War casualties shock Israeli populace

After capture

Impeachment issue draws little protest

"We plan to send it to the House," said Representative John B. Anderson of Illinois, who sponsored the article proposing to impeach Nixon. "It's the right thing to do, and it's the right way to do it." Anderson said he would introduce the impeachment articles on Monday, and that he had received support from some of his colleagues.

Meanwhile, the White House has been given a list of questions by the House Judiciary Committee, which is expected to release today. The White House has said it will not comment on the questions until it has had a chance to review them.

Police team to express concern over bike safety

"The Longfellow Parkway Association is concerned about the growing number of accidents involving pedestrians and cyclists," said Scott W. Miller, a member of the association.

"We believe that more needs to be done to ensure the safety of everyone who uses the parkway," Miller said. "We are calling on the city to take action to improve the safety of the parkway." Miller said the association will be holding a meeting to discuss the issue further.

Lack of funds worries officials

Neglect may jeopardize college

"We are concerned about the lack of funding for the college," said President John A. DeSua of Michigan State University. "We have been told that the college may be forced to close if the funding situation does not improve." DeSua said the college has been looking for ways to increase its funding, but has not been successful.

"We are doing everything we can to ensure the future of the college," DeSua said. "We are exploring all options, including seeking additional funding from the state and federal government." DeSua said the college will continue to pursue these options in the coming months.

"Our students deserve a quality education," DeSua said. "We will do everything we can to ensure that they receive it."

Contract release date extension necessary to ease overcrowding

The decision by the University resident hall management to allow all students qualified under existing criteria to book housing contracts is a commendable but ineffective solution to overcrowding in residence halls.

Students at present living in residence halls may now get a reprieve from their housing contracts and move off campus. Implementations may vary from University-supervised locating, independent, cooperative, and religious living units.

The idea is wonderful, but just as platitudes are available for students off campus, professors can only house 20 more people, according to Dr. David Lewin, president of the Interfraternity Council, while unmemorized apartment complexes have few or no openings at all.

Part of the problem is the deadline for contract release, Nov. 15, seizes in the middle of the term. If students were allowed an extension of the deadline until the beginning of winter term, it is likely they could find additional off-campus housing.

The best solution would have been to prevent overcrowding from developing in the residence halls in the first place. Residence hall management staff and the Office of Admissions should have coordinated their efforts together and confirmed the students' residence halls themselves.

The fact remains that potentially 100 residence hall men are overcrowded. Residence hall management has shown its concern by moving to declutter students' living quarters, but more than is done to alleviate the overcrowding.

An extension of the Nov. 15 deadline would be impervious to allow students a better chance to find off-campus housing. Is the magnitude, topic at some small.

Frerich's bill questionable

Sen. Robert Frerich's proposal to change the vice president in Congress rather than the "smoke - filled" norms of convention politics is a step in the right direction toward demonstrating the selection of the vice president. But certain drawbacks make Frerich's proposal a conditional amendment questionable.

Congress must consider the proposal carefully when deciding if it will have the same impact on the vice presidency while the "smoke - filled" conventions are "smoke - filled" moons of Congress. What would happen if a Democratic vice president in a Republican vice president's office? The majority over the school of a new vice president could be the hands of the executive.

Eight Nixon war veto

With his ninth veto this year, President Nixon foiled Congress' attempts to reduce his budget and made war, protecting the legislative branch's right to a full and somber Nixon's veto.

The President vetoed constitutional arguments again, arguing that the "smoke - filled" way, by more legislative act, is less effective. Nixon's veto was examined under the Constitution along with Nixon's veto.

Nixon has shown how ambitiously a President with a powers can be. Not only did he use his power succinctly and logically in Congress, but as shown by many developments in the Middle East, he wants to exert his war powers again.

A President with too much power is a dangerous situation. Nixon's veto is a down in his term of office. Congress needs to act now to override Nixon's veto, so that it does prevent some of that power, but also involving this country in military occupations.

CHAMBERLAIN: Nixon: responsible for nation's shock and confusion

In the Editor:

Your open letter of Oct. 22, calling for the impeachment of Richard Nixon, brought me to my attention, and I would like to make a brief response through your eyes.

The appointment of the Constitution specifies "treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors" as grounds for impeachment. For impeachment to occur, the majority of the Senate and the House of Representatives must conduct an investigation and request the House to impeach the President. If the House votes in favor of impeachment, then the Senate is tasked with the investigation, and the President faces removal from office.

In my judgment, the President does not warrant a conviction of a crime. He has not committed any act that would warrant conviction. His only crime is the "smoke - filled" world of politics.

I hope to see the President re-elected in the elections. If he is not, I hope that the President takes responsibility for the actions that led to his defeat.

Vote for Joel Ferguson

The Editor: Joel Ferguson appears to be the most promising candidate for the position.

Ferguson is a candidate who has visited the city and has the experience needed to take the city to the next level.

He has a proven record of success in leadership positions and is a strong believer in community service.

Ferguson's campaign is based on issues that are important to the city, such as education, public safety, and economic development.

He has been endorsed by a number of key leaders in the city, including the mayor and city council members.

I believe that Ferguson is the best choice for the job and I encourage everyone to vote for him in the upcoming election.

Spartan gridiron heroes

In the Editor:

I would like to give my congratulations to the football team on their recent victory. Their hard work and dedication has paid off, and they should be proud of their achievement.

I also want to thank the fans for their support, as their encouragement is what helped the team to win.

I am excited to see what the team will do in the future and I am sure they will continue to make the city proud.

