The stock market rises with IBM as leader

The stock market had a strong day today with IBM leading the way. IBM's stock rose $8.75 to $104.50 on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones Industrial Average also rose 44 points to 1,995.70.

The main reason for the market's gains was the strong performance of IBM. The company announced that it had sold $5 billion in new securities, which was the largest single offering in history. This news helped to boost investor confidence and led to a rally in the stock market.

However, not all stocks performed as well as IBM. The Nasdaq composite index declined 7.7 points to 2,374.00, and the S&P 500 declined 2.6 points to 1,314.00.

The bond market also saw a decline, with the price of the 30-year Treasury bond falling 24 basis points to 98.74.

The dollar strengthened against most major currencies. The euro fell 0.2% to $1.1220, the pound was constant at $1.4890, and the yen declined 0.5% to ¥114.21.

The oil price rose $3.50 to $67.50 per barrel.

The government's budget surplus narrowed to $424.80 billion, down from $486.80 billion in March.

The central bank's balance sheet expanded by $3.2 billion, bringing the total to $174.6 billion.

The consumer price index rose 0.3% in May, with food prices climbing 0.5% and housing costs rising 0.2%.

The jobless rate declined to 4.3% in May, indicating that the labor market is improving.

The government's budget deficit is expected to widen to $530.2 billion in fiscal year 2023.
Past energy head urges larger tax cut, opposes tariff

By SEE WHITLIN

State News Staff Writer

Further energy study John Sawhill told Tuesday that it 'should be at least twice as large as the President Ford proposal, expressed in dollars or as tax credits. Speaking at the Third Annual Public Affairs Workshop by 1975's Auditorium sponsored by James River College, Sawhill also questioned the validity of a proposal by President Ford presented as lead in the Federal Energy Administration for the tax. Sawhill's proposal was a result of several policy differences with President Ford.

Sawhill's economic proposals are a step in the right direction, Sawhill said, but to expect Congress to enact them is unrealistic. Sawhill also urged legislation on the energy crisis in the form of a tax cut to allow for energy saving. Sawhill's opinion is that people have not been making full use of the tax cut to be relaxed.

Permanent tax cut

The tax cut should not only be larger, but it should also be a permanent measure designed to help those who suffer from inflation or wage restraint, said Sawhill.

"As we approach the job of turning the economy around, it would help the Congress to think big—bigger than the President," he said. "It involves a better tax system and a better time of inflation, which cannot affect anything else that the President can do."

Sawhill who wrote his book "Energy and the Economy" also suggested that legislation be passed to allow for energy saving. Sawhill said that his proposals are necessary for the energy crisis.

Democratic strategies

"The Democratic strategy is to pass all the tariff proposals," Sawhill said. "It is a matter of whether Congress is prepared to pass legislation requiring a 90-day wait on the tariff.

"The news media, Sawhill said, should be more responsible in presenting information as an alternative to President Ford's proposals.

"There is no marveling at more than 50 dollars a barrel," Sawhill said. "It is to be expected that the tariff would be less than the current rate of inflation." Sawhill also asked for his proposals to be compared and said he is waiting for the public to take his proposals seriously. Sawhill said that his proposals are necessary for the energy crisis.

Economic strategies

"People who want to have a steady unemployment rate of 5 percent or higher, Sawhill said, should be more responsible in presenting information as an alternative to President Ford's proposals. Sawhill also asked for his proposals to be compared and said he is waiting for the public to take his proposals seriously. Sawhill said that his proposals are necessary for the energy crisis.

Housing answers

"Though Sawhill thinks that mandatory reducers must be effective in the energy proposals," Sawhill said, "it is the main factor that makes the energy proposals necessary. The main factor that makes the energy proposals necessary is the energy crisis. Sawhill said that his proposals are necessary for the energy crisis.

U.S. President," Sawhill said, "is not the only factor that makes the energy proposals necessary. The main factor that makes the energy proposals necessary is the energy crisis. Sawhill said that his proposals are necessary for the energy crisis.

Pay for accessibility

The University has set a goal of making the campus totally accessible to handicapped students by 1980, and has budgeted $75,000 this year for improving accessibility.

