Caries candidates dispute city housing situation

By SHARON HAMES
State News Staff Writer

The candidates in the East Lansing mayoral race have accused the city of having a housing crisis.

Several candidates have called attention to the city's housing crisis and the lack of affordable housing. Some have accused the city of not doing enough to address the issue.

The candidates have cited the lack of affordable housing as a major concern for the city. They have called for more actions to be taken to address the issue, such as increasing the supply of affordable housing and providing more support for those in need.

The candidates have also raised concerns about the impact of the housing crisis on the city's economy and the challenges it poses for residents.

Several candidates have proposed solutions to address the housing crisis, including increasing the supply of affordable housing, providing more support for those in need, and increasing the city's budget for affordable housing.

The candidates have also called for more transparency and accountability in the city's housing policies and practices.

The city has responded to the candidates' calls, stating that they are working to address the issue and that they are committed to creating more affordable housing and providing more support for those in need.

However, some candidates have criticized the city's response, saying that it is not doing enough to address the issue.

City housing problem needs further actions

The new East Lansing Housing Ordinance, created by city council last June, is designed to give tenants adequate living space and to upgrade maintenance standards. If enacted, it will do this, but these things may happen:

First, landlords could conceivably pass higher rents to tenants in order to cover the cost of the ordinance. If this happens, the city council may have to do something about rent increases.

Secondly, sections of the ordinance by necessity amount of floor space that must be maintained. Such sections of the ordinance say only few people know what they mean. Hopefully, facilities have already been rented to six, one tenant could be found out in the street looking for a place to live.

And with a person out in the street looking for a new place to live, the demand for housing could increase along with the price.

The Housing Ordinance has already been advocated by many city officials to the enforcement of the ordinance is not only important in the city's effort to maintain a decent living environment, but general maintenance regulations and property maintenance requirements.

For the ordinance to be effective, housing inspectors must understand the law and be able to enforce them. The city project is still young and only one rental building is subject to inspection.

Therefore, the people who are in charge of enforcing the law should know and understand the ordinance. If they do not, the whole thing is for naught.

The city council should be in charge of enforcing the ordinance. They must, in turn, rise to the occasion and not play favorites with the unpleasant side effects of higher quality housing.

Curson should immediately get a legal interpretation on the rental control regulations that the city council has passed. The interpretation should be after the city council has set up a tenant housing board.

In addition, the city council should take steps to implement the ordinance. These steps could include setting up a tenant housing board, and enforcing the ordinance.

The ordinance requires that rental control should increase the city's housing stock. They propose, in addition to rent control, for the city to go into the business of how one mental housing, financing that project by selling stock to the public.

Brown and McNeil's proposal is important; it represents an attempt to cope with the city's growing housing problem. The new city will soon be facing a situation where people must move out of City with the least money to purchase their own home.

It's time for some action in this area and it's good to see the city council considering saying let's go now.

Nixon obsessed with his 'cool'

By RUSSELL BAKER

WARNER BROS.

The purpose of the book is to give the reader a glimpse of Japan, its history, culture, and people.

The book is the result of a trip to Japan, which Nixon made as a private citizen. The trip was funded by the government.

"I had the great pleasure of meeting the people of Japan," Nixon says. "I was impressed with the country's rich history and culture."

However, Nixon's interest in Japan goes beyond personal enjoyment. He has long been an advocate of increased trade relations with Japan.

He has visited Japan several times and has met with many of its leaders, including Prime Minister Koizumi.

"I believe Japan is an important partner for the United States," Nixon says. "We must work together to ensure that our relationship continues to grow.

"It is essential that we maintain a strong relationship with Japan, as Japan is a major player in the global economy."

"Japan is an important trading partner, and we must work to ensure that our trade relations continue to be strong."

Polomsky uses intense motivation to set priorities, reach daily goals

The new-look The State News today sports the head of four candidates,代替 for Tooth's city council seat. By LINDA SANDERS

State News Staff Writer

The old race is on, but the new season has arrived. The State News is also offering a new look this year, with a new design and a fresh perspective. The four candidates competing for the city council seat include Polomsky, a veteran of many local elections. He is currently serving as the state senator and has a reputation for being a hard worker and a dedicated public servant.

Candidates who are running this year's campaign have been working hard to make their voices heard. They have held town hall meetings and spoken at community events, hoping to gain the support of registered voters. The campaign season is in full swing, with debates and forums scheduled for this week. The candidates are running on a variety of issues, from education to economic development, and are hoping to attract the attention of the local electorate.

The election is on Tuesday, November 7th, and voters are encouraged to cast their ballots early. The candidates are all hoping to win, and the outcome of the election will have a significant impact on the city's future. The winners of the election will take office on January 1st, 2023, and will serve for a term of three years.

House upholds veto of deer hunting ban

Failing to get the necessary 12 votes for a two-thirds majority, the Michigan House Wednesday voted 66-43 to uphold Gov. William G. Milliken’s veto on an anti-deer hunting bill. The Michigan Legislature has not overridden a governor’s veto in 22 years, and Wednesday’s 66-43 vote overturned that record.

The house voted Oct. 18 to override the veto, but the governor received some strong Republican support in the House.

A bill to ban the hunting of deer and fawns was passed in July by the legislature, despite the Deep of Natural Resources recommendation that allowed deer hunting to be allowed in the eastern part of the Upper Peninsula. The author of the bill was asked to revise the legislation, stating the Department of Natural Resources would prevent illegal hunting.

Two MSU women students have been appointed to advisory committees of the Michigan State Board of Education.

They are senior Elizabeth O'Neil, a member of the newest generation of women in school management services, and Gayle Thomas, a young woman in the vanguard of the anti-war movement.

Both were appointed on the recommendation of a personal friend, James P. O'Neill, a Ford Motor Co. executive and vice president of the Board of Education.

Kendall Krickles, 23, of 1128 Hubbard Hall, MSU, was appointed to the advisory council for the education department.

"I don't know where the committees are going," said, "but I expect will be a disconcerting experience for me.

She said the "Fish" had taken a slight of her family in Louisville, for years.

"I'm not a friend of 1. I can relate what happens at our meetings to her, and I think she will be an excellent experience for her."

She said the Fish had been a personal friend for several years to the politically-minded women in the city and had taken a slight of her family in Louisville.

O'Neill, manager of purchasing, facilities and staff services at the Ford Single Center in Dearborn, has served in the nation's largest labor union.

O'Neill and her friend Thomas because he was a "very intelligent" enemy of the anti-war movement.

"I think it is important to have a student member on the committees," he said.

"I'm not sure what is going to happen here, but I think it is important to have young people on these committees, and I think this is an excellent experience for her."
