

A hidden cheat sheet, a furtive glance, a shuffled foot or tapped pencil — all are methods used by students, at MSU and across the country, to cheat on exams. The penalties at MSU range from a warning to suspension, which was the fate of 10 students last year who went before the Student - Faculty Judiciary, the body with jurisdiction over cheating cases.

Cheating problem continues; judiciary opts for discipline

Joe's wristwatch ticks loudly as he hunches over his final exam in humanities. His damp palms wrinkle the score sheet and a fat drop of sweat rolls down his back. "Damn, I wish I'd studied more," he thinks. "I can't afford to flunk this baby."

With a quick glance at the professor, he carefully lowers the crib sheet tucked up his sleeve. . . .

The problem of cheating has plagued university officials ever since formal education began. Since medieval times, students caught cheating have been expelled from universities. Even now, centuries later, MSU is carrying on that tradition.

Joyce Tubaugh, asst. director of judicial programs said that 11 formal charges of cheating were brought against students during the last academic year. Of those, 10 were suspended and one student's diploma was withheld.

Figures since 1968 show that 65 per cent of the students caught are either juniors or seniors.

Tubaugh said most cheaters are caught in the act at final exam time. She explained that the Student - Faculty Judiciary, which has jurisdiction over cheating cases, usually opts to suspend those found guilty because it feels academic honesty is an essential ingredient in the University community.

The judiciary also has the option of giving the guilty student a written warning or disciplinary probation. By this probation, the University may notify the student's parents and withdraw privileges such as driving on campus, holding office in a campus organization or representing the University in any interuniversity events.

She said the most common methods of cheating include: using crib sheets, signaling in class, "hawking" — looking on someone else's paper, — having someone else take the test and plagiarizing including submission of a paper purchased commercially.

In 1972 a firm called Write On, Inc., did a lucrative business selling term papers both in East Lansing and near other major universities nationwide, selling about 2,800 papers across the country each term.

The Write On office at 211 Abbott Road has since been replaced by The Paper Eater Copy Center which discontinued selling term papers in January.

One of the owners of the Paper Eater said, "We stopped doing that type of thing for a variety of reasons." She refused to comment further.

Tubaugh said the professor who detects the cheating may decide to simply flunk the student for that particular test. A student may then file a protest to the head of his department and a college grievance committee may hear his complaint.

If the instructor goes as far as failing the student for the whole term, the instructor must notify the dean of the college. Together they will decide if additional action is justified. If so, the case is brought before the Student - Faculty Judiciary which hears evidence on both sides.

Since 1968, only 28 cases of cheating have been brought before the Judiciary. Are MSU students so honest that only about a dozen cheat each year?

Betty Brooks, student chairwoman of the judiciary, acknowledged that many students never get caught.

"I am well aware of the number of students who do not get caught cheating. It's probably because professors don't want to be watchdogs," Brooks said.

Several students questioned said it made them angry to see others cheating on exams.

Jim Ault, junior, 588 S. Wonders Hall, said, "It makes me mad when I know that someone who has not put the same amount of time into a class that I have is going to get the same grade by cheating."

"I think a lot of people hawk on tests because the temptation is very great with so many people sitting close together."

Ault also noticed that professors sometimes put the same test on different colored paper so students will think they are different tests and will not cheat.

"They think they are fooling people but they aren't," he said.

One girl said she often sees cheating going on when a class has hundreds of students in it.

"There's often a group of about ten people who sit in the back row and compare answers," she said.

Another student said he was offered a peek at a test copy "for a small fee" by one student who knew how to get a copy of the exam before it was to be given.

One student happily explained his philosophy about cheating:

"I often have the intention of cheating, but I never do it. I go as far as writing out an elaborate cheat sheet, but by the time I've learned where all the information is on the cheat sheet, I've learned the material!"

One student who reluctantly admitted he cheated on exams said he did so to improve his grade. He usually glances over someone's shoulder when he wants to cheat, he said.

"I don't feel guilty, but I can't explain why," he said.

Two other students said they cheat when they have not had time to study and want to verify their answers. Both considered cheating widespread on campus.

Karl Thompson, chairman and professor of humanities said the best way to prevent "wandering eyes" during an exam is to do a good job of proctoring.

"If a student looks suspicious, the best thing to do is to ask him to change seats and let him know he's being observed. A word in advance or a timely warning should cut down on cheating," Thompson said.

He added that plagiarism can be avoided if professors work closely with students on their papers and receive progress reports from them.

Change magazine, in its April edition, reported that the best way to curb (continued on page 17)

Kissinger wins: Israel, Syria reach pact

Jerusalem (AP) — In a dramatic diplomatic triumph for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Israel and Syria agreed yesterday to separate their hostile armies in the Golan Heights front. The accord ended hopes for a more durable peace in the Middle East.

A senior American official said Kissinger believed the pact could lead to a resolution in Arab - Israeli relations and new impetus to more moderate Arab views.

But even as the agreement was announced, Israeli planes bombed and strafed "terrorist targets" on the western slopes of Mt. Hermon, and Syrian and Israeli tanks and artillery blazed away at each other on the Golan front for the 79th straight day, communiques said.

The pact, negotiated by Kissinger in 32 days of intense diplomatic effort, will be signed in Geneva on Friday. It followed by five months a similar accord he worked out between Israel and Egypt on the Suez front.

President Nixon said "a major roadblock to any permanent settlement has now been removed," adding that prospects for a Middle East peace now are "better than they have been at any time over the past 25 years."

A senior official in Jerusalem said the Geneva Middle East peace conference, which met briefly in December, would reconvene in July. The parley had adjourned while Kissinger arranged the Israeli - Egyptian agreement on the Suez front.

The Syrian - Israeli pact was much more difficult to achieve, and a senior U.S. official said the negotiations that led up to it were the toughest the secretary ever faced. He said every issue was contested with unparalleled tenacity.

The Israeli government expressed "its hope this agreement will be another step toward pacifying the Middle East and diverting the national energy of all the nations in the area to the benefit of their peoples and their economic, social and political advancement."

"The government of Israel expresses its deep appreciation to the U.S. Secretary of State, Dr. Henry Kissinger, for the great work he invested in securing this agreement and thanks the U.S. President, Mr. Nixon, for his sympathetic and positive stand."

The agreement came after Kissinger gained a major Israeli concession on Palestinian guerrilla attacks, and two days after it appeared he had fallen short of completing the pact despite marathon talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

The breakthrough came with Israel's agreement not to press for a written Syrian commitment to restrict its border against Palestinian infiltrators, whose incursions have left scores of Israelis dead.

Israeli sources said the government would accept a letter from the United States saying that any Israeli retaliation for terrorist attacks would be "understood" in Washington. This was interpreted to mean the United States would veto condemnations of Israel in the U.N. Security Council for such reprisals.

In the Israeli - Egyptian disengagement agreement signed last January, there was an unpublished understanding by both sides that paramilitary operations would be curbed, Israeli sources said.

It was this concession which sent Kissinger on an unexpected flight back to Damascus Tuesday, after declaring he would not return there on his current talks. He nailed down the Syrian side of the agreement during five hours of talks with Assad, then returned to Israel and won final approval, the sources said.

But Syria and Russia said in a joint communiqué Wednesday that a disengagement of Syrian and Israeli forces must be followed immediately by complete Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territories and the restoration of legitimate Palestinian rights.

And Israeli Information Minister Shimon Peres told a news conference the new agreement did not end the Arab - Israeli conflict.

"This is a step toward peace, but it is not peace," he said. Israel was "not released from the duty to guard our strength, build and nurture it, and in fact stand in defense of our lives," he added.

The Israeli government called a special meeting of parliament today to approve the pact and at that time Premier Golda Meir will reveal the details of the agreement for the first time.

Mideast stage ready for full peace parleys

Now that Israel and Syria have reached agreement on the disengagement of their forces in the Golan Heights, the next step likely will be an international conference which would attempt to work out a full Middle East peace agreement.

The disengagement accord engineered by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger — the first agreement between the two countries since Israel was created 26 years ago — is restricted to military issues.

The Israeli - Syrian disengagement pact should end the two months of clashes in the disputed Golan Heights and on Mt. Hermon, which commands a view deep into both countries.

Assuming that the fighting is now ended, the next question to be answered is where do the Arabs and Israelis go from here to achieve a lasting peace.

As Egypt and Israel signed a similar accord in January, resulting in a pullback of Israeli troops from the east bank of the Suez Canal, the stage is now set for full peace negotiations, presumably a resumption of last December's disappointing Geneva conference on the Middle East.

The Syrians refused to take part at the time, even though Egyptian and Jordanian representatives agreed to sit at the same table as their Israeli counterparts.

The meeting — chaired jointly by the United States and the Soviet Union — opened Dec. 21 but quickly faltered in the (continued on page 17)

Phase 1 of impeachment inquiry ends; evidence termed 'serious'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee completed the first phase of its impeachment inquiry yesterday, and chief counsel John Doar said, "I think the matters are of extreme seriousness."

The initial phase, carried out entirely in closed session, dealt with the evidence the committee staff has compiled of President Nixon's role in Watergate.

Albert Jenner, minority counsel for the impeachment inquiry, echoed Doar's words at a post session briefing when he said, "I think what has been presented to the committee up to this moment is of extreme seriousness for the Constitution and the institutions of the country."

Both Doar and Jenner cautioned against making any judgments until, in Doar's words, "we have considered all the evidence."

Chairman Peter W. Rodino emphasized a briefing after the closed session that the panel's investigation of the Watergate case is not complete. He said additional evidence, including testimony from witnesses, will be received later.

Earlier, James D. St. Clair, the president's chief Watergate lawyer, testified that the committee hear the Watergate case before moving on to other areas such as the International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) antitrust settlement and political contributions from dairy cooperatives.

But Rodino rejected St. Clair's suggestion, saying, "We are proceeding as we planned to proceed and as we will continue to proceed."

Doar said that one reason the committee would move on to other areas was returning to the Watergate cover up. Its investigation had reached the period just prior to the appointment of Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor in May 1973.

considering as a possible impeachable offense is the firing of Cox on Oct. 20, 1973.

Doar said that since the special prosecutor was investigating a number of areas other than Watergate at the time he was fired, it was decided to present evidence in these other areas before taking up the dismissal of Cox.

St. Clair, who has sat in on all the closed sessions, said he did not believe a substantial case had been presented so far. Earlier in the day, Vice President Gerald R. Ford said that the committee should call witnesses and proceed with the tapes and transcripts it already has.

