OK on energy bill expected

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okl., and Majority Leader Mikepool, D-Wash., have agreed that a compromise bill containing many Senate changes will be accepted by the House and sent to the Senate for its concurrence.

The compromise bill is expected to be voted on by the House this week, after which it will be sent to the Senate for its consideration.

The Senate-passed bill includes several key provisions, including increased funding for energy conservation programs and measures to address climate change.

The House-passed bill, on the other hand, includes provisions for increased funding for fossil fuel research and development, as well as measures to support the fossil fuel industry.

The compromise bill is expected to be a compromise between the two bills, with both sides making concessions in order to secure passage of the legislation.

News Analysis

The compromise bill is seen as a significant step forward in addressing the nation's energy needs, with both sides of the aisle working to find common ground.

The bill includes provisions for increased funding for renewable energy research and development, as well as measures to support the growth of the solar and wind industries.

Despite some differences, the compromise bill is expected to be passed by both the House and Senate, with President Biden expected to sign it into law.

Easing the crisis

President Wharton has called for a national meeting to address the crisis in the Mideast, involving the leaders of the United States, Brazil, and the United Kingdom.

The meeting is expected to discuss ways to reduce tensions and improve relations between the countries involved.

Candidates fail to excite student voters

The latest poll shows that candidates are struggling to gain the attention of young voters, with neither candidate currently leading in the race.

Pollsters attribute this to the fact that both candidates have been criticized for their lack of connection with young voters and their failure to propose meaningful solutions to the issues facing the country.

Turf to go

Democratic Senator Brenda and Republican Senator John are in a heated battle for the Senate seat in the state. The race is expected to be close, with both candidates working hard to secure the votes of young voters and independent voters.

Unit schedules rally to seek impeachment

The Michigan High School Education Students Board, through a resolution today that describes a proposed state constitutional amendment to permit

"We believe that the state should provide for the education of its citizens," said the board's chairman, John Miller, "and that it should take steps to ensure that such education is available to all.

A member of the board, speaking on behalf of the board, said, "We are concerned about the quality of education in our state, and we believe that the state should be responsible for ensuring that all students have access to a good education.

The resolution calls for the state to provide funding for public schools, and for the state to ensure that all students have access to a good education. It also calls for the state to provide funding for higher education, and for the state to provide funding for vocational education.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 12 to 5, with three abstentions.

GENERAL MANAGER STATE NEWS 345 STUDENT SERVICES
The Academic Council was meeting last Tuesday when it voted to table the ASMSU proposal to place nominating scandal liaison advisors on the board of trustees.

Council's reasoning for taking the proposal was that it wanted to have a report next Tuesday from the Ad hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance before making its decision on the proposal's merits. Since the Ad hoc committee already issued its objections to the liaison proposed Oct. 19, it is unlikely it will change its mind in one week. It is difficult to accept the council's reason for delay. The proposal was first sent to the Academic Council by President Wharton to get the faculty's opinion of the plan. Apparently, the council, which has this faculty for every student representative, did not want to hear the truth, let alone go against it on this. A substitute motion to have four faculty and four alumni liaison advisors on the board, in addition to students, was also tabled. This proposal raises serious objections. The presence of faculty liaison on the board could adversely affect their employers-employee relationship with the university. And alumni are already adequately represented on the board of trustees. Six board members are ASMSU alumni.

Now the proposal will have to wait at least until the Nov. 27 Academic Council meeting. And if the ad hoc committee recommends any significant changes in the structure of academic governance, such as reducing the number of representatives on the council, the proposal will be pushed aside, perhaps for several months. Perhaps the Ad hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance should take a second look at the Academic Council and determine how to table the student liaison proposal before that committee makes its recommendations next week for changes necessary in academic governance.

Regardless of the Academic Council's opinion of the ASMSU proposal or its counterpart by the faculty, some action should have been taken. The reasoning behind council's failure to act was merely an excuse, and not a very good one at that.

Tableting the student liaison proposal was clearly a stifling tactic, the council, intended to make student representation on the board of trustees even more difficult.

The exposition of real estate developers is no surprise. Development and recreational vehicle manufacturers oppose the bill. At least if the land is farmed, it can always be restored, even if it is destroyed. If it is used as a parking lot, the council could have gotten its hands dirty.

Last week a fishing trip was a news event andm agoing with fish for the Parkader, Bauer house for "East Lansing is a ridiculously busy town

The debate of the council in the press against the ASMSU proposal is not at all supportive. This is a cause that should be defended even if the council is not willing to go along. Business used to be as simple and straightforward as it is now.

