Will Wisconsin spoil Spartans' Homecoming?

By PAT FARNAN
State News Sports Writer

Homecoming at MSU is a thing of the past. One seldom even sees toilet paper flying in the south end zone any more. But at least with the Spartans’ upset of Purdue Saturday, Denny Stolz and company have something to come home with.

Currently 2-5, the Spartans will knock heads with Wisconsin which has come within about 10 total points of being the biggest giant-killer that ever stalked the Midwest. Only a 4-7 finisher in the Big Ten a year ago, coach John Jardine opened up with Purdue, a darkhorse contender in the conference at that time. They lost a nip-and-tuck skirmish by a point and gave the indication that they were not going to be a “roll over and die” team.

Then it was Colorado, a big favorite of the preseason pollsters, and hence, ranked high. That one ended 28-25 and was as close as the score indicates.

With two defeats and still winless, the lowly Badgers headed for Lincoln, Neb., as guests of the Big Red machine and nearly shocked the Cornhuskers. It took a last-ditch touchdown drive with under two minutes remaining to pull Nebraska from the depths of defeat.

Since then, Jardine’s crew has been pretty normal. Opened up too much offense for Wyoming (38-27) and lost to Ohio State and U-M by the average drubbing – 24-0, 35-6, respectively.

Now, back to the way MSU would like to see the Badgers Saturday. After all, it is Homecoming.

Stolz has his team back in the winning frame of mind, something that has been absent for the past few weeks. The offense is starting to come around and the defense has maintained its stingy attitude despite a loaded schedule, including four games against teams currently rated in the top 10.

The Badgers have a volatile offense. They have the ability to explode and have done so. If the Spartans are to spend a joyous Homecoming weekend, they’re going to have to keep Wisconsin off the scoreboard. That won’t be easy but MSU just doesn’t have the ability to beat teams by outscoring them.

The Badgers will surely remember the 31-0 thrashing the Spartans handed them in the rain last year. MSU will have to forget and concentrate on this Saturday. It’s going to be a different ballgame.

Homecoming glitter gone but the game’s the same

By BILL COSTABILE
State News Sports Writer

Homecoming, as defined by Webster: “An inaugurating or welcoming back.” Hardly an appropriate word to use in connection with a 2-5 football team.

Normally, Homecoming weekend is filled with all the hoopla of floats, Homecoming queen and a reunion of old alumni who have a habit of getting together for a drink before, during and after the game.

Overflow crowds have filled Spartan Stadium since the first Homecoming game in 1916 against Notre Dame. In case you’re wondering, Notre Dame won that one, 14-0.

It wasn’t until 1936 that alumni began meeting on the field after the game and MSU didn’t pick its first Homecoming queen until 1948. But enough said about earlier era games.

The late Vince Lombardi said that he always hated to bring his Packer teams to Detroit to play the Lions on Thanksgiving Day, because the Lions would always come up with a super effort and knock the Packers off.

And what, you ask, does Thanksgiving Day and the Spartans Homecoming have in common? Nothing at all, unless you take a look at MSU’s Homecoming record.

In the 57 Homecoming games since 1916, Spartan teams have posted a 37-15-2 record, a .649 winning percentage. Two of the biggest games in Spartan history were played at Homecoming time.

In the 1920 game, MSU posted its largest winning margin ever by blanking Chicago YMCA College, 81-0. Twenty-four years later a heavily favored Spartan team met defeat at the hands of a Purdue sophomore quarterback by the name of Len Dawson. Dawson threw three touchdown passes in a 27-13 Boilermaker victory. Dawson’s record of three touchdown passes in one game against MSU still stands in Spartan record books.

But aside from all the traditional hoopla, this year all the attention will be on the men in the green and white uniforms. But aren’t the fans eyes always glued to the action on the field? If you saw the Illinois game you wouldn’t think so. Some people said things got so dull that the players began watching the fans.

Well, for the rest of the season all eyes better be front and center on the gridiron because Homecoming is a special game for MSU this year. The Spartans may have turned the proverbial corner last Saturday against a Purdue team that many rated as high as 17 points better than MSU.

The same thing happened last year when MSU was floundering with a 1-4 record and the whole campus was yelling for the coach’s scalp. This year a new coach with a new philosophy comes in, starts off 1-4 and everyone hits the panic button but him.

Last year’s team righted itself at midseason and came on strong to finish 5-5-1. Some experts called MSU “the best 5-5-1 team in the country,” and the professional football league’s player draft certainly proved them right.

