residence game hard for out-of-staters

By DIANE SILVER

Out of state students have probably become used to the idea of having to prove they are eligible to live in Michigan after graduation.

But homosexual and heterosexual students with same-sex partners sometimes have to prove they are married to prove their residency. The same-sex partners must be able to show they have been in a committed relationship and be able to prove they are married to prove their residency.

One rule that appears to be legally incosnistent, sometimes makes for an awkward starting point from getting residency, but sometimes the residenshion means that they can file a joint return and have more opportunities for the future.

For example, having the partner of a same-sex partner is required to prove their residency. The same-sex partner must be able to show they have been in a committed relationship and be able to prove they are married to prove their residency.

Background:

Under the residency regulations approved in summer 1978, the determination of in-state residency begins on a student’s ability to prove he is in the state in January in his graduation year.

Residency is determined by both the student and his parents or guardians. Unlike in most states, it will be determined by a student’s financial responsibility in the state, plus a student’s or their parents’ or guardians’ financial responsibility.

In the past, students have had to prove they are in-state for the entire year before they can be considered in-state. A student’s parents must also prove they are in-state for the entire year before they can be considered in-state.

The regulations for these students are to be provided by the student’s or their parents’ or guardians’ financial responsibility in the state, plus a student’s parental or guardian’s financial responsibility.

Committee Dems unveil energy plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Ways and Means Committee Democrats unveiled a sweeping set of energy proposals Monday, with the Democratic majority seeking to recoup some of the ground it ceded to the GOP by adopting a bill by Rep. Peter DeFazio of Oregon in 1979 on "energy security." The proposals, which will form the basis of two weeks of hearings opening Monday, are designed to address the "failing economic and environmental performance of the United States," according to committee Chairman Thomas H. Kechichian, D-Del. They told their peers that a lack of action could result in the loss of jobs, economic growth and national security.

Among other items on the committee's agenda are:

- A tax break for all U.S. companies that purchase energy-efficient equipment.
- A proposal to expand the current 25 percent tax credit for energy-efficient home improvements to 50 percent for equipment purchased between now and the end of 1979.

The committee, which is composed of 11 Democrats, is expected to continue hearings until the end of the year.

The proposals were introduced as the nation faces a growing energy crisis. Oil prices have more than doubled since last year, and the nation's energy infrastructure is under increasing stress.

Ford may limit oil tariff increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's office last week approved a plan to increase the oil tariff by 20 cents a barrel, the highest level of the three-year-old program. The increase was approved to help relieve the government's budgetary problems, but it is also expected to raise the price of oil to consumers.

The increase, which will take effect on Sunday, is expected to generate an estimated $4.7 billion in new revenue for the federal government. The additional revenue will be used to help pay for the government's growing budget deficits.

The increase is expected to have a significant impact on the oil industry, which has been struggling to cope with rising costs. The industry has been forced to pass on the increased costs to consumers, who are already feeling the impact of higher gasoline prices.

In a statement, Ford said the increase was necessary to ensure that the government's budgetary needs are met. He also said that the increase would help to create jobs and stimulate economic growth.

"This is a difficult decision, but it is essential for the future of our economy," Ford said. "We are committed to helping the oil industry, but we also have a responsibility to the American people."
LANSING — The Lansing City Council will hold a meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. inside the City Council Chambers on the main floor of City Hall to discuss landlord list proposals.

The meeting will be held in person and will also be streamed live on the city’s website and YouTube channel. The council will discuss the proposed landlord list, which was requested by the city clerk's office and the public safety department.

The landlord list proposals are aimed at identifying landlords who have a history of non-compliance with city ordinances, including

1. Housing standards
2. Zoning regulations
3. Environmental protection
4. Public safety issues

The purpose of the landlord list is to ensure that landlords are complying with city regulations and to protect the safety and well-being of their tenants.

The council will also discuss the budget for the upcoming fiscal year and other matters on the agenda.

The public is invited to attend the meeting and to provide feedback on the landlord list proposals. Comments can be made during the public comment period or sent in writing to the city clerk's office.

For more information, contact the Lansing City Clerk at (517) 482-4100 or cityclerk@lansingmi.gov.

