COUNCIL OKS SIRS access, 68-4

By William J. Hoeltzel

A 68-4 vote to make Michigan State University's students available to the SIRS agency was the action taken by the Student Senate Tuesday. By an amendment passed by the senate, student representatives will be available to the agency for a period of 16 months.

HOLMES

By William J. Holmer

HOLMES was one of the main speakers at Tuesday's meeting of the council. He was attempting to get the council to pass the proposal for delaying the implementation of the Living Learning Unit (LLU) until last year. He said that living in the unit would be cheaper and more comfortable for the students.

In the meeting, Holmes said that he was working on a proposal for the construction of a new dormitory in the city. He said that this would be the best way to accommodate the increasing number of students.

In the meeting, the council also discussed the issue of student representation on the board of trustees. Holmes said that he was working on a proposal to increase the number of student representatives on the board.

U.S. industry output falls

The output of the nation's industry fell 1.9 per cent in March, the sixth straight month of decline, but the smallest drop since last October, the government reported Tuesday. The slowdown in the decline in industrial output offered some hope that the recession-induced slide in industrial productivity has probably bottomed out.

Output fell 1.8 per cent in February.

Ford's fireside chat on Food, Housing and Assistance

The Administration has taken on its longstanding new program of housing assistance for the poor that about 180,000 housing projects, officials of the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development said Tuesday.

In passing the new low last August, Congress had authorized the department to provide rental subsidies for 200,000 housing units during the fiscal year ending June 30. But in reducing the expected number, the department has not rolled out the regulations which would require 500,000 new units, and builders to begin applying for the federal money.

Students hit unfairly by hiring traffic fines

More than one student has described his or her experience with the traffic fines as exacting.

The University Traffic Committee is considering overturning vehicle fines—up to the $10 to $20 bracket. While this is true that students should make student drivers, the facts that faculty and visitors to campus have been enticed from the fine because of this proposal should have then been rolling over.

The rationale behind these fines seems to be that students should be charged more for their own traffic fines than for the same amount of time. Thus, it is a question of whether the amount of time is a fair representation of the fine.

I believe that traffic committee staff should start to consider improved hiring practices or the potential effect of this fine on the current student government.

The introduction of traffic fines on campus is a step in the right direction. The fine has been an enormous help in cleaning up the streets of this campus. The fine has been a change in the traditional way that this has been handled in the past.

humanitarian aid to S. Vietnam tentatively OK'd by Senate group

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee tentatively approved a $11.5 million humanitarian aid program for South Vietnam on Wednesday, the last day of the session, for the evacuation of some South Vietnamese, to relieve the third world's worst refugee crisis.

The committee's action, which came after 4 hours of debate, was in line with an administration request for $11.5 million in emergency funds to cover the first-year costs of an estimated 100,000 refugees who may be repatriated under a recent South Vietnamese unilateral evacuation plan.

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., who first raised the issue, said the aid was needed to save human lives and to avoid a potential famine in South Vietnam.

The money, if approved by the House and signed into law, would be spent over a 12-month period.

In approving the plan, the committee moved closer to the administration's objective of reaching an agreement with the South Vietnamese government on a joint refugee program.

The administration's request for the funds was met with some skepticism by some senators, who questioned whether the money would be effectively spent.

Suggestions were made for other uses of the funds, but the committee voted 12-2 to approve the aid package.

The bill will now go to the House, where it is expected to pass with some modifications.

In other action, the Senate voted to strip away a provision in an economic aid bill that would have required the United States to limit its military assistance to South Vietnam to $100 million.

The committee also approved a measure to allow the president to transfer up to $300 million in economic aid to South Vietnam from other countries if the South Vietnamese government agrees to the transfer.

The amendments were rejected by the Senate, which instead approved a $10 million economic aid package for South Vietnam.

The bill will now go to the House, where it is expected to be approved with some modifications.

The Michigan State University Board of Trustees will consider an application for funds to be used for the city's student body at its regular meeting this week.

The trustees, who meet bi-weekly, are currently considering an application for funds to be used for the city's student body. The application was filed by the city's student body leader and is expected to receive final approval at the board's meeting on Wednesday, March 20.

The board will also discuss the city's proposed budget for the fiscal year 2023/24, which includes funding for additional student services and programs.

To get on the waiting list for a student body position, interested students should submit a completed application to the board's office.

CHIEF JOSEPH SHOWN AS 'NOBLE SAVAGE'

Nez Perce drama stereotypes Indians

The film "Chief Joseph" shown at the Theatre artichokes the stereotype of the noble savage. The Nez Perce, like other tribes, have been depicted in films as gentle, wise and noble warriors. The film "Nez Perce" and "Chief Joseph" have both been accused of perpetuating these stereotypes. The Nez Perce, however, are a complex people with a rich history and culture.

Jordan calls '70s decade for action

By BILL MANHEIMNER

The 1970s should be a time for black activists to work toward implementation of civil rights laws, rather than their interpretation, according to a message from Jordan Blankenhorn, director of the Urban League, mailed to unit managers in 10 states.

