SAFE PASSAGE GRANTED TO PORTUGUESE REFUGEES

By MARIAN HOWELL

SAFETY WAS the word last night for more than 1,000 refugees from Portugal, who were being brought to this area on a special United Nations airplane. The refugees, who were mostly women and children, were said to be heading for the United States via Canada and unknown points in Latin America.

The refugees, who included members of the Bahrein, Peixe, and Souza families, were accompanied by Portuguese officials and U.N. personnel.

The refugees were being taken to a U.N. refugee center in the United States where they would be housed and given medical attention. They would then be flown to their final destination in the United States.

The refugees were chosen by the U.N. based on their need for safety and their ability to integrate into society. They were brought to the United States in order to provide them with a safe and stable environment.

The refugees were greeted upon their arrival by U.N. officials and local community leaders, who ensured their safety and provided them with the necessary support.

The refugees lived in a temporary shelter until they were able to find a place to live and work. They were provided with medical care, education, and job training to help them become self-sufficient.

The refugees were later transferred to other locations across the United States, where they continued to receive support and assistance.

The refugees were eventually able to find permanent homes and jobs, and they were able to contribute to their new communities. They were grateful for the chance to start a new life in a safe and welcoming environment.

The refugees were an inspiration to others who were in similar situations, and their story served as a reminder of the importance of providing safety and support to refugees around the world.

Release for Fromme denied

D.C. Circuit Court Judge William D. Douglas refused Thursday to release Lynette Fromme from jail pending her habeas corpus action against President Ford.

Douglas, acting without a comment from Fromme's lawyers that she had filed on her own recognizance, was left with no legal alternative other than to grant Thursday. President Richard Nixon granted Fromme in full, starting participation by a solicitor general in future cases involving prisoners.

Beirut, Israeli-Egyptian talks in trap

The Reagan administration is having second thoughts about an agreement signed Wednesday by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Egyptian Foreign Minister Salama Faraj.

The agreement, signed in London, means that Egypt and Israel will open their borders to each other. However, it is not clear whether the agreement will be implemented.

TOYO (AP) - In a few hours, they will meet to discuss what the world's two major deep sea whale hunting nations, agree to sign an agreement that will mean the end of whaling for at least five years.

The two nations are the United States and Japan, which are the main whaling nations. The agreement is intended to give the world's oceans a chance to recover.

Nobel peace prize awarded

D.C. (AP) - The former Soviet Union's Nobel Peace Prize, awarded to former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, has been awarded to former Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

The prize was awarded on Thursday by Swedish Academy, which said it was given to Gorbachev for his efforts in the world's peace efforts.

Fighting breaks out in Angola

LUANDA, Angola (AP) - Heavy fighting between rival liberation movements has broken out in northern Angola, 180 miles from the Angolan capital.

The two movements are the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) and the National Front for the Liberation of Angola (FNLA).

The fighting began on Thursday. The MPLA announced that it had killed 100 enemy soldiers and captured 200 others.

Senator supports Sino agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate, in a preliminary vote, approved agreements with China binding the United States to maintain a presence in the Pacific.

The vote was 91-2 in favor of the agreement, with 12 abstentions.

A special amendment was added by Sen. James McClellan, D-Iowa, to bar the use of U.S. funds in any event to provide for American military personnel to serve in the Pacific.

(Author's note: The vote was 78-21 in favor of the agreement, with 3 abstentions.)

In his letter,函 requested that the existing committee temporarily remove the last from the second Academic Committee and refer the proposal to the Treasurer's Committee.

This is not meant to be an obstructionist letter, but it is a very important matter:
the Academic Council has not been consulted before the next Academic Committee is to be selected, but a special meeting would have to be called.

There was no written record of mention of this matter on the meeting minutes:
the meeting minutes never show the meeting's decision.

The Academic Council still has 20 seats:
the board herself is the only one who was consulted about the proposal.

Green and white day for MSU

It could be a crisp fall day — or it could be a drizzly prelude to winter. Either way, the Michigan State Spartans and Spartan boosters will be there in force on Nov. 5, in the name of the University and the State of Michigan.

Beating Michigan may not seem a big thing to many — perhaps, for example, and people in the South. But for students of MSU this year is THE GAME.

