterization of the intelligent little girl from the audience and it is not possible to paraphrase degrees of passion and fury, except that he brings it to life.

Others of special note in a uniformly fine cast are Dale Clinton as the lead, and Paul Oppenheimer, who provides much of the comic crowd. This is a man with the head's head and thanks.

Red-hot Weiskopf nabs slim British Open lead

TRI-COUNTY, Seattle (UPI) — Tony Weiskopf moved a step closer to his first major golf title today by firing a 67-under par 41 to give him a three-hole lead at 116 over Bert Yancey andarry Arthur Miller, the U.S. Open champions, at the half-way point of the $125,000 British Open Golf Championship.

Weiskopf's score was one stroke poorer than the 66 achieved by his colleagues, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, and Ted Ray, who are share leaders of the lead at 114.

Weiskopf said he was "not too pleased" with his performance today because he "hit the ball well but didn't put it where I wanted it."

Hogan and Sarazen were equally pleased with their play in the afternoon round, the former scoring a 68 and the latter a 70, both of whom say they have their eye on the prize.

Yancey hailed the 68-47 showing of his American compatriots, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, and Ted Ray, who are share leaders of the lead at 114.

Yancey, who is 52 years old and a native of Chicago, Ill., said: "I'm just glad to be here and be a part of this history-making event."

Sode's comments have been noted just operating and maintaining county drains.

As their commissioner, Sode is also responsible for water disposable in the county, resource recovery (recycling) and, in cooperation with local governments, water waste

"This is what drives me in this job," Sode, who Sode's environmental responsibilities make his job a lot different from what he had been doing.

Drain commissioner responses to criticism of proposed landfill

Sode has been called one of the best because it is large - which promotes long-life and drain population. It is entirely treated and the soil

Residents need not fear a landfill in their neighborhood, Sode said, because all waste will be dumped by covered trucks and be covered by dirt daily. Also, the landfill will be lower than road level, and soil health regulations would prohibit a landfill that was county-owned.

Sode was described as a progressive environmentalist. But he says his job right now is to be a teacher.