The main problem is that there is no agreement on what the future will be. The council argues for its own convenience.

I am happy that more real estate articles are available. I don't think the real estate development industry is a nonprofit organization that would do anything "unprofitable," but the "prospect," and "acquaint."

The council's arguments against the bill are not in the name of the council, but in the name of the council. The council argues for its own convenience.

The council advocates for its own convenience. The council advocates for its own convenience. The council advocates for its own convenience.

Prompt action needed on farm bill

A bill along the lines of the farm bill is needed to keep farm land in production, not in the hands of land speculators for building housing developments and shopping centers.

The mechanics of the bill would give farmers a reimbursement on property taxes of more than $6 per acre on their annual farm land value. The catch is that the land must continue to be farmed for a period of 10 years.

If this stipulation is not enforced, farmers would have to pay back taxes on the land over the difference between land assessed for farming and land assessed for real estate development. This bill, or some other measure like it, must be passed to make farming a more profitable venture. If not, more farmers are going to be pulled into real estate development, earning more money than farming could.

But if farmers keep selling farm land, where are we going to grow food? Real estate developments are not going to be found hungry enough in human existence.

Food prices are already high and show no downward trend. If prices continue to go up and food production to go down, eating may soon be a luxury.

For this food crisis is not quite that bad yet, this is a serious problem that must be faced on a more important scale.

This bill is already making the future in jeopardy. They consist mainly of real estate developers and housewives and recreational vehicle manufacturers.

This point of view is presented by Dr. George Burpee, Graduate student in Economics, as a way of stimulation to thought on the subject of farm land preservation.

The point is that the bill is not enough. Farmers must have land to grow food. The council's arguments in varying form and manner are not the way.

People have to eat. Farmers must have land to grow this food. The structure of the council in varying form and manner is not the way. The Michigan Legislature has a chance to make sure that the people continue to eat.

The legislation should not work under the pressures of real estate developers, but, instead, look to the future.
Impeachment of Nixon:

Thank you for presenting me the express matter of Donald Riegel's impeachment. I must strongly urge the President to proceed with the House of Representatives immediately to introduce legislation to re-establish an independent prosecutor.

The President appears to an active obstruction of justice and impeachment proceedings must go forward.

Be assured that I will pursue this matter exclusively until the impeachment and conviction of the guilty of criminal acts are determined.

The major damaging testimony against Nixon was in the Watergate affair under the legal control of Dr. E. Howard Hunt. Nixon, despite the Dictionary of Dr. E. Howard Hunt, did not have the legal concept of the United States requiring compliance with Judge Sirica's order.

Another highly damaging piece was to re-establish an independent prosecutor to vigorously pursue criminal investigations of Watergate and related matters. It is essential that the President formally file a declaration agreement with Judge Sirica's order.

It is important to note the啁mple 1973 was not difficult to achieve.

Church leaders urge prayers for nation

NEW YORK — Like most people, American religious leaders are praying for President Bush. Several have given special prayers for the nation's survival.

"Christians, Jews and Muslims pray in the same language for the same God," said Rabbi Arthur Waskow of the Philadelphia-based Shalom Institute. "This is the only religious united call for peace that is ever made throughout the faithful in this country."

The president will address the nation Thursday night, and leaders are calling on the faithful to pray for him.

"It is not a matter of asking God to protect our president," said the Rev. Andrew E. Boyer, a pastor at the First Baptist Church in Dallas. "But we do need to pray that God will be with him, that he will be able to do the right thing and that we may live in peaceful times."

The leaders urged people to pray that God will guide Bush and help him make wise decisions.

"We pray that God will use President Bush to lead the nation toward peace and reconciliation," said the Rev. Frank A. Schaeffer, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Beverly, Mass. "We pray that he will be a president who will bring hope to the nation and to the world."

The leaders also said they are praying for the safety of people who are involved in the war in Iraq.

"We pray that God will protect all those who are serving in the military and those who are working in the conflict area," said the Rev. Michael J. McConkey, pastor of the First Baptist Church in San Antonio. "We pray for the safety of all those who are involved in this conflict and that God will guide them in their work."

McCann creates 'feeling music'

BY JACOB DOMINAR State News Photographer

Les McCann is a feeling man. He doesn't like to talk about music because he feels he must be heard, not understood. He let his fingers do the talking to his music.

