Figures reveal off-campus living less expensive

By TERRIS KANE

Students who are confident with rising rent and the cost of food, the increased fuel costs for public transit, the high cost of utilities, the increased cost of textbooks, the lack of financial aid, and the high cost of painting have all been cited as reasons why they are not treated in the United States. The survey was conducted by the American Legion's National Committee on Student Aid, which represents the American Legion's national headquarters in Washington. The survey included 1,000 students from colleges and universities across the nation.

The survey found that 47% of students said they were not planning to return to their homes for the summer, while 38% said they were not planning to return to their homes for the fall.

The survey also found that 40% of students said they were not planning to return to their homes for the winter, while 36% said they were not planning to return to their homes for the spring.

The survey further found that 37% of students said they were not planning to return to their homes for the summer, while 34% said they were not planning to return to their homes for the fall.

ASMSU delays confirmation of judges

By MIKE GALATOLA

Despite Smith’s complaining about the lack of diversity on the MSU Student Court, the Board of Student Agencies has decided against confirmation of the nine judges. The court would need time to be allowed to run in order for the court to become a functional body.

The nine new members are needed in order to maintain a balance between the faculty and the student court. There are currently no faculty members on the court and it is expected that there will be at least two new members, both faculty and student members.

The court is a phenomenal thing to have. If it’s a functioning body, you have to consider the court a good thing to have. It’s a good place for the students to go if they have a problem and they can’t get it taken care of.

We need a functioning court for a long time. It’s better to have it take time to work out these problems when you have a functioning body.

Shawn Smith, the ASMSU President, said that the court would not work if they had no judges to work with. The court needs the judges in order to function properly.

If we asked the people of the school who are interested, there would be enough people to do the job. We need to make sure that the judges are confirmed as soon as possible.

The court is a good thing and we need to make sure it’s a good court. The students need us to make sure the court is a good thing.

Michigan land sale act already proves merit

In less than one month, the tough new land sales law in Michigan has shown its merit. The act is not only one of the strongest in the country, but it is being strictly enforced by the land titles division of the Bureau of Licensing and Regulation.

The land sales law, which went into effect Oct. 1, is intended to regulate the development of land in Michigan through an application and investigation process conducted by the land sales division.

The act was necessary for controlling land development since Michigan, with vast land resources, has been plagued in recent years by land swindles and unscrupulous and often irresponsible land development.

The strict standards the land sales division is applying to all developers who apply for land development are the same as those that cannot be passed a peot for land sale.

Every claim made in a property report or advertising material with the division must guarantee every fact on that report or prove that the claims must continue the good work.

Promises, promises...

Promises and more empty promises are all the news now from Attorney General William J. Busch of Michigan. The former Governor, Nixon is now a New York lawyer, and he said he would not be a peot for land sale.

Busch promised a law that would be fair and legal to all people. He also promised to make all land sales transparent. The Michigan Attorney General would be closely followed and the Michigan law would be followed by every state in the union.

Busch promised that the Michigan law would not be used to regulate land sales. He also promised to make sure that the law was used to regulate land sales.

The President announced Friday that he had accepted the resignation of Attorney General William J. Busch of Michigan. The President said that he had been disappointed with the Attorney General's performance and that he had decided to accept the resignation to get a new Attorney General who would be more committed to the job.

Busch was the only Attorney General in the nation to refuse to resign when he was named to the job. The President had given Busch several weeks to resign before he would name a new Attorney General.

PROMISES FOR MICHIGAN

Busch's resignation was the third time in six months that the nation's top lawyer had resigned. The first time was in February, when the President named a new Attorney General to replace John Mitchell, who had resigned after the Watergate scandal.

Baggett awarded Back of the Week

By Paul VARIAN

Waco News-Telegram

Monday afternoon, Charlie Baggett was tooting his team's horn and a few of his own. He had been waiting for a week for this moment, but the judges didn't so much as whistle.

The target of bagged a 200-yard field goal, the Big Ten's second longest and, in the opinion of Penn State's Bill Traynor, a '13 field goal. Baggett returned to the Visitors with a quick, sure kick to his bag for smaller trips. For his efforts, he was given the award for the week.

The judges were a group of coaches and sports editors and their assistants. Baggett was given the award after the game against Nebraska at Waco, Texas.

"It's a sort of, 13-yard field goal, not a 30-yard field goal," said Baggett. "I was in the right place at the right time."

Neil Young lets his well of talent run dry

BY DAVID MARTINO

Neil Young has become a despised figure in American music since the 1960s, when he was one of the biggest stars in the country. This summer, Young's most recent album, "Plates Away," was released to mixed reviews. The album features a variety of songs, from the fast-paced "Cortez the Killer" to the more reflective "Old Man." Young's recent work has been criticized for its lack of innovation and for being too similar to his past albums.

Hancock's group plays funky music

What was undoubtedly this year's most unusual theatrical event took place Friday in the Auditorium with the performance of the play "Hymen" by the London National Company of Khalidat Theatre.

Khalidat, the second dance-drama of India, with its elaborate costumes and makeup, in its sets, and in its tightly controlled rhythms and movements, is an unusual and expansive event for the non-Indian spectator. We are not accustomed to such things in our daily lives, and an enormous audience is mesmerized with silver and gold, as we are accustomed to doing for those who are new to our culture. A very complicated play by means of dance, in which no other instrument, or even singing, is used, makes the audience feel as though they are looking at a kind of dance-movie that has never been seen before.

Yet the dance is how we have such an ancient and mysterious culture, and one of the big surprises from this performance was that we were able to see the dancers. The details of this performance were so crisp that we were able to see them clearly, which was not the case before.

The music is something that has never been seen before in this way. The audience was able to see the entire show in its entirety, which was a great surprise.

The audience in the Khalidat was well pleased with the performance, at least that portion of the audience that stayed long enough to experience the entire theatrical event.
