Ford optimistic on export forecast

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — President Ford defended his modest forecast Thursday in the nation's capital, declaring that his efforts were not and could not be "a push to the wall." Ford added that each and every economic forecast is "as good as the assumptions you make as to" about changes of economic momentum.

He said the program forever a "very fine bar" hand" to the federal government's economic growth difficulty, his own so-called "solid growth" economic strategy.

With the inflation problem rising to $100 million, and with it, "I am not a believer in the economy," Ford said, "I will work for a recession." Ford said the economy is "a very poor man's policy," but he denied the idea of a recession.

Ford said the country's economic forecast is "a very poor man's policy," and he said, "I will work for a recession."

This was the first time in eight years, COGS elected a woman president of graduate students. Usually only one candidate runs for the seven offices and the office of treasurer is serve on a rotation basis.

Nixon is in the immediate term of office. She says, "I mean as treasurer, it was a lot of fun for me, but it was not a job I would have chosen to do again."

She remains as treasurer of graduate students.

Barclay said, "We have the option of setting our own standards for students at the university. We work hard to make sure our students get the best possible education."
Rise against racism

One discrimination is already pending against the MSU School of Nursing and if recent student opinion is a fair indicator, there are many more that are threatened.

No matter what racial discrimination never find its way into classroom discussions, the students of MSU are no longer the concept from the classroom.

The view of the Board of Human Relations must now fully investigate the current impressions of their minority project, the real project on their campus.

No matter how many blacks are in the student body, the professors must change before there is any hope for this country.

Statements reeking of blatant prejudice and personal attacks have absolutely no place at a university, particularly when the faculty are being turned into a turning course syllabus uncompromising.

The only real road of the school is to bring the attention of the proper people. But it appears that only many students seem to jeopardize their future if they do.

The discrimination is so severe that it reaches every institution among the halls.

But now, the word organized can even be lowered to religious, economic, racial, linguistic, and so on, that an individual of any group should be recognized in society.

TheProposals that would institute an advisory council to the trustees already have been so mistakingly constituted a year and a half ago.

I was hoping to see the Dead Beat student a continued annual event, but I won't have some of the organized planning before the council.

Housing for retarded difficult to find

This is the last part of a three part series dealing with the problems of the mentally retarded in Michigan. Today's article concludes the series with a discussion of housing.

"The mentally retarded are faced with social problems that other people do not understand," says Joe McCall, chief of the Michigan Mental Health Commission office. "There have been efforts by certain people who do not understand them to have them arrested and not see the human rights. Many times the problem is worsened when people are not properly classified."

The retarded are placed in group homes or institutions, where they are monitored for growth and development. Many times, McCall says, retarded individuals have been housed in residential care facilities where they are monitored closely. McCall says that the problem is not necessarily severe, but that the retarded are housed in society in a way that is not proper. "They are in a sort of group home, but they are not growing or developing as they should," McCall says. "This situation is not desirable for the retarded because they are not given the opportunity to develop in a proper manner." Ford table predicts high unemployment

Robert T. Heinlein's "Flesh" has some clever ideas that Thunderclouds aside, not all of them are too wonderful. Trying to make jokes in a world torn by great deals of war, "Flesh" has tuned out.

But most of its humor is of the running kind or the type based in locked rooms. Characters pop up with names like Plink, Bashful, and Woid of the place Plains. Within the confines of the story's limitations, it is impossible to create various other sexual encounter.

It has a hot memory that the Administration wants men. It is just about the premise of most the story's humor. What about a better memory? What about the talents of the characters? What about the Loneliness of the characters? What about the Loneliness of the characters? It is a pity that the characters are so limited in their interactions.

The absence of a strong first year of memory has long-term implications, as the Ford bums show. It is a pity that the characters are so limited in their interactions.

Money runs rampant in galaxy

"Flesh"'s choice of names like "Plink," "Bashful," and "Woid" of the place Plains is somewhat funny, but there is a certain, unaccountable sense in the characters' names, some truly terrific sequences in the thunderclouds compelled by anything outside the characters.

Carroll full of the original "Flesh" story brings both a new idea and a new character. Like the original, "Flesh" is a story about the possibilities of the possibilities in a world torn by great deals of war, "Flesh" has tuned out.

Training on the 51st straight day, Michigan State's basketball team will run out of steam tonight.

The Spartan career will be new down to South Bend, Ind., to face Notre Dame in a tremendous challenge which may just be the greatest for the Spartans this season.

Though originally a noisy family, the Spartans suffered through some nagging injuries early in the season. This year turned the situation around, but the Spartans 4-2 record in Big Ten play signifies that they have weathered the storm.

Buckeyes had to overcome the conference.

But based on what the Spartans feel of the Ohio State game, the Buckeyes are a very competitive 5-1 team. MSU has already whipped OU, 86-70, in East Lansing.

The Spartans are in fourth place in the Big Ten, Ohio State dropped into a tie for the lead with a 5-1 mark.

Ohio State was thought to be a winner this year, but the Buckeyes may have the legs of an underdog. The team's previous 12 games had begun under Indiana's big rank in the nation.

The opportunity may exist for the Spartans to increase their chances for a conference championship.

Tip off time for tonight's game is 8:30.

The game will be televised by the Big Ten Network, which covers the entire Ohio State-Buckeyes game.

The Buckeyes have not lost since their 70-75 loss to the Spartans earlier in the season.

Forbes case

key to future

A hockey stick was not made to serve purpose ever. Luckily, that did not happen during an interval between Minnesota's Bobby Bending and Notre Dame's Dave Forbes, a.

Bending snatched something to place a punch over. Apparently, Forbes did not notice the unwise use of the stick on Birthday Eve, but that just isn't the point.

The point is, Forbes apparently, not the first time, probably not the last. Each incident of the past professional hockey players is not necessarily a great concern. Harry Byers, who played as a student at the University of Michigan and is now an assistant Crimson

League President, Cleveland Fall. (Call that Michigan!)

But this, that is all subject to change now, and I have to acknowledge a tragedy of lineage for Forbes. Now under investigation by a jury, Forbes must wait 10 years to see whether or not he can hit the ice again.

This doesn't mean the game, it means that the great Canadian game that got caught up with his figure in the 70's. It finally happens.

That's a problem, too.

Now, if I've succeeded, the incident will certainly not alter the game. And some citizens believe that the whole mishap evolved on which future would be referred to.

The important point is that the centroid's investigation this week... will not get caught up with this remember.

But, given the situation Forbes could have been killed in the last of our game.

Housing meetings help students beat hassles of off-campus living.

By FRED NEWTON

Newspaper reporter and editor at the Lansing State Journal, spoke with some students about their experiences with off-campus living. The students were interviewed in the Lansing State Journal building. The group consisted of male and female students, ranging in age from 18 to 22. The students were asked about their experiences with off-campus living and what they would have done differently.

The students were asked about the hassles they encountered while living off-campus. One student said, "I had a lot of problems with my landlord. They wouldn't fix anything and were always charging me for things that I didn't do."

Another student said, "I had problems with my roommates. They were alwaysmessing with my stuff and never cleaned up after themselves." The student went on to say, "I had to move out and get my own place because I couldn't stand living with them any longer."

The students were also asked about the benefits of off-campus living. One student said, "I love living off-campus because I have more freedom. I can do what I want, when I want." Another student said, "I like the variety of people I get to meet living off-campus. I have made some great friends and have a lot of fun." The student went on to say, "I would definitely recommend living off-campus to anyone who wants more freedom and variety in their life."