St. Clair, in also asking for witnesses, said: "It does seem to me in all fairness, that some of the witnesses ought to be called . . . I think the American people deserve to hear live witnesses."

St. Clair acknowledged that he hoped that if the Watergate phase were completed and the public were to see no basis for impeaching the President, the impeachment move would quickly be dropped. He said his suggestion to wind up Watergate has the support of President Nixon.

He also said he would have no objection to the public playing of the taped presidential conversations held by the House Judiciary Committee.

St. Clair said he favors making public all the Watergate evidence received so far by the committee in its impeachment inquiry as well as the opening of future sessions of the committee.

The committee is considering public release of much of the evidence, but there has been no proposal for a public airing of the tapes.

Rodino has said he hopes the committee will begin hearing evidence next week relating to its investigation of the ITT antitrust settlement and political contributions from dairy cooperatives.

As the committee wound up the initial phase of its impeachment inquiry, it was preparing to challenge President Nixon's refusal to give it additional evidence.

Rodino has scheduled an open committee meeting for Thursday morning to consider subpoenaing more material from the White House and to debate what sort of response should be made to Nixon's refusal to comply with earlier subpoenas.

Senate Dems work on tax cut

Despite new warnings from President Nixon, Senate Democrats are continuing with plans for a $6.6 billion personal income tax cut.

Senate leaders predicted that the tax proposal would be passed by the Senate and would be sent to the House soon.

But whether the House will pass such a measure is unclear.

The President's views toward the tax bill were transmitted to the Capitol in a special report drawn up by his Council of Economic Affairs.

Nixon said in the report, "we must avoid the temptation of tax reduction without expenditure reduction," but did not recommend any specific government spending cuts.

Leading Senate tax cut advocates contend that a reduction is the best way to restore some of the consumer buying power lost because of irreversible increases in the price of oil and products manufactured with large inputs of energy.

S. Viets accused of pocketing aid

Thousands and perhaps millions of U.S. aid dollars are going into the pockets of South Vietnamese officers collecting pay for soldiers who either exist on paper only or never show up for duty, authoritative sources said Wednesday.

While no exact figures are available, estimates of the number of such soldiers ranges from a minimum of 50,000 to a maximum of 200,000 out of an authorized armed forces strength of 1.1 million. The average private's pay is about $300 a year.

A high-ranking South Vietnamese officer said he had been asked for a report on the so-called "phantom" soldiers by Major General John E. Murray, the head of the U.S. office in Saigon which supports and monitors the South Vietnamese armed forces.

Chicago sued on federal fund use

The office of Revenue Sharing has filed a suit against the city of Chicago, charging that it violated civil rights regulations in the use of federal revenue sharing funds.

The suit, which was received Tuesday by a U.S. District Court in Chicago, contends that the city has been using funds to support discriminatory practices in personnel hiring and promotion in the Chicago Police Dept.

The revenue sharing office initiated an investigation of city employment practices last September after receiving complaints from several civil rights groups in Chicago.

The 1972 Revenue Sharing Act states that revenue sharing funds cannot be used in any way to support discrimination.

Protesters file $1.2 million suit

The Gainesville Eight filed a $1.2 million suit against the government prosecutors who tried unsuccessfully to convict them of conspiracy to riot at the 1972 Republican convention.

The suit filed in a U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., alleges that before Emerson L. Poe took the witness stand he had reported regularly to the federal prosecution team on the eight antiwar veterans' defense tactics, thereby depriving the Gainesville Eight of the constitutional rights to counsel and due process.

Poe was identified as an FBI informer when he was called as a prosecution witness midway through the trial.

The suit asks the court to order Poe and four other alleged informers to pay at least $150,000 to each of the Gainesville Eight.

The eight antiwar protesters were acquitted of all charges against them after a one-month trial in the summer of 1973.

New economic adviser sworn in Kenneth Rush was sworn in Wednesday as President Nixon's No. 1 economic adviser.

Rush, 64, who has been deputy secretary of state since early 1973, will be a counselor to the President, specializing in economic matters.

President Nixon said Rush would also sit with the Cabinet and the National Security Council.

GM to repair overheating Vegas

A spokesman for General Motors (GM) said Wednesday that his company will make the needed repairs on all Chevrolet Vegas that suffered engine damage through overheating.

The Chevrolet official said overheating could warp the Vega's engine block and cylinders. He declined to estimate how much the firm expected to spend on the repairs.

GM's offer applies to every Vega the company has made since the small compact was introduced in 1970.

Italians mourn bombing victims

Millions of Italians participated in an unofficial day of mourning Wednesday, as police continued their hunt for those responsible for the terrorist bombing at Brescia.

The bombing, which occurred Tuesday during an anti-Fascist rally, killed six and injured 100 other individuals.

The day of mourning began with a four-hour general strike called by Italy's major labor unions. Giant rallies occurred as workers filled the streets in Rome, Milan and Turin.

Extremists claimed the Neo-Fascist party was responsible for the bombing, but Italian police are still collecting evidence.

Fulbright falls in Senate race

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arkansas Gov. Dale Bumpers, a rising star in Democratic politics, won the nomination to the U.S. Senate Tuesday night, ending the 30-year career of Sen. J.W. Fulbright, one of the nation's powers of foreign policy.

Fulbright's defeat makes Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., who disagrees with Fulbright on many issues, his likely successor as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In 16 years as chairman of the committee, Fulbright became the Senate's most influential advocate of limiting U.S. commitments abroad and curtailing foreign aid.

Sparkman has been a supporter of President Nixon's military budgets and foreign policy and a backer of foreign aid.

Bumpers had campaigned on a call for new leadership to deal with problems in Washington.

Banker John Harris Jones of Pine Bluff was slated to oppose Bumpers as the GOP candidate in November, but traditionally the Democratic nomination has been tantamount to election.

Senate races were involved in all three states that held primary elections Tuesday — Arkansas, Oregon and Kentucky.

In Oregon, former Sen. Wayne Morse, 73, who, like Fulbright, was a leading Senate critic of U.S. Vietnam policy, won the Democratic nomination for the Senate. Sen. Robert Packwood, who defeated Morse in 1968, was unopposed for the Republican nomination.

In Kentucky, Sen. Marlow Cook won the Republican nomination to retain his seat and will be opposed in the fall by Gov. Wendell Ford, who won the Democratic nomination.

In Arkansas, the Republican nomination for the Senate went to John Harris Jones. The Democratic nomination generally means election in Arkansas.

Governors races in two states produced these results:

*Arkansas — Former state Treasurer Robert Straub won the Democratic nomination, state Sen. Victor Atihy, the Republican.

Fulbright said Wednesday in an interview on NBC's "Today" show that his defeat was caused in part to general dissatisfaction with conditions in Washington.

"This is somewhat a reflection of 'throw everybody out' that's in Washington, because they're dissatisfied with Washington," he said. "I think it's partly that. I wouldn't want to take anything away from the governor's success."

Sparkman said in a telephone interview that the selection of the committee chairman to succeed Fulbright will be made next January by the Democratic steering committee and "it would be presumptuous of me" to say that he would take it.

Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs since 1967, is second ranking Democrat in seniority on the Foreign Relations Committee. In a recent interview, Sparkman said he is not wedded to massive foreign aid, but "I believe strongly in technical assistance for developing countries."

The White House declined to comment on Fulbright's defeat. However, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said that Fulbright has had a distinguished career in public service.

"There have been differences between the chairman and the administration on some points in the past," Warren said. "However, the President has always respected Chairman Fulbright for his distinguished public service."

Among the comments at the Capitol, Sen. Frank Church, D-Ida., said in a statement that Fulbright "has been a stand-up senator during a period when most have preferred to sit."

Senator William Fulbright and his wife Betty bow their heads to tell the wellwishers at his headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., that he concedes the Senate seat which he has held for 30 years to Gov. Dale Bumpers.

Clarification

Martin Fox, College of Natural Science representative to the Academic Council, was quoted in Wednesday's paper as saying the general faculty would show up in force at the fall meeting of the Academic Senate if they opposed student access to faculty ratings.

Fox actually said the faculty might be opposed to the entire two-level system of evaluation approved by the council, not just student access.

Booklet gives ratings of profs

By MIKE GALATOLA
State News Staff Writer

While students do not yet have access to formal faculty evaluations, they can now purchase a collection of instructor ratings.

"Grading the Profs," compiled and published by Mark Grebner, 501 MAC Ave., is now on sale at the bookstores for 95 cents. The booklet contains ratings of nearly 700 MSU faculty members and is based on over 4,000 questionnaires filled out by students.

The booklet gives an overall rating for each instructor and informs students how hard the work in his or her class was judged by winter term pupils. Comments on lecture style or personality were included if the students were nearly unanimous on this point, Grebner said.

Each evaluation includes the size of the sample taken for an individual instructor. A "small" sample means five to nine forms on the instructor were collected while "moderate" means 10 to 14 forms were turned in. A "large" sample means 15 to 25 forms were collected. While the smallest amount of forms gathered was five, one professor was rated from 163 forms.

Students looking for their favorite — or most disliked — professor might find this description: (The names and departments have been changed):

• "Redford, Robert — professor, physiology and psychology. Overall: excellent, top 20 per cent. Work: harder than average. Unusually pleasant prof. Large sample."
• "Nixon, Richard — instructor, political science. Overall: worse than average, probably in the bottom 20 per cent. Work: average. Weak at explaining himself. Large sample."

Students rated the majority of their winter term faculty members as average overall, and the work required was also generally described as average, Grebner said. Most of the samples fall into the "small" category.

Grebner distributed these forms in early April at four different locations: Bessey, Berkey, and Wells halls and Engineering Building. Only those instructors who taught classes with 50 or more students were evaluated in the booklet.

Students rated the faculty members on their grasp of material, their ability to answer questions and explain themselves, their lecturing ability and their personality. An overall rating was also included.

Arvo Juola, director of the Office of Evaluation Services, which handles the current Student Instructional Rating System, said Wednesday that the small number of forms collected allowed chance to have too great an influence on the ratings.

"It's like picking five names out of a hat of 50," Juola said. "You could get five people who are getting a 2.0 or five getting a 4.0."

Juola also said those students turning in forms might be more impassioned, either for or against the instructor, than their classmates.

Grebner admitted his booklet suffered from "low budget methodology" but said it was still good for a start.

He did not think students would benefit from Tuesday's Academic Council decision to allow students partial access to faculty evaluations.