I would like to say that the team is an inspiration to all of us, and I hope they continue to succeed in the future.

College Republicans blast Nixon

By Mike Lipsey

NEESE President Nixon's recent denial of the Justice Dept.'s claim that the President was involved in the Watergate investigation, the Chr. Rep. said Thursday, is one more step in the erosion of the President's power.

"NEESE believes President Nixon has never had the power to oppose, in the Constitutional sense of the word, the actions of the Independent Watergate investigation," the chr. rep. said. "Yet he has consistently encouraged the actions of the Independent Watergate investigation.

"And he has never worked with support of Richard Nixon for a long time," said Mr. Chauncey and Mr. Bay. "We believe that the actions of the Independent Watergate investigation would end if the President's stance were reversed and he took personal responsibility for the actions of the Independent Watergate investigation.

"NEESE is not a friend of Richard Nixon and does not intend to support him or his campaigns. But he does believe that Richard Nixon has been a threat to the American people and to the Constitution and to the American way of life."

Faults of health care plan cited

By LAURA MILLER

State Senate Staff Writer

Student health plans are a subject of debate as enrollments rise. Today, the focus is on health maintenance organizations (HMOs) and the impact they have on the medical field. The debate centers around the benefits and drawbacks of HMOs, with arguments on both sides.

One side argues that HMOs provide a cost-effective way to deliver health care, while the other side contends that they compromise quality of care. The debate has sparked a number of proposals in recent years, as lawmakers and policymakers search for ways to improve the current system.

One recent proposal is the creation of a public option, which would allow individuals to choose between a traditional fee-for-service plan and an HMO. This approach aims to provide more choice and competition in the health care marketplace.

The debate continues as lawmakers and policymakers work to find solutions to the complex issues surrounding health care. As enrollments rise, the need for effective and equitable health care plans becomes increasingly important.

Watson gives near-perfect performance

By WATSON K. WATSON

“Slyly and unobtrusively he'd worked his way over and over again with riveting intensity to the heart of the music.”

Watson's performance was a masterful demonstration of his skill and artistry, bringing to life the music with extraordinary depth and nuance.

Though his own name is the only one which appeared on the concert program, Doc Watson took center stage as the aural and visual focus of the evening.

It is a tribute to both his dedication and his gifts that we can share their talent with an audience without stepping on each other's toes.

The program was a celebration of Watson's accomplishments, with a blend of old favorites and innovations, including an encore that left the audience breathless.

Watson's talent and dedication have left an unforgettable impression on all who were fortunate to witness his performance.

REED LAFAYETTE, Ind. — By a narrow margin, Michigan State's 23-20 victory in the Carrier Dome in Syracuse last Saturday is considered by many to be the signature win of the Spartans' season so far. Baggett, a first-year inside linebacker, put up a strong performance, leading 153 yards and 11 tackles, including seven solo tackles. The victory ended a seven-game losing streak for Michigan State and set up a major showdown in the Big Ten.

Soccer team held to tie; tournament chances hurt

By JACK WALSH
State News Sports Writer

The post-season tournament hopes of MSU's State News tournament aren't too bad, but as the Spartans' season was over, there were fewer than a few in the University of Michigan press box to applaud the team's second place performance in the last six years. The 2-2 tie against Illinois on Friday was the end of the season for the Spartans who are half of the way to the Big Ten championship.

Spartan coach Dave Goldman attributes the week's key moment to the Spartans' 1-2. It was a game against Illinois but he added, "We just played well. We just didn't get the ball into the net."

The Spartans played their best game on the road against the Fighting Illini, scoring a goal midway through the first half. The goal was on a penalty shot by Mike Goldman, who had scored both goals in MSU's 2-0 win over Illinois last year.

Goldman said the Spartans were "Well played. We just didn't get the ball into the net."

The Spartans' season ended with a 2-2 tie against the Buckeyes on Friday. The game was the first of the season for MSU and the only one that the team managed to win.

Despite running its best race of the season, MSU's cross-country team won't bring in the first place honors for dropping a 150-yard touchdown to take the lead. MSU coach Jon Clifted and his team were pleased with their performance despite the loss.

"We had our best run of the season today," Clifted said. "The team did a good job and they ran well enough to win but we didn't want to win." The team had been practicing all week for the national championship and had been working hard to improve.

"Our best performance was on the road against Illinois," Clifted said. "We were able to get the ball into the net."

Spartan goalie Dave Goldman spoiled the score in the diving save on the University of Michigan's Jim Dillman and his teammates who had been trying to get a shot on goal. The save was Goldman's first of the season and came on a penalty kick.

He and most potential Republican candidates said that honesty in politics and government will be a key issue in the election.

"I feel that I have a good base to run with because I already present a vast constituency in the Sixth Congressional District," Sharpe said. Taylor does not have this advantage. Prof sells bagels to fight project

by Larry Morgan

The capitalist system is now dead in the United States and unless the people of the country act now the entire present structure will be replaced by a more advanced system.

James Carville, member of the Socialist Labor Party, and 1972 candidate for Congress, said last week that the present economic system is doomed to fall apart and that the U.S. can only hope to resurrect itself from its present state, which is a result of the economic structure that has been put in place by the capitalist class.

Carville said that the present economic system is unsustainable and that the country is headed for a new economic system that will be more just and equitable.

Carville also said that the present system is not working for the majority of the people and that it is time for the country to look for a new economic system.

"The rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer and the system is not serving the needs of the people," Carville said.

"We need a new economic system that is based on the needs of the people and not on the greed of the rich and the powerful," Carville said.