Student union needed to curb bosses' power

As the first step toward the formation of the Associated Student Government, a student workers union, student employees should sign and turn in union authorization cards.

Thirty percent of the 1,200 student workers must turn in signed authorization cards in order for the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) to hold an election.

Some 230 cards are still needed in order to meet this goal before fall.

Unless students have a formal union to represent them, issues such as grievance procedures, job security and wages will continue to be handled ineffectively and arbitrarily by University officials, serving the interests of nobody but the University payroll.

A legally sanctioned agency empowered to fight for student employees' rights is a must to correct the rigidity of the University human relations system. Better dignity and self respect of student workers is preserved and upgraded.

Student workers should not let issues of personality and the current union leadership interfere with the effectiveness of the union.

The concerns and interests of a union have changed and expanded with time and expansion of the University. The concerns and interests of a union must not become personal.

Questions of priorities and leadership, while the student's membership after the initial organizational stage is completed.

Endorsement time returns

Endorsements will be made.

They take a bit of thought, passion, sensitivity and a bit of moderation. The endorsement is more than the paper's editor's opinion or choice. It is also the reader's opinion and choice. The endorsement is the paper's service to its readers.

These endorsements are the last of the season. Many members of the MSU press have made their choices. The endorsement time has arrived.

An All University boycott of non-UFW produce has been approved by the student action committee for the month of months.

However, unless they can plan to bet more students are guilty of haggard.

The endorsement can be no change at the forum when a time arrives. The may the voters may be but a long, but a3.

Your interest this year is even more various because the student workers will be electing the new president.

This year's election will affect the amount of votes for the endorsement.

Jeweler creates unique pieces

BY LYNNE GETMANN

As an art form, and their day job as it were, jewelers can tell a lot about a person by examining the jewelry they choose to wear or create.

Mark "Chumley" Trambley, this June, is a professional jeweler in all phases of the jewelry business, and sells his jewelry with a vengeance of considerable satisfaction.

"I have been making jewelry for a year, is concerned with the community of the jewelry industry," he says.

"I know that I could make better jewelry for a fraction of the price charged in stores, but I need a business."

Chumley.

"I brought my own" he says.

Frampton finds way out of rut

By DATE UNREAD

State News Bureau

Peter Frampton said he gets the message. His performance in the Brewery Theatre de¬ mmonds was a new Frampton. Apparently the group has been needing a new image, a better one than that of the British band which has been missing recent years.

Frampton's message is as clear as it is strong. He has been searching for a return of his early rock style, the style of the early Seventies. And he has found it. The result was a brilliant performance in the Brewery Theatre.

Frampton's new style is evident in the way he plays his guitar, with a style that is reminiscent of his early work. The sound is clear and crisp, with a style that is similar to his early Seventies sound.

SYDNEY: Symposium criticizes capitalist system

By DAVID MARTIN

The New York Times

SYDNEY (AP) - The University of Sydney co-hosted a symposium here yesterday to mark the centennial of the Bolshevik revolution, which was ignited in the United States.

The symposium was entitled "The World in Revolution: Labor, Capital and the State, 1917-1937." It was sponsored by the Monthly Review, a left-wing American journal, and the Sydney University Press.

The symposium was attended by more than 200 people, including many of the leading figures in the left-wing movement in Australia.

The symposium was opened by Professor John Keegan, a historian at the University of Sydney.

He said that the Bolshevik revolution had been a turning point in world history, and that it had marked the beginning of the modern era.

"The Bolshevik revolution was a turning point in world history," Keegan said. "It marked the beginning of the modern era, and it was a revolution that was not only a political revolution, but a social revolution as well."

SAVIN' GREEN

March 3, 1975

WHY WAIT 'TIL ST. PATRICK'S DAY?
One day, Corky O’Flanahan started out on what he thought would be a simple task. It seemed his supply of Green was dwindling rapidly, and he wanted to find a way to make it last until spring came.

Corky remembered hearing the tales told around the hearth-side concerning a place where it was said bargains where born. It was called “Savin’ Green” and it could be found by following a road so old no-one could remember it not being there.