In approving a student access amendment to a new two-level system of evaluation, the council said that the departments, which would design the second-level evaluation form for course design and instructor rating purposes, would decide which parts of the form would be available to students and which would not.

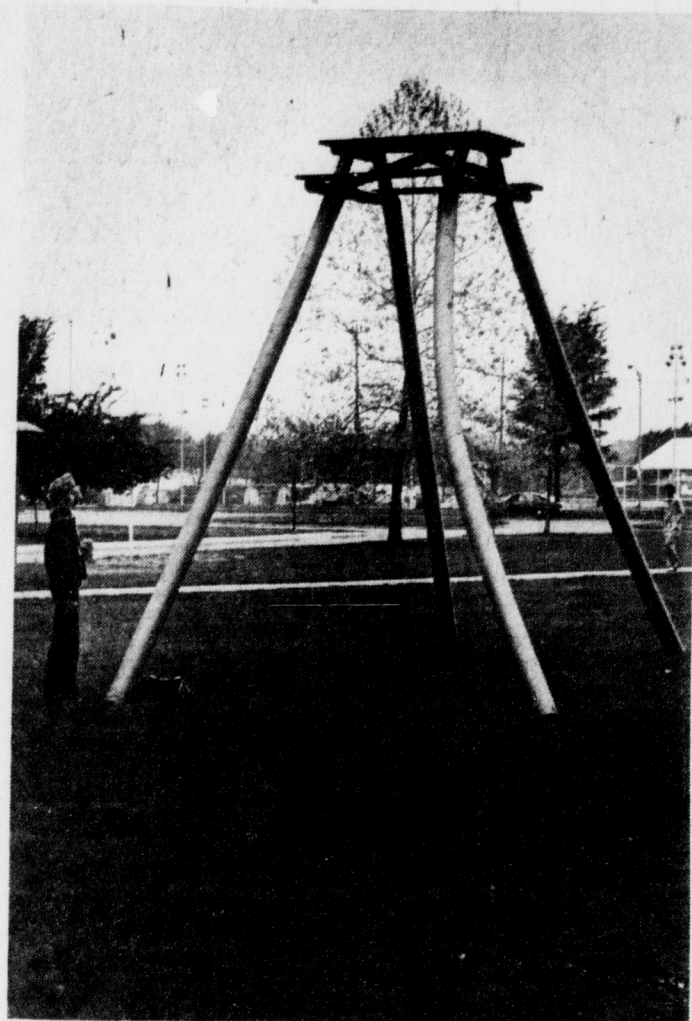

Students would not be allowed access to the first-level forms, which evaluate the instructors' basic obligations.

The approved system, which contains the student access feature, was referred to the Academic Senate for consideration.

"Unless the council insists on published, compiled ratings based on forms with intelligent questions, I don't think students will really get anything out of this access," Grebner said.

Grebner said Wednesday that most people seemed to be thumbing through the booklet instead of buying it.

The three major bookstores in East Lansing reported light sales since the booklet arrived on the shelves Tuesday. The MSU Bookstore in the International Center said sales were slow while the Campus Book Store, 507 E. Grand River Ave., said five copies had been sold. The Student Book Store, 421 E. Grand River Ave., said some copies had "probably" been purchased.

They stealthily pilfered the picnic table from the MSU fire station on Shaw Lane, then jointly raised it high in the air near Case Hall with heavy cardboard tubes, which earlier held the new AstroTurf being installed in Spartan Stadium. The table was recovered Wednesday afternoon by the MSU Grounds Dept., and a chuckling MSU fireman said there was "no harm done."

Action on budget moves slowly as legislators race against time

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
United Press International

As the number of working days shrink, so do the odds that the Michigan Legislature will complete work on the state's 1974-75 budget by the July 1 deadline.

Key lawmakers, who that the new budget would be completed by June 15 so they could recess for a full six weeks of campaigning for the August primary, have now abandoned that hope. But they still claim they can meet the July 1 deadline.

A contingency plan, however, is already in the works in case the budget does get mired. Senate Appropriations Chairman Charles O. Zollar, R-Benton Harbor, is drafting an omnibus budget bill to continue funding of state government past June 30 at current spending levels.

Thus far, not one budget bill has cleared the House or Senate. Four of the 18 appropriation bills have been reported from Zollar's committee and may come before the upper chamber this week.

But in the House, no appropriations measure has been reported out of committee. Appropriations Chairman William Copeland, D-Wyandotte, said Tuesday he expects several to be finished by his committee this week. He declined to predict whether the legislature would meet its schedule.

MSU's appropriations for 1974-75 will be included in the higher education appropriations bill, which has not yet been reported out of the Senate Appropriations Committee which will start action on the bill. Traditionally the community colleges appropriations bill is acted on before the higher education bill. Senate sources are hopeful the community college bill will come to the floor this week. If it does it is possible the higher education bill could be reported out of committee next week.

Majority Floor Leader Bobby D. Crim, D-Davidson, remained optimistic.

"The question isn't how far we're behind, but rather how fast can we catch up," said Crim, who is a member of the appropriations committee and in charge of the House's working schedule.

Gov. Milliken last week called key lawmakers of both parties into his office for a closed door session at which they promised to write a narrowly balanced budget closely parallel to his original recommendations presented in mid-January.

Milliken said the state can spend up to $200 million more than it expects to gather in revenues, due to a health $195 million surplus at the end of this fiscal year. The margin next year, however, is pegged at a slim $19.5 million — about enough to run state government for one day.

N. Ireland's regime falls; British resume control

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government Wednesday resumed direct rule of Northern Ireland after a 15-day general strike had brought the province to the brink of economic collapse and toppled the moderate local government.

In London, the British took action by suspending for four months the Northern Ireland Assembly, the provincial parliament that was the last vestige of home rule power in the province.

The Provincial Executive, a coalition of moderate Protestant and Roman Catholic politicians under Chief Executive Brian Faulkner, resigned Tuesday as the strike brought economic life in Northern Ireland to a standstill.

By suspending the assembly, the British in effect resumed direct rule of Northern Ireland under Merlyn Rees, the British cabinet minister responsible for the province. The move gives Rees time as a caretaker to try and work out another attempt at power sharing between the province's warring Protestant majority and Catholic minority.

Rees has invited leaders of all political parties to meet him in Belfast Thursday.

He had said all along he would negotiate only with elected representatives and not with the strike leaders.

The Protestant extremist Ulster Workers' Council suspended the strike earlier Wednesday but warned that unless its demands are met the strike would be renewed.

"We're keeping our options open," declared Jim Smyth, chief council spokesman. "We've shown what we can do. It's up to the British government to deliver now."

Despite the tough talk, the strikers had backed down too.

As recently as Tuesday night they had vowed to continue the shutdown until new elections were called in the province.

But thousands of Protestants thought the fall of the moderate government was enough for now. Workers defected in droves, threatening to return to their jobs no matter what the council said. In the end, the council called off the strike.

Life in Northern Ireland began to struggle back to normal Wednesday from the paralysis of the last few days. Electricity authorities said power should be back to 50 per cent by nightfall from the 20 per cent of normal to which it had fallen during the strike.

Most of the 250,000 workers who had stayed away from factories, either through conviction or intimidation, began flocking back to their jobs.

Tennis courts jammed

Bodily exercise is almost a prerequisite for keeping the clear head needed to meet academic rigors at MSU — especially at times like finals week. Therefore, it is vital for the University to maintain adequate athletic facilities for those involved in higher learning.

Tennis is one of the most popular warm weather sports. It firms up the leg muscles and does wonders for an overweight figure. Tennis can yield a suntan, satisfy the most competitive ego and keep the athlete in shape. The doubles court provides a great way to meet people, too.

Unfortunately, there are not enough tennis courts at MSU. The Administration and student government must move to remedy this shortage.

To accommodate the thousands of students who play tennis each week — intramural sports officials say there are at least 4,000 per week who make reservations on weekdays alone with another 1,000 using the court daily in tennis classes — there are only 50 courts on campus.

A survey should be taken to determine student and faculty athletic priorities, and whether the University community is willing to finance improvements such as more tennis courts.

A special committee formed by ASMSU already has recommended that eight tennis courts be included in a proposed new co-ed recreational facility, to be built in East Complex.

Evaluation actions fail to meet student needs

The Academic Council Tuesday approved a proposal to give students conditional access to faculty evaluation forms. Also, the independent ratings of faculty members compiled and published by MSU senior Mark Grebner were released this week.

Both are steps in the right direction, but indicate just how much more must be done to guarantee that students can read a dependable and comprehensive evaluation of their professors.

The Academic Council measure provides for student access to forms that would be similar to the evaluations students now fill out at the end of every term. There are, however, three major flaws in that plan.

First, basic information on instructors would be available to the administration only. Students would be deprived of ratings on how profs meet their "basic obligations" — such as how often they show up for class.

Secondly, it would be up to whims of individual departments to design forms their faculty would be evaluated with, and the departments would also be allowed to decide exactly what parts of these forms would be disclosed to the student body. But student input in the formulation of departmental evaluation forms must be mandatory, and data dealing with any aspect of the teaching process must be available to students.

Finally, the Academic Council decided to send the proposal on to the Academic Senate. The Academic Senate is made up of 2,250 faculty members. Since the senate will be able to amend the proposal as it sees fit, it appears the council wants to give the faculty every chance to veto the entire idea of student access to evaluations.

Grebner's rather limited evaluations are, of course, a direct reaction to the lack of a University rating system. However, they are based on the responses of too few students and cover only a small portion of the faculty.

But, as Grebner says in the introduction to the survey results, "Those who object to the low-budget methodology employed here should turn their attention to providing University resources to replace it with something better."

IM costs belong to users

To the Editor:

I was very glad to see that ASMSU is so concerned with the needs of students who use intramural facilities. It is heartening that this concern is so deep that it has surfaced in a proposal to force all students to finance the facilities.

Being one of the students who never uses IM facilities, I seriously question the propriety of such a proposal. It's not that I wouldn't like to see students have a new IM building if they want it. However, I'm already paying $4 in taxes for many "services" that I don't even want. What is more reprehensible is that the extra money levied wouldn't even be in the form of a visible tax, but would be added to tuition. This proposed method of funding makes one wonder what he is paying for in his present tuition payments.

Thus, I would think it more fair for those who want IM facilities and will use them to pay for them through a service charge. I realize that an amendment calling for such a service charge was defeated by the board at the urging of the administrator. That leads me to wonder if ASMSU is nothing more than a rubber stamp for the administration. If so, ASMSU is not representative of any student concerns whatsoever, for no board can serve two masters.