It is not just because we haven’t defeated the Wolverines since 1966. It is not just because the neighborhood affection we feel for the smaller institution down the high way in Ann Arbor.

Nor is Michigan-Michigan State game important solely for its msu in creating an excuse for snow-bound Spartan to journey to Miami, or maybe even Pasadena, over the New Year. No — Michigan-Michigan State in tradition: the chauvin and sensed and populous that makes Big Ten football Big Ten football, and tomorrow perhaps share a great national rivalry.

Who can deny that the Spartan spirit is in the air? Who can fail to detect that fresh air, that dash of inspiration, common hope and common enthusiasm that unites this campus like nothing else can?

Tomorrow is the day to wear green and white, to hoist Dutcher, and engulf yourself in the euphoria of winning the game.

After Notre Dame, after three straight victories, our team has earned our support.

Tomorrow — sun or no — the Spartans will reign.

ASMSU defends due process for SWU

ASMSU seems to have located its backbone with regard to the Michigan State University (SWU) issue by restoring the union’s student rights. Asosing with the above, ASMSU has also reaffirmed the priority of due process.

When the SWU administration took over 14 years ago, it has never considered SWU to be a student organization, but rather a labor organization. ASMSU seemed reluctant to take the first, and formidably action needed to withstand the University’s intimidation.

But in passing the bill that would restore student rights — it has with it the privileges accorded any student organization — ASMSU recognized that the administration of SWU has not been consistent.

But just as vital, ASMSU has realized the need for a new bill providing for an equal amount of the administration in due process.

There is no use on the books that would have a student labor group from the right to be a student organization. If the administration were to accept the amendment to the proposed bill, it would have to agree to an amendment to the Student Organization Regulations.

Until such a time, the administration simply has no grounds to conclude SWU is a student organization status. Through it continuapes has to twist right on the light on the human family labor precedents, the administration ardently neglects the fact that SWU, unlike its faculty prototype, falls under the protection of student organization policies.

And unless a judicious finds SWU guilty of violating an ord-ereating, submitting false information or defrauding on a financial obligation, SWU commitments to many, has every right to remain a student organization.

But the judicial procedure necessarily entails due process and the administration, as only one component of due process, has no choice but follow to it the letter.

Environmental Protection Bill faces crisis

by STEVE WINTER

The Michigan Senate on Monday acted on two bills that would have far-reaching effects on Michigan. The Senate defeated a bill that would have allowed the EPA to regulate Michigan's largest industries. The bill passed 15-25 in the House, but not in the Senate. The Senate also defeated a bill that would have allowed the EPA to regulate Michigan's waste disposal facilities. The bill passed 20-19 in the House, but not in the Senate.

The bills were opposed by environmentalists and business leaders, who argued that the EPA has overstepped its authority. The bills were supported by the National Federation of Independent Business and the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, who argued that the EPA has not been effective in regulating pollution.

The bills were also opposed by environmental groups, who argued that the EPA has a responsibility to protect the environment. The bills were supported by the Michigan Manufacturers Association, who argued that the EPA has been ineffective in regulating pollution.

The Senate defeated the bills on a 30-14 vote. The House defeated the bills on a 62-46 vote. The votes were close, but not enough to pass the bills.

The bills were introduced by Republican Senator Joe Haidasz and Democratic Senator Dan Little. The bills were sponsored by Republican Representative John Moolenaar and Democratic Representative Paul Pichardo.

The bills were part of a larger effort by the National Federation of Independent Business and the Michigan Chamber of Commerce to roll back regulations imposed by the EPA. The bills were introduced in response to a series of EPA regulations that have been imposed on Michigan businesses.

The bills were opposed by environmental groups, who argued that the EPA has a responsibility to protect the environment. The bills were supported by the Michigan Manufacturers Association, who argued that the EPA has been ineffective in regulating pollution.

The bills were defeated in the Senate and House, but it is likely that they will be reintroduced in the next legislative session.
DEPT (AP) — The governor may grant immunity in the case of a sexual assault and sexual exploitation charge in an exchange for testimony against her ex-husband, according to court documents filed Thursday by state Sen. Karen L. Jump.

Eddie Smith, her ex-husband, named Van E. Smith, was reportedly granted immunity yesterday in an exchange for his testimony against Jump. Smith is alleged to have sexually assaulted Jump in 1981, according to the court documents.