No sooner had Corky embarked upon his journey when he discovered a strange phenomenon — the road to Savin’ Green was covered with Blarney. The tentacles of the Blarney plant reached out to ensnare him, but Corky was too quick. He darted in and out of the Blarney’s grasp, clutching his purse to his chest. His problems where quickly multiplied as Blarney plants began to appear on all sides.

Some people say that Blarney grows naturally, while others maintain it is manufactured by a device they call a Media Machine. Regardless of its origin, there is only one way to defeat it, and Corky had had enough foresight to bring along his rubber hip boots which allowed him to wade through the infestation of blarney.

Little did Corky realize what other troubles awaited him, on the road to Savin’ Green....
Corky continued his trek, his arms swinging up and down, and found himself eye to eye with a Creeping Recession. He couldn't help but scream. He turned to run in the opposite direction, only to find that way blocked by a Giant Inflation. Corky clung tightly to his meager savings, for the two beasts were well known for their shrinking effect on the long green.

Fortunately for him, the Creeping Recession and the Giant Inflation were not used to co-exising in the same territory and soon began to fight each other for possession of the road. The monsters continued to battle awkwardly, allowing Corky to escape. As he ran down the road, the two figures were wearing a depression in the ancient thoroughfare.

Corky continued to run blindly down the road until he crashed headlong into another large and fearsome beast. It was a Hostile Administration. Convincing himself that no animal could be worse than the two he had just left, Corky decided to try to enlist the aid of the Administration.

The monster bellowed so loud that Corky thought he would pop his WIN buttons. "Help you?! Certainly I'll help you save green. All you have to do is give me half of all the green you have now."

Since this proposal made no sense at all to Corky, he felt he had to ask for further explanation from the creature towering over him. Gathering all the nerve he could muster, he squeaked, "Why?"

"You impertinent little snipel Who do you think is the expert at this, anyway?"

Seeing that this didn't impress the brave little leprechaun, the Hostile Administration turned to confer with some Economic Advisors that were hanging from a nearby tree. When he returned, the Hostile Administration explained, "If you must know, I'm going to take your green and feed it to the Creeping Recession so we can conquer the Giant Inflation. Or is it feed it to the Inflation to . . ."

As the Administration did what passed for thinking among that species, Corky crept quietly away.

THE GREEN
It wasn't long before Corky happened across a strange creature stuck in the middle of the road. He knew right away from the smell that he was being confronted by a Stagnant Congress.

"Have you seen the Hostile Administration?" inquired the congress from its bubbling puddle of primeval ooze. "We're on our way to stop his destructive and misguided actions and we haven't much time."

Not wanting to be impolite, Corky replied, "Yes, it just tried to take half of my green, but how are you going to stop it? You don't seem to be able to move."

"That's gratitude for you," snapped one of the older heads of the congress. "Just see how far you get trying to save green without our help," added another head poking out of the muck. "For your information," piped up a junior member, "we've got more things tied up than you could even imagine, and you dare to say we're not moving! We're doing all this for you!"

Seeing that Corky was about to move on, the Stagnant Congress decided to show him how they could move by giving themselves a raise.
Corky looked around, but saw no one. He was about to move on when the voice spoke again. "I'll bet you're trying to save some green stuff..." The voice sounded rather friendly, but Corky was sure he detected a note of sarcasm. Besides, the voice seemed to be coming from thin air.

"Man, I'm so high I don't think you can even see me up here... Corky looked up and saw a strange looking creature lounging on a cloud high above the road. Since he was in such an elevated position, surely the High Cost of Living could tell him how far he still had to go.

Corky was eager to share his burden with someone in such a position in the world. "Golly, I really do want to save green, but it's been so hard lately." "Like, I know what you mean, man, and I mean to tell you... You got nothin' to worry about... Really, man..." assured the High one.

"That's wonderful," exclaimed the naive leprechaun gleefully. "What do I do?"

"Well, man, first of all you've got to get a new occupation... A job, man... Being a leprechaun will get you, like, nowhere... no chance for advancement... Like, have you ever thought of being a Middleman, man?"

Just as Corky thought he was beginning to understand, he was distracted by a rainbow in the distance. Remembering the oldest of Irish legends, he scampered off to find its end...