Famine view explanation

To the Editor:

In reference to Bruce Tuttle's letter of May 28, I agree that "national elites" should take primary responsibility for the wide disparity prevailing in "less-developed" countries in the area of resource distribution.

I told the State News reporter who interviewed me that it was not enough for the elite to be pathogenic to the famine catastrophe, but this part of my comments was left out of the story.

Nonetheless, an equally irrefutable fact is that Western imperialism continues its strategic support to strengthen the status quo of the ruling elite. This weakens the position of millions of victims of a bourgeois exploitation in their challenging task of overthrowing regimes of "supper-masters."

Critical SDS can do more

To the Editor:

I think that the very reason the SDS attacked racism and sexism in the natural science book by Robert Ardrey was pointed out in the May 21 issue of the State News. The article said that the SDS was very active in the antiwar movement during the Vietnam era and has been relatively inactive in recent years. It needed something to pick on and came up with sections in "The Social Contract."

Media tax curtails SN monopoly

By GEORGE WHITE

During spring term registration, MSU students were asked to add new taxes to their already rising cost of education. Most of these proposals were rejected, but curiously enough, one passed.

The students supported a proposed student media appropriations board. This board will, in turn support student publishing efforts and thus insure a free and competitive press.

The fight for such a tax was carried out by Project Grapevine, mother organization to the Grapevine Journal. Before the emergence of the Grapevine Journal as a serious alternative newspaper, there was little challenge to the Michigan State News.

The State News held a de facto monopoly on the press. This monopoly is enforced by the University, which acts as a collection agency for the SN in taxing students more than $100,000 annually.

This tax was collected to the exclusion of other student newspapers. The Grapevine Journal protested this situation. The tax directly contradicted the University's stated intentions "... to encourage the competition of ideas."

The tax helps support the paid professionals of the State News staff and gives the paper an unfair advantage over student newspapers.

The Grapevine Journal called the tax "discriminatory" and threatened legal action if the University did not equalize the situation by abolishing the tax or by giving student newspapers equal access. The struggle reached a climax in May 1973, when the Journal took the issue directly to the board of trustees.

The trustees expressed support for the Journal and established two committees: one to study the financial problems of the Journal and another to study the plight of all alternative publications.

The committee met throughout the summer and fall. Despite the Journal's input to the committees, a resolution was not reached until after the Journal had shut down its operations in mid-fall.

A proposal that would aid alternative publications was finally placed on the spring registration ballot, and ASMSU and Project Grapevine held their organizational breaths.

But there should have been little apprehension and surprise when the results were confirmed and the vote declared affirmative.

A brief survey indicates that students had various reasons for approving the tax:

Some students were very "conscious" of the monopoly on the press and were zealous supporters of the principle of a free and competitive press.

Some students were zealous supporters of the Grapevine Journal. These supporters included "plain old readers" who wanted to keep reading the paper.

On the other hand, the proposal was also supported by those who were "dissatisfied" with the State News and its coverage. The list of the dissatisfied was made up of many groups of people, including women, students majoring in communication areas, black and white fraternities and political organizations.

Blacks were in the forefront of this effort. Traditionally, blacks have never gained equal access to the media and have been historically slighted in coverage.

Over the past decade we have witnessed a grudging change in this situation, but much remains to be done. Project Grapevine was originally established to stimulate black interest in communications. The Grapevine Journal was one of the earliest efforts to involve and train blacks in the newspaper medium. It was also the most successful. The Journal grew to be the largest black student newspaper in the nation and won national collegiate press awards.

Blacks rallied to the proposal's call.

There was also the general mass of students who sympathized with the underdog efforts of the Journal and other publications. Many of these students were not aware of the "invisible tax" taken each term by the State News, but they were aware of the few existing alternative publications, and they wanted to see more.

The implications of the tax are all positive. The tax will guarantee the community more than one newspaper and thus more news coverage. The tax will insure that the academic community gets more than one perspective — a real "competition of ideas." Competition will, in turn, spur the zeal of the students involved and improve the publications.

The possible return of the Grapevine Journal will restart the process of training students, including minorities, for the professional media.

Finally, the passage of the tax has encouraged Project Grapevine to establish an alternative student publications division which will provide organization and expertise for all students interested in publishing.

A meeting will be held concerning alternative student publications at 7 p.m. Thursday in 25 Student Services Bldg. All students are welcome to attend this meeting and are urged to offer their ideas if not their talent for new efforts.

With the money problem now handled by the Student Media Appropriations Board and the "experience problem" now being assaulted by Project Grapevine, only one problem can prevent a student from getting his writing, art or photography published — student apathy.

George White is the director of Project Grapevine.

Farm workers need student aid

By BERNARD J. OFFERMAN

Both the late Edward R. Murrow and Chet Huntley climaxed their broadcast journalism careers by trying to ignite moral outrage about the inhuman conditions suffered by migrant workers. The Economic Opportunity Act, marking its 10th anniversary this year, laid great stress on dealing with the causes and effects of poverty in rural America. Yet, the fact remains that the migrant, the farm worker and the small farmer still experience varying degrees of human deprivation in the midst of a continuing market and product abundance.

While the government and the growers concern themselves with subsidies for selected farm products, almost 25 per cent of rural residents continue to live in poverty. This figure represents nearly 14 million rural Americans. Farm wages continue at a level of about one-half those of workers in manufacturing — even though farm productivity has risen faster than productivity in the nonfarm sector since World War II.

Within these rural realities, migrant farm workers face the most difficult social and economic problems. Here, in Michigan, approximately 20,000 migrants will harvest our fruits and vegetables in the course of the next five months.

Traveling through stable and often rich communities, these migrants are welcomed as economic inputs but are usually treated as social aliens. Worst of all, these workers are invisible to most of us, enduring substandard housing, health and working conditions on the fringes of our society.

Though migrants have never been successfully organized, Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers in California offer an example of what can be achieved by an aroused public coupled with farm worker participation. In addition to union security and health benefits, the UFW has established a clinic serving 80 farm workers a day and a credit union. These facilities have been financed by the workers themselves and their public supporters.

More important than a mere awareness of these facts and a sympathy for the farm worker cause would be faculty and student involvement this summer in helping either migrants in Michigan or the farm workers in California. If unable to help full time for a period, the Lansing Area Boycott Committee needs picketing help on Saturdays through the summer in its boycott of table grapes, iceberg lettuce and Gallo wines (all wines shipped from Modesto, Calif.).

For students remaining in Michigan for the summer, it would be valuable to visit migrant camp at the very least. It would give a perspective and a human concern that is hard to come by when one is remote from the farm worker environment.

For persons interested in helping migrants and farm workers directly this summer, please write to the following: Archie Brun, Michigan Farm Worker Ministry, Lansing, 48901; Ramon Romero, PO Box 62, Keene, Calif.; Lansing Boycott Committee, 719 E. U.S. must grant amnesty

To the Editor:

Memorial Day is a national, proclaimed holiday established in order to honor and remember the American GIs and all Americans who have passed away. But what about the Americans who are still alive without a homeland to return to?

Yes, the "Americans" who we have branded as traitors and deserters during the Vietnam crisis. Can Americans forgive these men and grant them amnesty for their so-called crimes during a crisis that was intended to unify this nation, but instead has divided it?

Many of these men probably were cowards and afraid to die. But for those who believed in a higher ideal and did not believe in the American cause in Vietnam, it took courage to abandon their families, friends, possessions and security and to inflict self-exile upon themselves. But have these men committed any worse crimes than our so-called political leaders?

Truly, the American GI who died in Vietnam did not die in vain, but died for an ideal that he believed in. These men should be honored and remembered for their courage and their sacrifice. But, presently, it is a time to forgive, to forget, to learn, to love and to rebuild our ailing nation if it is to persevere!

Allergic nonsmoker asks puffers to 'clear the air'

By HERB TYSON

William Safire's column, "Antismoking laws tyrannical," in the State News' May 20 issue, is ridiculous. His estimation of potential no-smoking laws is warped at best. If he is at all aware of the discomfort nonsmokers (especially those who are extremely allergic, like myself) must go through, then his comments are malicious and stupid. If he is not aware, then he is simply ignorant and needs to be educated.

In common law, when one is harmed by another (as I am by smoke, as it causes bleeding, itching and burning eyes and nostrils), it is up to the damaging party to abstain or refrain and to pay for damages. I could sue in most states, even without additional laws. But why should I? Why should I have to wait until I become "green gilled"? Isn't the fact that I will become sick enough? Would a person with measles or smallpox, or one who likes to carry poisonous plants be allowed to exhibit them in public in such a way as to expose those who are susceptible? No — then why the double standard?

Should all who are susceptible be forced to stay at home in oxygen tents? By common law they should not. But this is exactly the alternative Safire seems to suggest, especially if his argument is examined in terms of probabilities that smokers will be considerate.

When I pay for a meal in a restaurant, buy theater tickets or enter a public museum, I believe I deserve the right to eat my meal without getting sick (or, in the case of MSU food, to at least know what is being served so I can decide whether or not I should eat it), to watch the show without having blurred vision and swollen eyes and to look at museum artifacts without having to witness shoe being used for an ashtray.

If smokers in general were considerate, would not have to worry about support laws which protect my right to go to health. However, more often than not, smokers are defensive and ignorant of the pain they inflict. I have been cursed, spat at and leered at — simply because I had informed someone who was thoughtful to ask that I am allergic that I do mind if they smoke. I have been downgraded by professors who have asked to restrict smoking classrooms for a very valid health reason.

Once the idiotic, there will be need for antismoking legislation — or legislation, for that matter.

But for now, how can one be stupid enough to expect the smokers to be considerate of those who are "just uncomfortable" when they don't even respond to wishes of those who are done real immediate harm by tobacco smoke? The unlikely day that people become considerate enough, I will support legislation to prohibit smoking in public places (including the outdoor since these asses insist on depositing butts all over the ground rather than the cigarette receptacles).

Canadian writer gives U.S. impressions

By MIKE FOX
State News Staff Writer

American men have their wives do the reading for them.

This observation was among the remarks of a distinguished Canadian novelist who visited MSU Wednesday to address over 110 students in a Canadian literature class.

Generally not critical of the United States, Mordecai Richler said he saw very little difference between Americans and Canadians. He identified himself, however, with the Canadian nationalists who are critical of the U.S. domination of the Canadian economy.

