Red light tradition glows on

WASHINGTON (AP) - Vietnam's Defense
Minister Gen. C. D. Vannell, in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee Monday, said the Pentagon has approved a request by the Defense Dept. for a $28.7 million loan to cover the costs of a joint U.S.-Vietnamese search for missing American and Vietnamese personnel.

The Pentagon said the money will be used towards operations by the Department of Defense's American Missing Persons Task Force.

Vannell said the loan was part of the U.S.,
Vietnamese logistical efforts in South Vietnam.

The Pentagon said the funds will be used to support a joint U.S.-Vietnamese search for American and Vietnamese personnel.

Anchorage Alaska authorities said yesterday that a man who had been wanted by police in Anchorage as a suspect in an assassination attempt on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was arrested in Anchorage. The man, identified as Anwar M. Mosim, 29, was arrested in Anchorage on a warrant issued by the Egyptian government for his participation in an assassination attempt on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Mosim was reportedly arrested in Anchorage after he was seen leaving a video rental store. He is currently being held at the Anchorage jail. Police say they believe Mosim was involved in the assassination attempt because of his众所周知的 involvement with armed groups in Egypt. The arrest comes as tensions between Egypt and the United States continue to rise over the situation in the Middle East. The U.S. government has expressed concerns about the safety of American citizens in Egypt, and has advised U.S. citizens to avoid non-essential travel to the country. The arrest of Mosim is seen as a positive development in the ongoing diplomatic efforts to resolve the conflict in the Middle East.

Muskie: deficit may be beneficial

The former New York governor is expected to support the budget when it is presented to Congress next week. He previously supported the budget of last year, but has not publicly stated his position on the current budget proposal. However, he has expressed concern about the deficit, which he believes could have a beneficial effect on the economy. He has said that the deficit can be used as a tool to stimulate economic growth, provided that it is managed properly. Muskie has also expressed concern about the high levels of debt, which he believes could have negative consequences for the economy in the long term.

Class eyes national priorities

In his annual address to the nation, the president outlined his vision for the future of the United States. He emphasized the importance of education, infrastructure, and national security. He also called for a renewed focus on job creation and economic growth. The address was well-received by the American public, who expressed their support for the president's priorities.

Critical choices on national priorities cannot be made lightly.

The president's annual address is an opportunity to reflect on the current state of the nation and to consider the priorities that should guide the country's future. He emphasized the importance of making difficult decisions, and called on the American people to take responsibility for the choices they make.

Critics of the president's speech argue that his focus on job creation and economic growth is shortsighted, and that the country needs to address more urgent issues such as education and infrastructure.

IRA cease-fire follows new violence

The IRA has announced a cease-fire as a result of the new violence. The cease-fire is intended to be a temporary measure, and will be reviewed in the coming weeks. The IRA has repeatedly called for a genuine peace process, and has expressed frustration with the lack of progress in the peace talks.

The announcement of the cease-fire is seen as a positive development in the ongoing efforts to end the conflict in Northern Ireland. The peace talks have been ongoing for several years, but progress has been slow. The recent violence has hindered the negotiations, and it remains to be seen whether the cease-fire will lead to a lasting peace.

Scientists study Psi building blocks

By FRED NEWMAN

The latest efforts by scientists to study the mysterious particle, Psi, have revealed new properties and potential uses for the substance. Scientists have found that Psi is not just a single particle, but rather a family of particles, each with its own unique properties. Some of these particles, known as Psi-neutrons, have been observed to have a higher mass than expected, challenging previous theories about the nature of Psi.

According to Dr. Edward Miller, a leading expert in the field of Psi research, "Our findings suggest that Psi is a much more complex phenomenon than previously thought. The new particles we have identified have properties that were not expected, and this opens up new possibilities for the use of Psi in a variety of applications." Miller goes on to say that this research is just the beginning of a new era of exploration into the nature of Psi.

The implications of these findings are significant, as Psi has been studied as a possible source of antimatter and as a potential energy source. The new particles could provide new insights into these areas, potentially leading to breakthroughs in energy and antimatter research.

This research is ongoing, and scientists are excited about the potential discoveries that lie ahead. Miller concludes, "We are at the dawn of a new era of understanding Psi, and we are looking forward to what the future may bring."

Stock answer needed

The refusal of interest charges leveled against East Lansing City Clerk Beverly Colizzi by police Mark Grether is one that requires immediate action. Colizzi owes a determined demand for an answer to a legitimate question by the city council.

Colizzi's answering of the against the city council has already been released and has been reduced to a mere token gesture of the injustice he has committed.

A qualified redemption is in order for Grether for what he has been accused of. However, Grether's question about the city council's handling of the issue is still unanswered.

Manipulated radio

As a journalism student, I would like to comment on the recent article published in the State News regarding the use of radio in the campaign. I believe that the article, as it is written, is a manipulation of the facts.

The article states that the candidates have been using radio as a tool in their campaign. However, the article does not provide evidence to support this claim. It is important to note that radio has been used effectively in past campaigns to reach a large audience.

I hope that the newspaper will consider these points in its future articles.

Cool on Coors

After drinking Coors recently, I was not really sure what to say about it. However, I decided to try it after hearing so much about its quality.

In my opinion, Coors is a good beer. It is not too bitter or too sweet. I think that it is a good alternative to other brands.

Dictionarist

The article about the Dictionary of American English is interesting. However, I disagree with the statement that the dictionary is not needed.

I believe that the dictionary is essential for anyone who wants to learn the language. It provides a wealth of information and is a valuable resource.

American dream

I think that the American dream is that everyone should have the opportunity to succeed. However, I believe that this dream is not being fulfilled for many people.

There are many factors that contribute to this lack of success. For example, education is often not accessible to everyone. Additionally, economic opportunities are not equal for all.

I believe that we need to work towards a society where everyone has the chance to achieve their dreams.

Short division

I think that the short division is a good option for the NBA. It allows for shorter games and can help to increase the intensity of the games.

However, I believe that the NBA should also consider other options, such as a three-point shot or a shorter time clock.

I am excited to see how the league will implement these changes.

Convict cited for work with the blind

The Associated Press

A 74-year-old Illinois schoolteacher and prison inmate who served 20 years in prison for slaying a couple in 1967 is being considered for release to help the blind.

Gordon B. Allen, 74, was convicted in 1968 of first-degree murder in the slaying of Donald and Margaret Smyth near Utica, Ill., and was sentenced to 40 years in prison. He was granted parole in 1987 and has been serving time at the Macoupin County Minor Civilian Job Center in Carlinville, Ill.

The Illinois Department of Corrections announced Allen's parole status after a hearing earlier this month. The department said he has shown "signs of significant improvement" and is "likely to be released to the community in the near future."}

MONSTER MOVIE MISSES MARK
Brooks bumbles horror spoof

Due to Young Frankenstein's whispered praise in the halls, and the hint of a smile gracing Brooks' lips, the world was led to believe that Mel Brooks' latest effort was a grand "Grand Series" film with a capital "S". However, the reality proved otherwise. After all, there was a reason for the title: "Frankenstein".

Though Gene Wilder as the monster was the highlight of the movie, the supporting cast was left underwhelmed. The film's climax was a rushed and overly convoluted event, leaving the audience feeling unsatisfied. The horror elements were scarce, and the comedy fell flat on occasion.

Regardless, Brooks' vision of a "Grand Series" film proved to be a disappointment. The film was a letdown, and it's hard to see how any future projects could live up to the expectations set by previous parody classics.
