For students who forgot that there are no guarantees, MUSC's use of one of its collection agencies is to maintain existing business relationships.

The University has a fourth collection agency (Gebler's) to keep the record of one of the most sensitive issues in the field. The other three agencies have been working for the University for more than 30 years.

The list of the University's students, American College of Court Reporters, and the American Bar Association has been acquired of a large number of loan funds.

The University is now willing to adopt a new plan that would result in a sweeping program.

The current plan is to use these funds effectively to the benefit of the students.

Bhutto asks for U.S. arms

The possible lifting of the U.S. embargo on arms sales to Pakistan and India, now under active consideration by President Ford, appears to be resting in a mixed reaction in Congress.

For the most part, Congressmen were noncommittal and asked for more details. There was also widespread concern that the shift in policy might raise the Bhutto government's chances of staying in power.

Recycling needs boost

The recycling industry in America is suffering from a multiplicity of factors, including inadequate tax incentives, the recycling of only a small percentage of waste, and the need for closer attention to the proper treatment of recyclables.

The recycling industry, however, has been given a boost by the President's new proposal to the Environmental Protection Agency. The proposal would allow the recycling of paper, glass, and plastic, and would provide tax incentives for businesses that recycle.

The proposal would also provide for the establishment of a national recycling council, which would be responsible for setting standards and promoting recycling. The council would be made up of representatives from the government, businesses, and other interested parties.

The proposal is expected to be a major step forward in the recycling industry, and it is hoped that it will encourage more people to recycle and reduce the amount of waste that ends up in landfills.

However, there are still some concerns about the proposal. Some people are concerned that the tax incentives may not be enough to encourage businesses to recycle, and that the recycling council may not have the necessary power to enforce its rules.

Despite these concerns, the proposal is a positive step in the right direction, and it is hoped that it will help to reduce the amount of waste that ends up in landfills and help to protect the environment.

Peru's army inflicts high riot casualties

‘Odessa File’ weighed down by excessive historical detail

By EDOUARDSE

For Newsweek

The odessa file, an account of the Bosnian War, has been heralded as a masterpiece of historical fiction. The novel is set in Sarajevo during World War II, and follows the lives of two girls, one a Jewish orphan and the other a Serb. The story is told through alternating viewpoints, and is based on the experiences of real-life survivors.

Despite its historical accuracy, the novel has been criticized for its slow pace and complex plot. Many readers have found the characters hard to relate to, and the dialogue is often stilted.

In addition to the main story, the novel also incorporates scenes from other historical events, such as the sinking of the Titanic and the bombing of Pearl Harbor. These additions have been accused of diluting the focus on the Bosnian War.

Overall, the ‘Odessa File’ is a well-researched account of a significant historical event. However, its length and sometimes disjointed narrative may make it difficult for some readers to engage with.

Foreign film censoring reflects American taste

"This is America - we don't do this," he sneers, the explanation for the ownership of last week's PBS screening of the Japanese film 'Double Suicide,' and the usurpation of Thursday nights' "M*A*S*H."

The Japanese Film series was carried on station KQED (PBS) and offered viewers outside major cities a chance to see classic Japanese cinema. The film, "The Woman with the Japanese Hat," offered an American audience a look into the lives of Japanese people through the eyes of a Japanese war correspondent. The film, in Japanese with English subtitles, served as one of the largest news stories, one of Eastern culture and insight into film production.

For Perkins, the KQED executive in charge of production, the film was a chance to further American-Japanese relations. With leaving intact the already strained balance of international goodwill for the film, "Double Suicide," he thought it was a chance to change the current state of affairs would be a better way of screening传导 PBS stations and regulatory agencies such as the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and the National Assn. of Broadcasters (KAB), which receive complaints.

"It's hard to see the American correspondents raised," he said. The only thought to the film was a problem was, "We're not saying anyone should leave.

"We are saying that when the Japanese film is screened, we're trying to work with it on the basis that the film is too controversial to be shown in American culture."

Perkins emphasized that the foreign film series is not a policy. "It's important to show the films that are to be shown at the American film festivals, but we have to look at the film as a whole and see what the film says to the American audience."

Four of six films were screened last week. They were "The Woman with the Japanese Hat," "A Little Night Music," "The Cherry Orchard," and "The Living City." The remaining films will be screened following the screening of "The Woman with the Japanese Hat." The six honor stories featured in concert

Milk co-ops' campaign gifts revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's three largest dairy farmer organizations doled out a combined total of $210,000 in 1974 to Senate and House members, just before Congress tried to raise milk prices and impose a surcharge.

Much of the money was in large donations given in a way that the recipients would have difficulty declining. But the gifts are additional evidence that the nation's dairy farmers, normally a political nonentity, could be a major political force if they wanted to be.

One House subcommittee hearing on the dairy question was told that a number of dairy farmers were planning to contribute to political campaign funds, and $210,000 was estimated to have been spent on behalf of candidates in 1974.

CATA to receive eight small buses

The Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) will receive eight small buses by June through a $2,000,000 grant. However, only four of the eight will be specially equipped for the handicapped.

The buses were specially equipped by General Dynamics. Conefer, a manufacturer of buses, said a purchase order is expected to be issued in early May. The buses will be delivered to CATA's service facility in August or early September. Of the eight new buses, four will be used by CATA's bus service, while the rest will be used by other rural owners.

The small buses will be run on a trial basis to determine the need for additional equipment and how they would be used by the state. CATA officials will decide at the end of the one-year trial if the buses will stay. If not, they will go to the state.

At present, there are no buses that will pick up handicapped at any request. Ticket sales for buses run by CATA or in the local government are made through the state Department of Transportation.

The buses are being built for CATA by Neenah Inc. in Neenah, Wisconsin.

The MSU basketball "gays" on the "Former Team," will pick up against Saturday's opponent the visiting Spartans in Arena at Battle and help Michigan in a crucial Big Ten contest.

The Spartans, whose immortal problem this past year has been their inability to put the game away, will get a tough one to start with against another well-organized team. MSU will need to meet, said chief in the conference and a 7-5-1 record (7-5-1 in the Big Ten) is what it means to lose Wisconsin and Northwestern basketball." Wisconsin and Northwestern basketball may yet take the trip to the arena, but the game will not be the same.

The floor features a new team against one of the teams in the Big Ten, and it is a new team for Michigan. MSU will have to adapt to a new style of play and a new team in their last game.

"It's always a tough game when MSU and Michigan get together, and Saturday's basketball contest in Ann Arbor promises to be no different. Some of the key performers in the game will be one of the most important.

"The game will be very important to both teams, especially to MSU, which has already lost to Michigan this season. MSU will be looking to get back to their winning ways and get back to the top of the Big Ten standings.

"The game will also be a battle of two teams that are very similar in style of play. Both teams have strong defense and a good offense. It will be a great game to watch and it will be a battle to the end."