Richler described his impressions of the United States:

"When I visit the United States, I run into men who say they are very busy so they haven't read my book," he said. "But these busy men say that their wives have read my book."

Richler's response was greeted with laughter in a question and answer session that lasted 45 minutes.

In a related area, Richler said he was disappointed that American and Canadian television was so poor in contrast to England where "you get very good drama on TV."

"In England, there is no snobbery about writing for television. It's rather like writing a short story and you are assured of a good director, talented actors, intelligent critics and complete freedom."

Richler last year wrote a play using controversial language for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. (a form of public television) which was at first rejected, creating considerable controversy, and then telecast with little reaction.

In the Canadian literary spectrum, Richler holds a position somewhat similar to Phillip Roth in the United States. A film version of the fourth of his seven books, "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz," is now attracting popular acclaim at Canadian theaters.

"Duddy Kravitz" is a 1959 book about a Jewish youth from Montreal who attempts to prove his manhood by buying up real estate for development.

The film, which cost $900,000 to produce — relatively expensive by Canadian standards — will open in New York and California in late July. Paramount Pictures, which plans to invest $500,000 in U.S. promotion, is enthusiastic that the film will be received favorably by U.S. audiences. It will open in 24 U.S. cities in September.

"I'm a provincial novelist in the sense I write about a particular geographical place, but I write out of a tension between my Canadian and my Jewish experience," Richler said.

He added that there is no reason why Canadian fiction, like the fiction of other countries, cannot be sold and understood easily in the United States.

"I was educated in the fiction of the American South," Richler said after his appearance before the English IDC 476 class.

He identified only a nuance of difference between Americans and Canadians:

"I think we are very nice. There is a basic decency in Canada and life is not as brutalized."

Richler, 43, spent 18 years in England after leaving Canada as a youthful writer who wanted to make it big.

Having left Canada because he was "enormously bored," Richler said his return has been very satisfying.

"I wanted to get back to my roots, to my discontent," he said.

The author, who lives in Montreal, visited MSU Wednesday at the invitation of Russell B. Nye, distinguished University professor of English.

"I like going places where I have never been," Richler said.

IRS probe corrects 'enemy' tax payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service investigation of its own treatment of White House friends and enemies resulted in tax adjustments for "a number of taxpayers" and other unspecified corrective action, according to papers filed in federal court.

The admission appears to contradict repeated public statements by the IRS that the tax agency never succumbed to White House pressure and that there was therefore nothing to correct.

The IRS official who headed the investigation and the tax agency's chief spokesman refused to discuss details of the in-house probe. But the documents filed by the government in a civil suit here indicate the IRS did find some abuses.

William C. Rankin Jr., director of the internal audit division of the IRS, said in an affidavit in the court case that Commissioner Donald C. Alexander ordered an investigation on July 2, 1973, of charges that the legally nonpartisan tax agency had been used by the White House to help political friends and harass enemies. Former White House counsel John W. Dean III had leveled the charges the previous week in testimony before the televised Senate Watergate committee hearings.

Rankin's affidavit said he was named to head the probe.

"As a result of this investigation," he said, "I have initiated reports to appropriate service officials on cases which were handled erroneously or not in accordance with established procedures. I have reported systems and procedural deficiencies to appropriate service officials so that they could take the necessary corrective action."

A related document submitted in the case by Donald J. Gavin, the Justice Dept. attorney representing the IRS in the suit, said the Rankin investigation "resulted in tax liability adjustments in the case of a number of taxpayers."

Compromise effort fails, campaign fund bill stalled

Gov. Milliken and Senate Democratic leaders failed Wednesday in their attempt to work out a compromise that would allow enactment of a campaign finance reform bill in time for this year's elections.

Following a 25-minute meeting with Senate Democratic leader George Fitzgerald and floor leader Jerome T. Hart, Milliken said the only agreement reached was that both Republicans and Democrats want a campaign reform bill passed this year.

Last Monday, the House defeated a Republican move to reconsider the vote by which the legislation was originally approved, also defeating a Democratic motion to give the bill immediate effect in the process.

The two sides said they would continue their attempts at reaching a compromise at a later date.

The House passed measure, which is ready for a final vote in the Senate, has been bogged down in partisan infighting for six months. Milliken has indicated he would veto it in its present form.

Hart said he doubted a final vote would be taken today.

Sales show big car comeback

By JOE KIRBY
State News Staff Writer

It was only a few short months ago that most conversations were filled with talk of rising gas prices and miles per gallon.

Everyone was rushing out to buy a small foreign economy car and the American automakers were moving to meet the challenge.

Those were the days when you could not give away a big car and a used small car was worth almost as much as when it was new.

But the American love affair with the small economy car may be fading as the indication from local used car dealers is that people are returning to their old habits and the big car is making a comeback.

Dale Mathias, manager of B.J.'s Auto Sales, 2621 N. Grand River Ave., Lansing, said that business is fair and that people are once again thinking big.

"People in this country are used to comfort and convenience," he said.

Mathias said B.J.'s carries a variety of cars and that students still buy primarily small cars.

Thomas Thelen, used car manager for Williams Volkswagen Inc., 2845 E.

Saginaw St., said they are selling a little bit of everything — big and small, foreign and American.

"People are getting back to what they want, they're not going according to whims or scares," Thelen said.

Thelen said that a few months ago the demand for small cars was really high and prices were consequently higher, but now they have returned to normal. He added that overall prices are still up compared to last year.

Gar Culliton, salesman at Story Oldsmobile used car lot, 3165 E. Michigan Ave., Lansing, said that business is good and sales in general are up but small cars are fading in popularity.

"We couldn't get any when we needed them and now we've got them and we can't sell them," Culliton said.

Culliton said the fact that the gas scare is over probably has a lot to do with the decline in small car sales.

Bob Emmer, used car manager for Jack Dykstra Ford, 3500 S. Logan St., Lansing, said that sales are real good and that big cars are up in value.

"The big cars are coming back stronger than before," Emmer said.

Emmer said that new car sales are down and that used cars are harder to get which might account for the higher value of big cars.

Peter Taylor, salesman at Ray's Used Cars, 2009 S. Cedar St., Lansing, said people are going back to big cars because after driving small cars they "get a bellyfull" and want something bigger.

Taylor also said that sales are going slowly right now but could not cite a reason for the slowdown.

Larry Aylor, manager of Wheels Toyota used cars, 2601 E. Michigan Ave., Lansing, said that business was slow but is beginning to pick up.

An indication that sales are slow is evidenced by the fact that Wheels Toyota is currently offering a free 10 - speed bicycle with each purchase of a car for over $1,000.

Aylor said that small cars still seem to be selling well. He added that a lot of their business comes from campus.

So for the time being, it appears that the big car still has a safe place in the American automotive picture, at least until the oil begins to run out.

Early recess will cause lost class reservations

If you are planning to get an early start on your break between spring and summer terms by skipping early registration, take note. You might blow your chance of getting into the course section(s) you reserved during early enrollment.

The registrar's office reports that students who do not register early will lose their class reservations and will have to register at regular registration June 17 and 18. There, students will have to obtain class cards for each course section. Early registration will be held during final exam week Monday through June 7.

The course sections students requested on their Registration Section Request form will only be reserved for them through early registration.

Students planning to attend summer and fall terms who have not updated their academic progress plans should see their academic advisers, the registrar's office says.

In July, the fall term Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook with a blank Registration Section Request form enclosed will be mailed to students enrolled spring term who plan to return in the fall. The registrar's office urges students who will not be at the addresses listed on their home address cards to arrange to have the schedule book forwarded to them as soon as possible.

Urea found not effective in helping anemia victims

NEW YORK — Two medical research teams that have investigated the effectiveness of the chemical urea in treating patients with sickle cell anemia, have concluded that that regimen does not work.

The reports add urea to a long list of theoretical treatments that do not work in the treatment of sickle cell anemia, a disorder of the red blood cells.

THEATER CLASS, HEALTH CENTER PARTICIPATE

Mock disaster tests emergency services

Doctor and nurse work over Jamie Pelino in the University Health Center when she was brought in as one of the casualties in a Dept. of Public Safety test to determine the ability of the facility to handle large numbers of injuries.

By LARRY MORGAN
State News Staff Writer

A mock disaster at the University Auditorium Wednesday afternoon offered a chance for a theater class and the University Health Center to practice what they have learned.

Fourteen students were "injured" in the practice disaster which was meant to test the reaction of the health center to such an emergency and find any weak spots in the emergency service.

Jeanette Milam, director of nursing who was in charge, was pleased with the actions of the staff and their handling of the situation.

"We were well prepared and the staff handled the disaster very well," she said.

One of the patients involved, Barbara Price, senior, 333 Charles St., was eight months pregnant and was in labor when she was brought to the health center.

She said the nurses were nice enough, but they did not have the proper facilities nor did they write things down concerning the status of the patients.

"It was unrealistic," she said. "They didn't take it very seriously, but that could have been because they knew it wasn't real."

Milam said they received the disaster call at 1:25 p.m. informing them that a bleacher had caved in at the Auditorium and to expect 14 or 15 victims.

Seven of the victims were stretcher cases, and two others were dead on arrival at the health center.

A nurse and physician were then dispatched to the scene to determine the extent of injuries and decide which patients should be taken to the health center first.

An advanced make-up class, Theater 433, provided the victims and makeup for the disaster.

Milam said there were problems in the mockup that she would like to see corrected the next time.

"We had some communication problems between the disaster site and the health center. I'd like to have some walkie talkies the next time we have one of these," Milam said.

She also said they had some problems labeling the patients and their injuries and that next time they should set up the disaster with Sparrow Hospital for those victims who require intensive care.

She said the health center is not equipped to handle intensive care patients.

Milam said the health center stages a mock disaster twice a year. There was a surgeon and an anesthesiologist available in case they were needed, she added.

The entire mockup lasted 15 minutes.

She said the two eventual DOAs were patients who had needed intensive care and would have been sent to Sparrow Hospital.

Price said the doctors seemed to know what they were doing but that the nurses were not familiar with where things were kept in the center.

Another victim, Ruth Kramer, freshman, 170 W. Wilson Hall, said once she was out of the emergency room the staff was very nice to her, but while in emergency she was given the wrong treatment.

Kramer said she had an asthma attack during the disaster and was given three shots of adrenalin.

She added that though many of the staff members took it seriously, one was more concerned with the victims' make-up than the disaster.

Patricia York, junior, 333 Mason Hall, said the disaster was handled very well.

She was one victim who should have gone to intensive care but did not because Sparrow was not participating.