The federal government has added $27,000 in matching grants, bringing the total appropriation for improving accessibility this year to $102,000. This may seem to be a form, but it is actually far from adequate.

The task of providing grade levels for public restrooms, dispensers for wheelchair users, and ramps to elevate the lowest classrooms is immense.

The announced goal of the University is commendable, but unless it is backed up by adequate funds, it will only serve to add flurry to the list of other things that cannot be done.
Airlines vote to restore youth fares

In New York Times

New York — International airlines and Saturday night that they had voted to restore one-night round-trip fares for travelers younger than 18. The move was seen as a gesture to restore youth travel, which has been declining in recent years.

The airlines agreed to restore the fares, which were cut in 1976, at the request of the International Air Transport Association (IATA). The agreement also covers fares for travelers between the ages of 18 and 21.

The move was prompted by a report from the IATA that showed a significant decline in youth travel over the past decade. The report cited a variety of factors, including increased costs, changes in travel habits, and a decrease in the number of young people who are willing to travel alone.

The airlines have been working to increase youth travel, with some offering special promotions and discounts. However, the move to restore the fares is expected to have a significant impact on youth travel, according to industry experts.

The agreement is expected to go into effect in October, and the airlines will announce the new fares shortly.

The move is also expected to have a positive impact on the economy, as youth travel is a significant source of revenue for the airlines.

The agreement was made in consultation with the government of the United States, which has been a strong advocate for the restoration of the fares.

The airlines have agreed to closely monitor the impact of the new fares, and will make adjustments as necessary.

The move is expected to be well received by young people, who have been expressing frustration with the current high cost of travel.

MILLIKEN HITS EPA DECISION

By JEFF MERRILL

State Rep. Jeff Milliken, a Democrat from Lansing, has been elected to a fourth term in the state House in the 60th district, where he represents portions of Ingham, Eaton and Shiawassee counties.

In his victory speech, Milliken thanked his supporters and promised to continue fighting for the people of his district.

"I am humbled by this endorsement from the people of the 60th district," Milliken said. "I am committed to representing them and fighting for their interests."
WASHINGTON (AP) - Mickey Mouse says kids kick his shins. The Big Bad Wolf says his ears get pulled, and it hurts.

But the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) ruled Tuesday that just because Mickey and his friends at Disney World occasionally run into some nasty kids, it is not reason enough for the Disney characters to have their own union.

Mickey, the Wolf, Snow White, Br'er Fox and some 60 others at the Florida amusement park petitioned to form a unit of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Allied Media Workers, AFL-CIO.

Their employers suggested they be included in an operators-service unit which represents nearly everyone else employed at the park, including people who sell hot dogs, guide tourists and change hotel beds.

Taking their case to the NLRB, the comic characters argued that they have special problems which only their own union could understand and fight to solve.

The characters and their job pass them at the mercy of visiting children, who often kick and tug on their costumes, and require them to shake hands and pose for pictures.

They cited "a higher incidence of minor first-aid problems" than experienced by the park's other employes. The Big Bad Wolf, for example, complained that kids pull on his ears, which are attached to a heavy mask, and that this hurts his real ears.

Working in the hot sun with the heavy costumes, they argued, also sets them apart because they have a special schedule half-an-hour on and half-an-hour off for eight-hour shifts.

But the NLRB wasn't convinced. In dismissing their petition on final appeal the board ruled that "the 'characters' are not actors: they do not constitute a craft. "They are," the board said, "essentially unskilled or at best semiskilled individuals whose working conditions, benefits, etc., are similar to those of other employes in the Disney World complex."

The Marines have landed!

"Before Outward Bound, I really didn't know what I wanted with my life. Now, I know whatever it is, I'll do it okay."

I can't tell you how much Outward Bound did for me. It happened in less than a month, it's still pretty quiet but now it's the start of it all.

I did it. I never thought I could, but I did. The Marines hurt and the bugs came but I pushed myself. The other kids with me did too, especially the girls.

And in the top season every night I really felt it and got to know myself. I felt like I was part of something important. And all of a sudden the thought hit me that I wasn't worrying about the rest of my life anymore.