Oh yes, the team that MSU beat to turn its season around last year? None other than this year’s Homecoming opponent, the Wisconsin Badgers.

This year’s Homecoming game belongs to the players. The team that Denny Stolz has put together is starting to jell. Because of early season performances the Spartans haven’t been able to call Spartan Stadium “home.” Since their opening loss at Northwestern, Spartan fans have not made the team feel at home in their own stadium.

Spartan teams have always played well in Homecoming games and there is no reason to think that this year’s game won’t fit the pattern. Nobody hates losing worse than the players themselves.

Good teams excite the fans and good fans excite good teams. Last year’s upsets of Purdue and Ohio State were the combined efforts of the team and its followers.

A close watch will be kept on MSU’s offense Saturday and guess who’ll be doing the looking? Here’s a clue. There’s 86,000 of ’em and they live in the Columbus, Ohio area. Three years in a row? Why not!

Basketball picture bright

By CHARLES JOHNSON
State News Sports Writer

For some time now the talk around this title - hungry campus has shifted to basketball and the possibility that MSU will bring home all the marbles in the Big Ten this year.

Will this be the season? No one really knows. And if you are looking for a prediction from head coach Gus Ganakas, well, he is as tight-lipped about his team's championship prospects as the other nine coaches in the conference.

"I'd say flatly that we'll be a Big Ten title contender if it wasn't for the immediate eligibility of freshmen under the new rule," Ganakas said. "But now the whole picture can be changed overnight by the emergence of a super freshman or two."

If physical conditioning was the sole criterion for winning a Big Ten basketball title, the Spartans would have to be considered a top threat. Ganakas has his team going through extensive running drills in preparation for the season opener against Central Michigan, Dec. 1.

"At this point we have a three-fold objective," Ganakas said. "Our primary aim is peak condition. We don't have that much size, so we're going to have to compensate for it with our speed. Secondly, we want to build our defense. Last year we led the conference in offense, but our defense lagged at the bottom of the standings. Finally, we want to develop our offense. Our squad has an abundance of perimeter players (guards and forwards), but we have to get some help from our inside men. Our game is going to be decided by inside play."

Ganakas said everyone is in high spirits now because no decisions have been made on personnel, with the exception of Mike Robinson at guard.

Lack of size will be a handicap for the Spartans, but quickness and speed should help to overcome it.

Leading the MSU entourage is two-time Big Ten scoring champ Robinson, who at 5-11 is a fixture at one of the guard spots. Miracle Mike will be paired in the backcourt with one of four experienced lettermen.

In the battle for the other guard spot are 6-2 junior Bill Glover, 6-1 junior Pete Davis, 5-9 sophomore Benny White and 5-10 junior Steve Borenstein.

Waging a fierce battle for the center position are three lettermen, who have all been impressive in drills thus far. They include 6-7 junior Lindsay Hairston, 6-9 sophomore Cedric Milton and 6-6 junior Lovelle Rivers, who missed last year with a knee injury.

Hairston and 6-4 sophomore Terry Furlow were starting forwards much of last season and should be more able-bodied this time around. If Hairston does not play at the center spot, he will definitely see action at forward again. Milton served as a backup center to the departed Bill Kilgore and is a potentially great pivot man.

Also in the fight for the forward positions will be 6-4 Tom McGill, who looked good the latter part of last season, 6-5 senior Brian Bredlin, 6-8 senior James Shereda, 6-2 junior Joe Shackleton and 6-4 sophomore Dave Jackson.

Four freshmen will join the squad, including Edgar Wilson, 6-5 forward from Dowagiac; Wayne Butler, 6-5 guard from Norristown, Pa.; Robert Chapman, 6-2 guard from Saginaw and Kevin Vandenberghe, 6-3 guard from Sterling Heights.

The Spartans lost three key players from last year's squad, including Kilgore, three-time winner of the Chicago Tribune Award as MSU's most valuable player, guard Gary Ganakas and forward Allen Smith.

Ganakas expects to see a shift of basketball power in the Big Ten, as several teams suffered heavy losses. Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio State should not be as strong as last year, while the Spartans and defending champion Indiana have basically the same units as last year.

Lilly important to coaching staff

By GARY SCHARRER
State News Sports Writer

Earlier this week assistant football coach Jimmy Raye asked student manager Rick Lilly if he could drive out to Lansing's Capital City Airport to pick up Spartan quarterback Charlie Baggett.

Lilly said he would. It wasn't really one of his managerial responsibilities, just some of the help given to the football coaching staff.