She also thought the staff was not very serious since they knew it was not a true disaster and it gave them a chance to clown around with the students.

Audience dwindles to 4 — actor stages final scene

DETROIT (UPI) — A man who fused his life with the nourishment of audience approval on the burlesque circuit for 40 years was buried Tuesday in Detroit with only four mourners present to give him the final curtain call.

William Hayes, who gave up the theater 15 years ago for a tiny hotel room in downtown Detroit, died on May 16. He was 81 years old.

Years ago, when movies and television were only a dream,

Hayes played all the top burlesque houses around the country.

He even played in the silent movies for several years, but only in small parts.

Hayes was never a superstar, but he always worked, even after he retired to the hotel room in Detroit.

"He knew all the songs on the television and he'd sing along with them," recalled Lester Moyer, a retired General Motors worker who shared a room with Hayes for several years.

He was married three or six times, said a friend, and was in love 1,000 times.

He loved baseball, and bought six loaves of bread a week to feed the pigeons.

His last four friends got together Tuesday and sent a bouquet of flowers to the funeral home with a note attached that said simply, "Dear Friend."

Watch says tick-tock, it's impeach with honor time

SOUTHFIELD — For all those who thrilled to the Mickey Mouse and Spiro Agnew watches, a new campy timepiece is set to hit the market — the Impeachment Time watch.

The brainchild of a conservative Southfield businessman termed "a very straight guy" by his friends, the brightly colored watch features a caricature of President Nixon with his hands raised in the familiar two-finger salute. Surrounding the cartoon is the word "Impeach" and beneath it, "With Honor."

Creator Marty Mattler, who heads a small medical supply firm, says he figured people were fed up with Nixon's antics and could use the watch to show their feelings about impeachment.

"Marty recalled that Nixon was always talking about peace with honor," said Lois Winsen, Mattler's publicist, "so he decided it was time to talk about impeachment with honor."

Initial production of the watch is scheduled in "the thousands," said Winsen, and it will sell for $19.95 through mail order only, beginning Thursday.

Plans to advertise the watch on television were stymied when broadcasters feared the possibility of getting their licenses revoked, so Mattler decided to go through the mail.

Mattler says he will present Ethel Kennedy with one of the watches and would send one to Vice President Gerald Ford "if he'll wear it."

But as for plans to gift President Nixon with a watch, Winsen said she doubted he would appreciate the gesture.

Rose Kennedy encourages her children to pray

Though she encouraged her children to exhibit their love for the Roman Catholic church by lighting candles and bringing flowers to the altar, Mrs. Rose Kennedy said, she notices that her grandchildren want to do more for society than "just bring flowers to the church."

She said in a television interview in Boston that her grandchildren think they can do more for people by working with the Eskimos in Alaska, the Indians and in the ghettos. "Their interest in their work has my approval," she said.

LEGISLATION AIMED AT PREVENTING large corporations from buying farmland was introduced in the Michigan Senate Wednesday by John C. Hartel, D-Detroit.

Hartel said the proposal — which would also require corporations already owning farmland to sell it by 1985 — would guard against the possibility of corporate control of agriculture.

A PROPOSAL THAT WOULD BAR members of the state House or Senate Judiciary Committees from practicing law is being readied for introduction by state Rep. Kirby Holmes, R-Utica.

Holmes said "there is an obvious conflict of interest involved" and cited the powers of the committees — such as controlling the salaries of judges — as a rationale for his proposal.

AN EXPECTED CONFRONTATION between Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley and State Police Director John R. Plants was avoided Tuesday when both men agreed to work for partial consolidation of their organized crime squads.

Plants had complained that Kelley's 10-man unit, funded by the federal government, conflicted with the work of his 28-man team by duplicating investigations.

THE ARRAIGNMENT ON DRUNK DRIVING CHARGES of State Sen. John E. McCauley, D-Grosse Ile, was scheduled for Wednesday in Livingston County District Court.

McCauley spent 90 minutes in jail last Thursday following his arrest by Michigan State Police.

The Detroit area legislator said the charges that he was weaving from lane to lane were the result of his fear that he was being followed.

Nixon's economic report shows austerity

By EDWARD COWAN
New York Times

WASHINGTON — The message between the lines of President Nixon's interim economic report to Congress Tuesday was that the government has no quick or painless cure for inflation and that the public had better brace itself for a rough period of persistent inflation and a determined squeeze on nondefense spending.

Strangely for an election year, the emphasis was on what Herbert Stein, Federal Reserve Board, and by William E. Simon, the secretary of the treasury.

In contrast, the budget director, Roy L. Ash, emphasized to reporters Tuesday the unlikelihood that as much as $5 billion could be trimmed from the $305 billion planned to be spent in the fiscal year that starts July 1.

Ash seemed to entertain more sympathetically, however, the idea of balancing the budget in fiscal year 1976, a feat that he said would require congressional scaling down of spending programs now on the books.

Nixon's willingness to emphasize restraining the economy even as his advisers forecast that unemployment would rise was viewed approvingly by some of his associates as a triumph of conservative economics over politics. Whether it would sit well with Republican members of Congress running for re-election was another matter.

Nixon's emphasis on government spending and budget deficits as the principal causes of inflation, and the desirability of squeezing hard on both, was also a reiteration of his deeply held dislike for federal programs and bureaucracy.

Some people in Washington view such exercises in conservatism as White House courting of the conservative Senate votes the President would need to be acquitted in an impeachment trial. Others say that the deeply orthodox tone of the President's latest economic statement is Nixonian and that no ulterior motive need be supposed to explain it.

Two aspects of Tuesday's message were regarded in some quarters as troublesome. To some casual readers of economic news, there was a conflict between Nixon's reaffirmation of tight fiscal and credit policy and his declaration Saturday that "the worst is behind us."

The reconciliation of these two statements, if one is required, lies in the fact that even with a slower rate of inflation as the year unfolds, the White House still expects the consumer price index to be rising at a rate "in the neighborhood of 7 per cent" in the fourth quarter.

The other troubling aspect of the message was that it gave only passing mention to the more selective tools for dealing with inflation, such as avoiding restrictions on agricultural acreage and imports or raising support prices.

Cattlemen have been pressing for restoration of red meat import quotas that were dropped two years ago. Dairy men have been pressing for the creation of a floor under the price of fluid milk for drinking (as distinguished from milk for making cheese and butter). Wheat farmers have been complaining about declines from last year's astronomical prices. The Agriculture Dept. must make decisions in the next few months about wheat and feed-grains acreage.

Nor did Nixon say anything about what the government might do to nudge labor and business away from inflationary settlements though the President was plain enough in his implied disapproval of catch-up wage increases.

Portugal's head warns of anarchy

FROM WIRE SERVICES

LISBON, Portugal — President Antonio de Spínola warned Wednesday that "counterrevolutionary forces" were trying to ruin the new Portuguese government with a campaign of labor unrest leading to anarchy.

"It is time for every Portuguese to conclude by himself that any form of anarchy ends fatally and opens the door to new dictatorships, to regimes like the one overthrown April 25," Spínola said in a speech during a brief visit to the northern industrial city of Oporto.

Aiming his warning mainly at extreme leftists who have fomented an epidemic of wildcat strikes in the first days of the new government, Spínola said the armed forces that overthrew the old rightist regime would reply to violence with force "without hesitation."

The 64-year-old general, who took over the presidency four weeks ago, said counterrevolutionaries were active in several parts of the nation.

Sources close to the government said he was not referring to any particular area and not to the possibility of a counter coup by ultrarightists.

The warning brought no immediate reaction on the labor front. A bread and bus strike continued in Lisbon.

The Communist party, meanwhile, issued a statement warning against indiscriminate use of strikes as an economic weapon. It followed an appeal of several days ago by the party leader, Alvaro Cunhal, a minister without portfolio in the new center-left government, asking workers to be "less impatient."

The parallel warnings by the chief of state and the Communist party, generally considered Portugal's best organized political force right now, against the threat of socio-economic chaos came today as the current strike wave seemed to be cresting.

Lisbon was without streetcars and buses for the third consecutive day and without bread for the second day. The bakers' strike, which began Tuesday and is causing particular hardship to poor people, Wednesday spread to other cities and towns in southern Portugal.

The bakery workers are demanding higher pay — they earn only $3 a night — and their employers say they are willing to grant substantial increases if the government allows them to raise the price of bread.

The government and members of the military junta, which supervises the activities of the civilian department chiefs, have during the last few days been in session almost continually to grapple with the labor conflicts.

The Company will present "Fiddler on the Roof," one of America's favorite musicals, at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday in McDonel Hall kiva. The story of a Russian dairyman and his five daughters is directed by Theresa Fox and Mark Kidzus.

Brilliant 'Fiddler' show by Company set for MSU

By DARRYL GRANT
State News Reviewer

The Company will present its last two performances of one of America's best-loved musicals, "Fiddler on the Roof," Friday and Saturday at MSU.

The Company gives "Fiddler" a sensitive treatment that is exuberant and evocative. The singing is animated; the singers' voices are dynamic and wide ranging, and the dancing is spirited and well choreographed.

One of the reasons that the play has been such a huge success, first as a Broadway play, then as a motion picture, is its strong, realistic storyline. A problem with musicals is that their stories are often too far removed from real life and they often become unsatisfying morsels of entertainment that are quickly seen and easily forgotten. "Fiddler's" warm attraction is a little more engaging than that of a fluffy young starlet who has tap-danced her way to stardom.

The setting of the story is the tiny village of Anatevka, Russia, and is centered on dairyman Tevye and his five daughters. The time is 1905, a turbulent and changing period in Russia filled with new ideas about life, love and the entire social order.

Exemplifying these new directions of thought are Tevye's daughters, who rebel against the old order by marrying whom they please without the consent of their father or the aid of the village matchmaker.

Directors Theresa Fox and Mark Kidzus have assembled a large cast for the productions at MSU which could have been awkward but which proves to be smooth with the aid of some tight and well-controlled blocking. "Fiddler" is also blessed with an ingenious and unobtrusive set which helped the production flow.

Stan Gill plays Tevye. He is a talented actor but lacks depth. Tevye's character is full of vitality, great affection and deep conviction. Unfortunately, Gill's performance lacks emphasis on these qualities and his performance becomes merely competent. As a result the role loses its impact.

Carol Rosenblum gives a humorous and touching portrayal as Tevye's wife Golda and Susan Rosenthal is delightfully comical as the matchmaker, Yente. Rosenthal's only problem is that she has too much of a Jewish accent at times.