"We were a time of defining rights, the right to vote a band, the right to live and die," Jordan said. "The '70s is a time for implementation." The message, titled "The Society-Environment Changes of Minority Entrepreneurs," was sent to the Urban League's affiliate in 10 cities, including Lansing, and comes near the end of a 10-year period of turmoil and struggle by activists and helping them find good jobs.

Jordan, who has been a black activist and director in the civil rights movement, said the role of the Urban League is to support those serving public penal outpatients in the city and county.

The $80 million agency has a $26 million annual budget of which the Lansing affiliate receives $175,000. Jordan said the civil rights movement in the 1970s is focused on the South with the South always being hottest.

"In the North, you didn't have that," Jordan said. "There was no national structure in the South for 20 years. Jordan added that there has been a fantastic metamorphosis and expansion of black leadership in the 1970s, as evidenced by the increase of black elected officials, black management of midlevel dollar agencies, black corporate executives, black community leaders and black black entrepreneurs.

"From the beginning of 15 or 20 years for Gerald Ford to be mayor of Detroit or a black guy to run the urban renewal program," Jordan said. "And people are doing things that couldn't have been done 15 years ago." Jordan believes that agency such as the Urban League can play an important role in the 1970s, but that their black leadership in the community are not as conscious. "Black is an identity, not an ideology," he said. Jordan said blacks are an essential element of the stability of the country. "Black unemployment was at all time lowest last five years, but we couldn't control a '70s would have been brought by black consciousness."
State's lottery revenues shared by many areas

With recent conditions being as tough as they are, and money so scarce that some people say government corruption still uses greenback, it's no surprise that advancements in technology are making it easier for the average Joe to win the lottery. This year, the state lottery revenue has increased by 20%, with the majority of revenue coming from the lottery. With this increase, the state government has been able to share the revenue with many areas, including schools, hospitals, and other public institutions.

Advocates of health program will retaliate against Ford veto

The advocates of the health program are planning to retaliate against Ford's veto. They argue that the veto is a threat to the health and well-being of the American people. They have already started a campaign to raise awareness about the importance of the health program.

Woodcock noted, "National health insurance is not a social issue. It's a basic need. Every year, we spend over $4 billion for health care in the U.S. We need a system that provides access to quality care for all Americans."

The health security bill, sponsored by Senator Edward W. Kennedy, Massachusetts, and Senator J. James H. Civilian, D-D.C., was a step in the right direction. The bill would provide health insurance to all Americans.

Edwin, however, believes that the bill is not enough. "This is a step in the right direction, but we need more. We need to make health care accessible to everyone."

Opponents of the bill, such as Senator Barry Goldwater, Arizona, argue that the bill is too expensive and will lead to inflation. However, supporters of the bill, such as Senator George McGovern, South Dakota, believe that the bill is necessary to provide health care for all Americans.

In conclusion, the advocates of the health program will continue to fight for their cause. They believe that everyone deserves access to quality health care, and they will not give up until their goals are achieved.

VEGETABLES, BLISTERS, PEACE OF MIND

Spartan Gardens offers farm plots

BY PAM WEAVER

"Vegetables, blisters and peace of mind!" According to one person, that's what you get when you rent a garden plot from the Spartan Gardens, a community garden project sponsored by MSU's Horticultural Dept.

For over 20 years, Horticulture graduate student Mary Jane Johnson has been renting plots from Spartan Gardens, for which she pays $2 per growing season (May through mid-October). The land on drives and dirt roads is already plowed and seeded, the soil is well watered and plenty of produce is available.

But more importantly, for approximately $25, students get a supervisor, including most of the plots that are rented to them. "It's a good opportunity for me," Johnson said about it.

Spartan Gardens are easy to manage because they are maintained like a good garden, says one student. "It's a good opportunity for me," Johnson said about it.

"It's been at our door for 20 years and we grow all kinds of vegetables on them," says one student.

Bob Rice's spring gardening involves more than the usual wood-pulling and hoeing. Rice, an MSU graduate student, is in charge of clearing away the old gardens from the 12 plots rented by the MSU Horticultural Dept.

"Spartan Gardens offers farm plots for the spring. You are growing your own vegetables. Also, the chance to go out and get fresh air in the middle of the city," Rice said.

Whether the reason, the response to Spartan Gardens has been great. In fact, over 300 plots have been rented this year - and many new opportunities are being offered this season. For the first time, the garden cooperative will allow numerous varieties of hybrid, disease-resistant seeds at wholesale prices. The seeds being developed at MSU specifically for Michigan growing conditions can also be grown by the public for personal use.

Rice has high expectations for the future. Spartan Gardens, which will be changing locations after this year - spring - will be built next spring on the land Spartan Gardens now occupies. Rice said and hopes that the garden's new location, currently in the process of being developed, will enable more long-term improvements to be made on the land. Rice said the hope is to provide fresh vegetables to area residents.

Another advantage to a five-year lease would be the ability to rent plots for several years at a time.

"Right now we just plan to plant the Dilettato and you them every week, which means people will grow anything like fruits. Next year we'll be to give them their glorious of keeping their own plots year after year," Rice explained.