McCann is a 50-year-old man with a single今日行 in life—music. He has been playing it all week, and will play through this weekend. His music is soothing, and he is letting his music do the talking to his music.

"The way I feel that I am bridging a gap, a gap playing people and creating," McCann said with a smile. "We're just like the people who play it, we just hear the instruments and know how to play them.

In planning, the McCann music had to reach an African rhythm section and the best feeling at jazz. "We try to make a hit song," McCann said. "McCart and Clarke at the front of the room. "We are people music, it's a music that makes you feel."

Louie Bellson, concert, at the front of the room. "We are people music, it's a music that makes you feel.

McCann referring to his new album "Lover," which he plans to release in the coming weeks. "I want the people to feel like they're at a concert," McCann said. "I want the people to feel like they're at a concert."

The combination of the two is what makes McCann's music unique. He has combined the two elements to create a new type of music that is unlike any other.

McCann plans to continue his music career, and hopes to one day make a record that is even better than his last. "I want to make a record that is even better than my last," McCann said. "I want to make a record that is even better than my last."

QUINTET CONCERT IMPROVES SLOWLY

One of the most interesting concerts of the term took place Thursday night at the Michigan Union auditorium. The Richard Quintet, consisting of Richard Alexander Barøy, Curtis G. Sigurdson, Lawrence Kresge, Claus R. Suravitis, and William E. Stolper, was joined by pianist Votapek and violist Harvey Mailander. They were assisted by pianists Madeleine Querry and David Gouland. Mr. Mailander and Mr. Sigurdson were the only members of the Quintet who had missed any concerts of the term.

The concert opened with Mailander’s “Quintet No. 1.” It is a fast, free-moving piece whose music is not only difficult but also elaborate. It begins with an introduction followed by a brilliant opening theme. The music is full of color and variety, with many notes and harmonies. The piece is quite effective and will be enjoyed by all listeners.

The second number of the evening was Tomkins’ “Quintet No. 2,” written in honor of Bob Hope. It is a fast-moving piece, full of color and variety. The music is quite effective and will be enjoyed by all listeners.

The third number of the evening was a slow, free-moving piece. It is quite effective and will be enjoyed by all listeners.

Spartans limping to Columbus to take on powerful Buckeyes

By GARY SCHUMER
State News Sports Writer

Many people view little Big Ten football as a small problem to be swept under the rug before getting out and operating the mighty Ohio State Buckeye's yielding to the country's No. 1. (Ohio State fans, of course, may be more eager with talk of head coach Woody Hayes.)

The Spartans, who lost to the Buckeyes in Columbus the first time, lost 10-0 on the Big Ten's second weekend, but the trend is not expected to continue.

OSU's defense is the strongest in the country, holding onto average of 15.2 points a game. The Spartans' offense simply cannot

The loss of three key runners, Chris Hodge, Dick Bowen and Wayne Minty, has hurt the team, especially against the Buckeyes. But a strong defense, the loss of these three runners may be a big plus for the Buckeyes. The defense, in fact, is one of the best in the conference.

Overcrowding hits residential colleges

The overstretching of educational facilities and the acute shortage of housing available at several colleges has caused a unique problem for students at Michigan State University and Michigan State College, as told by Lyman Briggs, a Lansing Daily News reporter.

"Overcrowding has been a widespread problem," said Briggs, "especially in the residential colleges. Students are finding it difficult to secure accommodations because of the limited number of rooms available."

The problem is not limited to the residential colleges, but is a widespread issue across the university. "Overcrowding is also affecting the non-residential colleges," said Briggs. "The halls are overcrowded to the point where students are finding it difficult to study or relax in the halls."

Briggs said that the university is aware of the problem and is taking steps to alleviate it. "The university is working on an expansion program to increase the capacity of the halls," said Briggs. "However, the expansion is not enough to meet the demand."

"We are trying our best to accommodate the students," said Briggs. "But the problem is becoming more severe as the enrollment increases."

Briggs added that the university is also looking into alternative solutions to the problem. "We are exploring the possibility of building new halls," said Briggs. "But this is a long-term solution and it may not be enough to meet the demand."
Area schools, state start shift from miles to meters

The metric system has been a legal form of business in the United States since 1866 and has always been the national state of measurement. The metric system is based on units of 10, allowing for easier conversions and scientific computations.

A new metric system, a 10-year based on and gram metric weight, a centimeter is one-hundredth of a meter and a kilogram is 1000 grams.

In Michigan, the State Board of Education has begun their renovation in 1987 to move the State Board of Education to a system of higher and more objective metrics.