David Szabla gives a sensitive and moving portrayal as Fyedka. The daughters are admirably played by Susan Berg, Linda Mackler, Susanne Weissler, Jamie Blissner and Wendy Katz. Lena Nowak gives an uproarious performance as Frumha - Sarah, the butcher's first wife.

The members of the Company are fine performers, and they put their talents together to produce this shining presentation of musical theater.

Curtain time for "Fiddler on the Roof" is 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the McDonel Hall kiva. Admission is $1.25.

Mariah fund drive nets $1,000; 2 concerts slated

Thanks to a successful fundraising drive, Mariah, the sponsor of many folk concerts on campus during the last year, has survived its financial crisis.

Over $1,000 was raised in the drive, and the money will enable the group to sponsor two concerts in the fall, Debbie Mazur of Mariah explained. The artists to appear in the concerts will be decided during the summer.

"Around $500 of the donations were from dorm councils," Mazur said. "We would particularly like to thank Yakely, Wilson, Holmes, Van Hoosen, Hubbard, Holden, McDonel, Rather and Emmons Halls for their contributions."

Mazur also expressed appreciation to all the people who donated on the streets and who gave their time to the drive.

Applications for next year's Mariah staff are available in the Mariah office on the second floor of the Union.

"Next year we will continue to work with Pop Entertainment and will move our office over to the Student Services Building with them," Mazur said.

String ensemble to give concert

The East Lansing String Ensemble will give its first concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Hannah Middle School Auditorium, located at the intersection of Abbott Road and Burcham Drive.

The string ensemble is a group of about 30 amateur string players who are in the ensemble because they enjoy playing music.

The group is sponsored by the Older People's Program, the School - City Activity Program and the Michigan Council for the Arts.

The ensemble will be under the direction of Glen Halik, a retired professor of engineering at MSU who now devotes all his time to music.

Swelling the ranks of the group will be members of a similar group from Owosso. The program will include works by Bach and Arensky and a sing-along with folk songs and selections from the Broadway musical, "Fiddler on the Roof."

The singing will be led by Paul Bravender, choral director for the University United Methodist Church on Harrison Road.

"Those who wish to sing along may want to sit near the front," Halik said, adding that words and music will be provided.

This concert is free of charge.

Three injured in U.S. center Beirut blast

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An explosion ripped the first floor of the U.S. cultural center in Beirut Tuesday, police reported. Three persons suffered minor injuries.

Witnesses said the blast shattered bookstands, windows, tables and chairs of the John F. Kennedy Library in the three-story building off Beirut's fashionable Hamra Street.

The 10-week summer term for the East Lansing String Ensemble will begin June 17, with rehearsals taking place at Hannah Middle School at 7:30 p.m. Mondays.

Anyone who can play a stringed instrument is invited to join, Halik said, including Lansing and MSU symphony members.

Bluegrass band on stage tonight at Frank 'n Stein

One of the country's best traditional bluegrass bands, Larry Sparks and the Lonesome Ramblers, will appear at Frank 'n Stein tonight.

Sparks, a guitarist who sings most of the vocals, will be accompanied by the Ramblers on mandolin, fiddle, bass and banjo.

The group will share the stage with the Bluegrass Extension Service, alternating sets.

"The last time Sparks and the Lonesome Ramblers were here, it was sold out," said Farley McClure of the Bluegrass Extension Service.

Frank 'n Stein is located at 220 S. Howard Ave. Admission will be $1.25.

DEEP THROAT

ADULTS ONLY IN COLOR

DEEP THROAT is shattering records across America. It has become the most widely seen adult film in cinema history. Words are simply inadequate to convey the incredible eroticism of the film. DEEP THROAT is astoundingly explicit - it goes beyond anything previously made. DEEP THROAT is rapidly becoming the standard to which all other adult films will be compared. DEEP THROAT cannot be described - it must be experienced. Anything you have seen before is merely preparation for the experience of DEEP THROAT.

DEEP THROAT is still banned in New York. It's the film that was found obscene in Detroit and was responsible for the padlocking of five theaters. Deep Throat has been busted and subsequently acquitted more than any other film in history. The Beal Film Group is showing Deep Throat, uncut, not one frame has been deleted.

We present DEEP THROAT only to those persons over 18 years of age who enjoy extremely explicit erotic entertainment. We have no wish to offend or shock. If you do not enjoy viewing incredibly graphic sexual behavior, we at Beal strongly recommend that you stay away. In DEEP THROAT we have the ultimate in erotic entertainment, if you wish to experience it, we cordially invite you to attend - if you have any doubts about your probable reaction to this film, we strongly encourage you to enjoy another program. DEEP THROAT is strictly for those who can take it. All persons desiring admission to this picture must have proof of age.

Film theater: unique adaptation of plays

By EDD RUDZATS
State News Reviewer

A little over a week ago, the American Film Theater concluded its 1973-74 season in this area with a presentation of British playwright Simon Gray's work "Butley," with Alan Bates in the title role. This film was a fitting way to conclude a unique theatrical film venture founded by a single man in association with the American Express Co. The concept behind the American Film Theater comes from Ely Landau and is quite simple as Landau conceived it. His idea was to offer a series of films nationwide, on a subscription basis, to be made from critically acclaimed plays, performed by major actors and directed by distinguished directors.

Landau has given two reasons for this particular method of distribution. As an independent producer of such films as "Long Day's Journey into Night" with Katherine Hepburn and Jason Robards and "The Pawnbroker" with Rod Steiger, Landau discovered that it was difficult to market thought-provoking films through the American film establishment.

Furthermore, he felt that fewer and fewer plays which received critical recognition were getting public exposure since most of them originated in New York and never left the city. Thus the idea of the American Film Theater came into its own.

Lining up theaters to present their films, the Landau organization found the support it needed. More than 500 theaters asked to join the program of presentations which were shown on two consecutive days per month for a total of four performances — two matinees and two evening screenings. Then, with the help of the American Express Co. to market the subscription program, the entire project was underway.

It turned out to be quite an ambitious project. Eight films over a period of nine months were offered, including the works of such playwrights as Eugene Ionesco, Harold Pinter, Edward Albee and Eugene O'Neill. The films featured such stars as Hepburn, Paul Scofield, Lee Marvin, Alan Bates, Stacy Keach and Zero Mostel under the direction of such luminaries as Tony Richardson, Pinter, John Frankenheimer and Sir Laurence Olivier.

Now, with the first year already behind it, the American Film Theater is planning its second season. Should it prove as rewarding as the first, then the series can only gain in prominence and popularity.

Yet the rewards of the American Film Theater seem more esthetic than financial, at least at this early date. Critically, the entire program can only be considered a success, but the knowledge of whether it came out in the black is not known yet.

As for the past, one need only look back to such superb adaptations to the screen as Albee's "A Delicate Balance," Gray's "Butley," Pinter's "The Homecoming" and O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh" to realize that Landau's idea worked brilliantly.

Even such ghastly failures as Kurt Weill and Maxwell Anderson's "Lost in the Stars" and Chekov's "The Three Sisters" tackled problems that had more substance than most current films.

The performances alone would have made the American Film Theater worth attending, even if the material had been of a less stimulating nature. The opportunity to see Hepburn and Scofield together is rare indeed, but there was also the chance to see Robert Ryan's brilliant last performance as the cynic in "The Iceman Cometh."

Other highlights included Bates recreating his award-winning portrayal of the sardonic English professor Butley, Keach tackling John Osborne's riveting characterization of Martin Luther, Mostel transforming himself into one of the rhinos in Ionesco's "Rhinoceros" and countless other talented actors and actresses meeting the demands of their roles and turning in exceptional supporting performances.

The American Film Theater did have its drawbacks, however. Its title is an apt description of the end result of the presentations. Filmed theater is exactly what the audiences saw, for few attempts were made to open up the original plays. Though the flavor of the pieces thus remained intact, at times the drama would become visually static due to an excess of lingering closeups and the claustrophobia of one-room sets.

The one real attempt to open up one of the productions, "Lost in the Stars," emerged as a dismal failure due to director Daniel Mann's inexperience and poor cinematic sense.

The finest productions in the series were "Butley," with Bates and Jessica Tandy, and "The Homecoming," with Paul Rodgers and Vivian Merchant. Each director, in his own way, made these hard-hitting dramas come to life with devastating effect.

Coming close on the heels of these two British works were the film versions of Albee's "A Delicate Balance" with Hepburn and Scofield and "The Iceman Cometh" with Marvin, Ryan and Jeff Bridges.

In summary, the American Film Theater provided some of the finest dramatic moments on the screen this past year. With a high degree of quality film making, the series proved to be an infinitely rewarding theatrical film experience for those who attended.

For those who did not, the Landau organization is already planning its next season and, if its first year is any indication, the American Film Theater for 1974-75 will undoubtedly be worth attending.

MSU golfer Brad Hyland will be representing the Spartan men's golf team at the NCAA tournament next month in San Diego. Four members of the Spartan women's golf team will also be in San Diego to compete in the women's national championships.

Five golfers will compete at nationals

By PAM WARD and
STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writers

Five MSU golfers, four women and one man, will be representing MSU's golf teams at the NCAA championship tournaments next month in San Diego, Calif.

The Spartan women's team will be sending Manono Beamer, Dee Wait, Carol Peterson and June Oldman. Brad Hyland will be representing the men's squad.

MSU's men team is coached by Bruce Fossum and the women's team by his wife Mary.

The four-day, 72-hole women's tournament will take place June 17 through 22 at the Singing Hills Golf Course and will witness 130 entrants competing for national honors.

"There will be about 25 to 30 teams competing and it should be very competitive," Mrs. Fossum said.

"It's hard to say what the other teams will do. I haven't seen them play competitively so I'm only guessing as to their ability. I suspect that the host San Diego team will be strong and also Arizona State."

The Spartans, who received their bid to the national tournament after taking the Midwest regional title this fall, picked the team members who have the best competitive averages.

Beamer leads the team with a 85.7 average. She took the 1974 Midwest regional and was fourth in the Big Ten championship tournament.

Oldman has an 86.2 average. Wait has a 91.0 average and has shown, according to Mrs. Fossum, the most improvement.

Peterson has a 91.7 average. This year's tournament will take the scores of four team members and depth will be a major determinant in the competition.

"I know some of the schools have a few top performers but all four of the entrants might not be as strong," Mrs. Fossum explained. "We have a strong team with a lot of depth and we're banking our finish on this."