Lilly is a Lansing senior who is in his second year as head football manager. He coordinates a nine-man staff. Their obligations are many, and their recognition is limited. Lilly works seven days and estimates that he contributes 50 hours a week.

Lilly said being part of the team, itself, brings satisfaction. "I grew up in Lansing. We used to come to the games or hear the noise from our backyard, now I'm part of the team," Lilly said. "It's sort of an ego trip."

"There was no leverage given to the head manager which he could use to discipline those managers that didn't perform their duties," Lilly said. "If someone didn't come in there was nothing I could say to them."

"The coaches were sympathetic. Neither they nor the players could believe we weren't getting anything."

Seniors received a football ring, a varsity letter and four tickets to each home game. Underclassmen received two home game tickets. But the attrition rate was high. Lilly said many good

Spartan soccer goalie Dave Goldman has been one of the more proficient soccer players in the nation, but he doesn’t believe MSU has been particularly fair or realistic toward its soccer players.

Goalie’s image of MSU changes

By JACK WALKDEN
State News Sports Writer

MSU’s soccer team has always been noted for its goals, with Charlie Dedieh, Joe Baum and Les Lucas in the 60’s. However, for the first time in their history, the Spartans have a legitimate all-American candidate in goal in Dave Goldman.

Goldman has been the big difference between winning and losing for the Spartans this season. In eight games, Spartan opponents have collected 151 shots on goal but Goldman has yielded just eight goals.

Goldman began and played most of his early soccer at his home town of Daly City, Calif., which is a suburb of San Francisco.

“I started playing soccer in sixth grade for a team called the Hakoha Athletic Club,” Goldman said. “My cousin had come over from Israel and was playing for Hakoha and he asked me to join the team.”

Goldman played two years for Hakoha and then joined on with the Greek - American Athletic Club. It was with this team that he received most of his experience.

“The team was sponsored by the Greek - American group, but we wanted to be called the Internationals because we had people on the team from all over the world,” Goldman said.

“When I was 17, we won the state championship by beating a team from Los Angeles, 1-0, in the title game,” he continued. “The game was played in Stanford’s football stadium so I got some early pressure action there.”

“From the state championship, we went to play in the U.S. Challenge Cup. We lost in the regionals, however, to another Los Angeles team by a 3-1 score. The regional game was played in the Los Angeles Coliseum with over 100,000 fans there.”

Besides playing for the two Athletic Clubs, Goldman also played for his high school team after its beginning during his sophomore year.

He also played basketball in high school with an unusual switch from guard to center.

“I played guard in junior high school but I grew so much during the summer between eighth and ninth grade that they moved me to center in high school,” Goldman explained.

Goldman had an interesting reason for coming to MSU after graduating from high school.

“I received scholarship offers from some of the top soccer teams on the West Coast,” Goldman said. “But I realized that college was a learning experience both in and out of the classroom. For this reason I needed to go out of state.”

“Another reason I wanted to go away from home is that there are certain winter activities that you can’t do in California.”

Even though I wanted to go out of state, I still wanted to play for a good soccer team and MSU was the national champion in 1968 and 1969 so I decided to go here.”

Since coming to MSU, Goldman has had an entire change of mind about the athletic program here and is very bitter about the way he was treated.

“With national champs in the late 60’s I figured that MSU would continue to treat soccer in the same fashion as in...”

Harriers ready for Big Ten meet

BILL COSTABILE
State News Sports Writer

After six long weeks, MSU's cross-country team can make or break its season Saturday at the Big Ten meet at Champaign, Ill. MSU wound up the regular season with a 2-5 mark overall and 1-3 against Big Ten foes, but the whole season hinges on the Big Ten meet.

MSU coach Jim Gibbard says his team has as good a chance as any to win.

"The record we had doesn't mean a thing at the Big Ten meet," Gibbard said. "The season is a success or failure depending on what you do at the Big Ten meet.

"In 1971 we didn't have a winning season, but we won the Big Ten. It boils down to having your team up for one last race.

"If we can have our top six men all finish under 30 minutes we'll be in good shape for a run at the title.

"The primary concern for the Spartans now is running a good race together and hoping it's good enough to win. They have improved each week and appear to be ready to put it all together.

Should the Spartans manage to win the title it will be their 15th Big Ten cross-country title, tying the record held by the University of Wisconsin.

Gibbard expects sophomore Fred Teddy to be up among the leaders. As a freshman last year Teddy finished 14th. He figures to be the Spartans' top threat this year.

"I don't want to be classified as a superstar," Teddy said. "I'm just another runner on this team. I haven't been pleased with my running this year, but I'm going into the Big Ten meet with a winning attitude.

"This team has the potential to go all the way and we'll definitely be putting the heat on the favorites. It won't be hard to get up for the meet," he said.

Gibbard is confident his team will make a good showing at Champaign Saturday.

"We're not one of the favorites, but we'll be ready," Gibbard said. "We haven't had any late-season injuries and we had a strong week of practice.

"Any one of five teams are listed as favorites, but that doesn't mean a thing," he said. "The team that gets hot will win it. This year's race will probably be the biggest toss up we've ever had in the Big Ten.

To correctly assess MSU's performance in Big Ten meets, a closer look at its more recent record is in order. MSU did not win its first Big Ten title until 1951. By that time Wisconsin had won 15 championships. Since 1961 MSU has captured 13 titles. That is a bit of a dynasty in the strongest sense of the word.

managers either quit or failed to return the following season because they couldn't afford the time.

The managers are being paid for their work since Denny Stolz accepted the head coaching job. Five of the senior members receive money towards their tuition, it varies from $50 to $400 at term, depending on seniority.

"A lot of times now I'm told by the coaches that I'm not paid to go to class," Lilly laughed. Lilly said MSU's student manager program was one of the worst in the Big Ten conference, but the recent changes have taken it near the top.

All the assistant managers have specialized responsibilities in practice sessions as well as in games. Each manager is assigned to one of the assistant coaches during warm-ups and drills.

The duties are myriad, including such tasks as chasing footballs, posting opponents' starting lineups in the locker room, distributing scouting reports, taking care of films and projectors, passing out room assignments and keys when on the road, arranging wake-up service and helping the equipment managers on game days.

Assistant managers on this year's squad are Steve Repko, Craig Murray, Paul Weller, Gary Clifton, Rick Thomas, Jaime Smith, Gerry Goresch and Bob Sommer.

Approximately 10 applications for managerial positions are received each year by the head manager who also does the interviewing and hiring.

"Rick Lilly as a manager is like talking about an all-American football player," Stolz said. "He's an excellent thinker and very dedicated. Managers like him don't receive enough publicity."

"When I got the job one of the first people I talked to was Rick," Stolz said. "I recruited him. I talked him into coming back."

"If you get a bad one you're in trouble," he added. "Should they forget to bring a projector or something on an away trip, the whole team could break down. They carry a lot of responsibilities."

Stolz thinks the managers should be paid commensurately with the amount of work they do, and insisted they should be financially rewarded.

"I don't think it should be volunteer work," he said. "Sometimes when you do volunteer work that reflects in the way in which you work."

Last season, five freshmen earned spots on MSU's varsity hockey lineup and helped the team to its best season ever.

This year the five loners, now with a year's experience under their belts in the rugged Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA), form the nucleus of the squad's top two lines.

MSU opens its 1973-74 schedule tonight and Saturday night at 7:30 against nonleague foe Western Ontario at the Demonstration Hall Ice Arena.

Earlier this week, coach Amo Bessone said he had his first two lines all set — Steve Colp centering Mark Calder and Daryl Rice and Tom Ross between John Sturges and Brendan Moroney.

Of the six, only Calder is a senior. The rest are sophomores.

"I think the sophomores are even stronger this year," Bessone said.

Colp set a new single-season scoring record last season, netting 35 goals during the campaign.

Other returning forwards include East Lansing's Denny Olmstead, senior Michel Chaurest (who is only eligible until the end of December), senior John Garvey, Darl Bolton and Glenn Menoni.

The Spartans were happy with their recruiting this year and several freshmen are again expected to break into the lineup.

"Having five of them excel is a once in a lifetime thing, but we do expect a lot of help from our freshmen," Bessone said.

Rob Harris, Dave Kelly, Steve Oulahen and Bill Hourigan are among those freshmen forwards expected to see action.

The two most acclaimed freshmen though, are defenseman Kelly Cahill and goalie Gary Carr.

MSU produces strong athletes as women's program develops

By Pam Ward
State News Sports Writer

How often have you seen the name Charli Baggett in print or the picture of head coach Denny Stolz from the sidelines? At least twice a week, and understandably, since they play a major role in the sports program at MSU.

Yet, there are several others who also deserve the recognition for their outstanding contributions to the athletic program.

MSU boasts nine women's varsity sports and has established itself as a leader in the progressive movement taking place in women's athletics today. It has also turned out some of the best women athletes in the Midwest region, and it is time that they be honored.