Hyland, who had the lowest average per round of all the Spartan golfers this spring, will represent the men's team at the championship tournament June 19 through 25. The Spartans will not be in team competition.

Hyland, a junior from Grosse Ile, averaged 75.8 per round, had the fourth best average in the Big Ten and finished ninth at the conference tournament two weeks ago. His best round of the regular season was a 69.

He was selected to play by the District 4 tournament committee.

"He's a hell of a player,"

Hyland's coach, Bruce Fossum, said.

Fossum said Hyland's strong point is his concentration while on the course.

"He's always with it in his mind," Fossum said.

This will be Hyland's first appearance in the national tournament and he said that he was looking forward to playing in the best collegiate tournament of the season.

"I've played against a few of the top golfers," Hyland said. "It will be interesting to see how I do. All I can do is try as hard as I can."

Dill, Cassleman representatives for MSU at NCAA track finals

MSU's only representatives in this year's NCAA track and field outdoor championships in Austin, Texas, (June 6-8) will be sprinter Marshall Dill and intermediate hurdler Bob Cassleman.

Both of the Spartan runners have excellent shots at capturing their events, with Dill entering the meet as the defending 220-yard dash champ. Cassleman finished third last year in the 440 intermediate hurdles, but is expected to be a heavy challenger for the top spot this season.

Last week at the Central Collegiate meet in Bowling Green, Ohio, Dill pulled up lame and did not compete. However, according to asst. track coach Jim Gibbard, Dill's leg is coming along fine and the sprain, which sidelined him, has just about disappeared. Cassleman won the 440-yard hurdles with a field record time of 50.6.

Dill's toughest competition in the NCAA meet is expected to come from Purdue's Larry Burton, Tennessee's Reggie Jones and San Diego State's Steve Williams. All are stellar sprinters and capable of corks off a world record at any given time.

Cassleman will have his hands full with last year's 440 hurdles champ Paul Stevens of Baylor and also Texas' Steve Primeau and Indiana's Craig Caudill.

The Spartans do not have much of a chance of capturing the team title because of the small number of men it has competing. Indiana and Southern California are given the best chance for taking the national crown.

It will be the final collegiate meet for Cassleman, who succeeded in amassing 13 Big Ten titles during his MSU career. It will also be his final chance to cash in on his goal of winning a national title, which has eluded him for four years.

South Complex's domination of the men's intramural residence hall softball tournament has ended. McDeath, a team from McDonell Hall, ripped Casino, of Case Hall, 16-11, Tuesday to win this year's residence hall title.

Larry Stark and Joe Fodell, MSU's No. 1 and No. 2 men's singles tennis players, will be journeying to Los Angeles June 17 through 22 for the NCAA championship tennis meet.

Stark posted a 7-10 final mark for the year with Fodell showing an 11-7 season record.

Stark and Fodell also formed the tennis team's No. 1 doubles team where they posted an 8-7 season mark.

Fodell is a senior and this will be his last competition. Stark is a sophomore.

championship game, but it protested the game. The protest was upheld and Casino won the replayed contest.

McDeath, coached by Greg Getchen, won all 10 of its games this year to win the title. Getchen credited "team spirit" as the key to the squad's success.

"We played together as a team," Getchen said. "We put our hits together and played sharp defense." McDeath used the slogan "practice makes perfect" to its own advantage.

"We practiced a great deal on hitting," Getchen explained. "We worked especially on keeping the ball down to get away from hitting flyballs and popups."

McDeath batted .448 as a team and had just two regulars bat less than .400.

The infield was made up of first baseman Jim Sharpe (.417), second baseman Bob Jury (.435), who also had five home runs, shortstop Getchen (.543), who led the team with six home runs, and third baseman Bill Loncar (.481).

Patrolling the outfield were Scott Gieske (.600), Steve Bruinekool (.415), Tim Clayton (.386), John Husek (.424) and Gerry Addison (.333).

Pitcher Randy Sahadjack (.490) and catcher Mark Young (.425) composed the McDeath battery.

The independent and fraternity softball championships in the men's division were to have been decided Wednesday night. The women will determine an all-University champion tonight at 7:15.

A new champion was crowned in the fraternity ranks Wednesday. Defending champ Sigma Chi which also won football and basketball this year, was upset, 3-2, by Alpha Kappa Psi Tuesday.

The loss ended Sigma Chi's hopes of becoming the first fraternity to win all three major sports in a single year.

"...we offer a better alternative!"

Variety offered in married recreation

By MIKE DRESCH
State News Sports Writer

Last fall Rich Hoehlein, a married graduate student, noticed that there was not much for married students to do in the way of recreational activities. He decided to do something about it, and the Married Housing Activities program was born.

Since that time, the program has been functioning, and functioning well.

"I'm pleased with the progress so far," Hoehlein said. "We're getting a lot of people to participate, but there is plenty of room for growth."

Hoehlein was appointed to serve as Community Activities Coordinator for the married housing areas by MSU's Dean of Students Office and the Intramural Dept. He serves on a part-time basis. He has also had much help from MSU recreation majors who help in the program for field credits. In effect, they serve as a staff.

The key to the married housing program is that it is open to all married housing residents — students, staff and faculty. The programs are offered on a low or no-cost basis to allow for the maximum participation.

"We want people in married housing to get to know each other," Hoehlein said. "We're trying to develop a sense of community."

The program covers a wide variety of interests and activities. There have been open recreation sessions for adults, leagues and tournaments in various sports, special interest enrichment classes and special events such as family bike outings and horseback riding.

Most events in the program are offered on evenings or weekends and make use of the gym, classrooms and outdoor facilities of the Spartan Village and Red Cedar Elementary Schools.

Hoehlein runs the program from an office in the Men's Intramural Building and from his home in University Village. The program also allows for input via activities request forms which are obtained at the married housing laundromats.

"The biggest problem we have is just letting people know we have the program,"

Hoehlein said.

There is a large amount of activities open in the program. Saturday there will be a spring festival with a picnic, live entertainment, games, kite flying and other outdoor activities. It will be held in Spartan Village near the day care center and is open to all married housing students.

Some of the activities are fairly traditional, such as softball or volleyball. Others are a little more exotic. These are the special interest classes and include such diverse offerings as belly dancing, international cooking and powder puff auto mechanics.

The program also tries to unite married with common interests into clubs. Currently, it is in the process of forming a party bridge club. It will meet every other Thursday in the Spartan Village Daycare Center. There has also been some interest in the formation of a jogging club.

The recreation program will continue to run through the summer with the schools being open from 1 to 4 p.m. every day and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday. These sessions are open to everybody, adults as well as children.

MSU hosts Wings, Blues in pro hockey exhibition

MSU will host an exhibition hockey game between the National Hockey League's Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis Blues on Wednesday, Sept. 25, at the new Munn Ice Arena, it was announced Wednesday by Athletic Director Burt Smith.

The exhibition will be the first main attraction at the new 8,000-seat facility.

The game will be the first between two professional teams ever staged at MSU facility. In the 1950s, the Red Wings appeared several times for exhibition games with the MSU varsity hockey squad.

A couple of ex-Spartans figure to be in action at the game. Performing for the Wings will be 1965 all-American forward Doug Roberts and playing with the Blues will be 1972 all-American goalie Jim Watt.

Ticket prices and the start of ticket sales for the Wings-Blues contest will be announced at a later date by the MSU athletic department.

MSU's varsity season does not get underway until late October.

face of angry charges and countercharges about alleged war atrocities and traditional Arab - Israeli frontier disputes.

Now that there is a disengagement agreement, Israel and her Arab neighbors must now face the political problems standing in the way of peace and eventual open borders, trade and diplomatic relations.

Israel has demanded secure, guaranteed borders, had said it will not hand back the 26,000 square miles of Arab territory occupied in the 1967 war until this is reached. In addition to Syrian land in the Golan Heights, Israel holds the west bank of Jordan, the Sinai Peninsula captured from Egypt and the Arab sector of Jerusalem.

The Arabs have been insisting on the return of all land taken by the Israelis in 1967, and a solution to the problem of the Palestinian refugees. Israel, the Arabs say, must recognize what they call the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people.

Arab governments have said that the Palestinians should be represented at the Geneva talks by Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Liberation Organization. However, the Israelis have said they will not deal with guerrilla leaders such as Arafat.

IUD suspected as cause of 36 miscarriages

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) - A

H. Robins Co. said Wednesday that 36 miscarriages, four of them fatal, have been reported in women who accidentally became pregnant while using the Dalkon Shield, an intrauterine contraceptive device marketed by the company.

The Richmond-based pharmaceutical firm said it wrote 120,000 doctors across the nation on May 16 advising them of the reports. It said that the Food and Drug Administration also had been informed.

Robins said no direct cause-and-effect relationship had been established between use of the contraceptive device and the miscarriages, or septal spontaneous abortions. It said it did not plan to discontinue sale of the device.

A "septal spontaneous abortion" is a miscarriage associated with infection of the uterus.

Robins has marketed the Dalkon Shield since 1970. It said about 2.2 million of the devices have been sold in the United States.

A company spokesman said all the women who had the septal abortions had left a Dalkon Shield in place.

GOP fails at seat plan

GRAND RAPIDS - A strategy of 5th District Republican leaders to concentrate on one candidate in the congressional August primary has failed. The effort was an attempt to regain the seat formerly held by Vice President Gerald Ford, Democrat.

The tacit agreement by several major candidates who were screened by the blue-ribbon GOP committee, was to back whomever was determined as the candidate after a survey and poll of area Republicans.

Civil Service bias cited against ex-GIs in college

The Michigan Civil Service system discriminates against veterans who pursue a four-year college degree after discharge, a state senator charged Tuesday. Sen. William Faust, D-Westland, said five "bonus" points are added to the Civil Service test scores of veterans only if they take examinations within three years after discharge. Those who go to college, therefore, lose the points.

Faust introduced a resolution in the Senate calling on the Civil Service Commission to change its rules to award preference points to vets who enter college immediately after military service.

cheating was to threaten punishment.

An experiment involving three college sociology classes tested the relative effectiveness of trust, moral appeal and the threat of punishment.

In the classroom that trusted students not to cheat and did not even mention the possibility, students took advantage of more than 30 percent of their chances to cheat.

In the classroom that appealed to the students' moral sense, the incident of cheating rose to 41 percent.

However, in the group which was threatened with punishment, cheating dropped to 12 percent.

The authors' advice to teachers was, "It is safer to be feared than loved."