If there was a Hall of Fame for women at MSU, which there certainly should be, senior Manono Beamer would undoubtedly be among the chosen. Beamer paced the women's golf team this season, taking four medalist honors including the Midwest regional championship. Yet it takes more than just being a winner to be set in a class of her own and Beamer has the extra that is needed.

"Manono is an amazing person," Mary Foxsum, coach of the women's golf team said. "She has the dedication and loyalty that makes her a fine golfer and leader."

"But she has more than that," Foxsum continued. "She is a completely untouchable giving person. I've had so many comments from other people on how she is such a tremendous addition to our team that she can't help but enhance our image. Her skill, her leadership, her concern— all these things added up make for one terrific individual and athlete."

Often times, the best go unnoticed or at least unrecorded by the media. Such is the case of senior Joey Spano. Spano plays field hockey, basketball and softball and excels in all.

"Joey is good at whatever she does," Mikki Baal, coach of the women's field hockey and basketball teams said. "She's a flashy player who has a lot of speed. She also has a good attitude and relationship with the other kids on the team."

Though they are not 'flahby' players, senior Bonnie Smoke and junior Becky Dickson have also been strong assets to the women's sports program. Smoke has been a participant in nearly every sport and Dickson has been a member of the volleyball team and tennis squad. Both are strong leaders and are always willing to lend a helping hand to the varsity program.

"Bonnie and Becky are both good performers and team leaders," Karen Peterson, coach of the women's volleyball team said. "They are always around to help out with the program. If we need a volunteer, they are there."

Women's athletics at MSU have been channeled into a growing and highly successful program. However, it takes more than just a few outstanding performers to develop such a program. Bell Jackson, the athletic director in charge of women's sports, deserves credit for her knowledge, ability and persistent devotion to the betterment of the program. The women coaches who have taken the time to teach their skills and have led Spartan teams to championship titles and respectability, deserve recognition. Above all, are those women who devote their time and energies as athletes. Certainly, their contributions cannot be overlooked.

Barnes. MSU lost its all-American defenseman, Bob Boyd, to professional hockey over the summer and that's the hole the Spartans must patch. Senior Chris Morley, freshman Greg Glunz, seniors Paul Pavlich and Uwe Drews, freshman Fred Smith and sophomore Ed Trenk are the other Spartan defensemen.

Carr, who Besone called the "best goalie in the Toronto area" last year, along with seniors Ron Clark and Tom Bowen and freshman Greg Mass, all will get a chance at the net. Besone said he would be experimenting during the games trying to find the right combinations for next weekend's opening league action against Notre Dame.

MSU finished last year with an overall record of 23-12-1. The Spartans also tied for third in the 10-team WCHA, also their highest finish ever.

The league went back to the conventional two points for a victory and one for a tie system this year.

Besone believes it is the strongest college hockey league in the country: "It is without a doubt the strongest, there's just no comparison. The Badgers have one, two or three strong teams. In our league, everybody is strong.

"Everyone also had great recruiting this year. It's going to be a hell of a race."

The other conference teams include national champion Wisconsin, Michigan, Michigan Tech, Minnesota, Notre Dame, Denver, Colorado College, North Dakota and Minnesota-Duluth.

Policies upset Goldman

the past," Goldman said. "I have really been shocked at the administration of the MSU soccer program. I expected to be treated like other athletes. "At MSU, there are football and basketball players and then there are other athletes," he continued.

"I'm proud of being a member of the soccer team, but I have nothing at MSU to be proud of. I've never been treated with any respect here.

"I play for myself and for the team, but not for MSU, because they're (he and the team) the only ones who care for you.

"I tell the young guys this, too. They come here expecting to be treated like athletes and get fan support. You don't get it here.

"Burt Smith is always saying that football gets all the support because it's the only money - making sport. If all Smith can think about is money, I think he's going to lose a lot of West Coast players. This is going to cost Smith in dollars and cents because my friends and I are going to tell all our friends what it's really like here.

"I came to MSU because MSU was known to be a soccer power. I paid out-of-state tuition to play for them. Now I'm going to go back and tell all my friends that it's all a dream."

On the whole, Goldman still enjoys the game of soccer even though he's bitter at MSU. "The reason I enjoy soccer is because it's a sport that everyone can play," he said. "All you have to do is practice and develop some skills. "Football is getting so that you have to be huge or fast or you can't play. With soccer, everyone can play," Goldman said.