"We believe the evidence in this case is overwhelming and that Karen Jump is guilty of the crimes charged," said Smith's attorney, Michael J. T. Smith.

BARBARA J. SMITH (AP) — The Michigan Senate on Tuesday approved a bill that would make it easier to replace state officials who resign or are removed by the governor.

The bill was approved on a 31-0 vote, allowing it to be signed into law by Gov. Rick Snyder. The bill would allow the governor to replace any state official who resigns or is removed by the state legislature.

"This bill is a commonsense solution that will help ensure that our state government remains accountable to the people," said Snyder.

The Senate had earlier approved a similar bill in the House, which was sent to the governor's desk for his signature.

"This is a win-win situation for everyone," said Snyder. "We're doing what's best for the people of Michigan."

New minority councils created

By CARMEN ALFONSO
State News Staff Writer

The special committee established by ASMSU last May to study the creation of minority councils will hold its third meeting this week to develop a tentative proposal to present to the ASMSU board. The meeting will be held in conjunction with a meeting of the Senate on Tuesday at 4 p.m. to consider the report of the Special Committee on Minority Affairs.

The purpose of the committee is to provide a forum for communication among all interested minorities and to serve as a national forum for study of the problems of minority groups. The committee is composed of students and faculty members who have expressed an interest in the study of minority problems.

MSU artist returns to recapture following

Artist Mike Johnson

By Fred Newton
State News Staff Writer

Don't be surprised to see a portrait of John DeWitt Johnson, one of the most famous artists and photographers from the 1970s, at the MSU Union. Johnson was a graduate of the MSU College of Education in 1975 and returned to the university to paint portraits in honor of the 70th anniversary of the MSU artist's birth.

Johnson has been a fixture at the university for many years, and his work is featured in numerous art galleries across the country. His passion for art began at a young age, and he has been painting and photographing for more than 50 years. Johnson's work has been featured in numerous exhibitions, and he has received numerous awards for his artistry.

Johnson's return to the university marks the beginning of a new era for the MSU artist. He has been invited to paint portraits of many of the university's most famous members, including former presidents, faculty, and students. Johnson's portraits will be displayed in the MSU Union throughout the month of October.

Johnson's work has been praised for its beauty and accuracy, and he is widely regarded as one of the best portrait artists in the country. His work has been featured in numerous exhibitions, and he has received numerous awards for his artistry.

Who, for example, is to take over the event in the event of an emergency when the President is out of town or incapacitated?

While most people believe the office of the Vice President for Administration and State Relations—formerly the Executive Vice President—is the University's second highest position, it is the fact that the President's office and the President himself fill the role of direct, personal, and temporary executive. The president's duties are vast and encompass all areas of the institution. It is the president's job to make decisions that are important for the development of the University as a whole.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're thinking of taking the Secret Service to court as an agency in need of change, think again. The agency is already on the move, and the world protecting the President. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said on Tuesday that the agency is "prison for women agents because they're the women agents," and "the men are the ones who are in prison because they're the men who are the agents.

The Secret Service has been under scrutiny for years, with complaints about the treatment of women agents, particularly those involved in the White House. The agency has been criticized for its hiring practices and for the way it handles sexual harassment complaints.

A special agent is being investigated for alleged sexual misconduct, and the agency has been criticized for its handling of the case. The agent has been placed on administrative leave while the investigation is conducted.

McConnell said the agency is working on improving its hiring practices and ensuring that women agents are treated fairly. He also said the agency is working on improving its handling of sexual harassment complaints.

Iggy, Mao loom large in U-M football game

Jerome McGuire

It was on another football field in another part of the country that history was made. In the first meeting between the University of Michigan and the University of Mississippi, in the 1969 Orange Bowl, the Michigan Spartans beat the Rebels 28-17 in the closest of margins, a game that seemed to be decided by the weather.

As the game progressed, the weather turned foul and the Michigan defense began to take over. By the fourth quarter, the Michigan defense had allowed just 100 yards of offense and had forced three turnovers, while the Michigan offense had scored two touchdowns and a field goal.

The game was also notable for the presence of two future presidents of the United States. John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson were both present at the game, with Kennedy throwing the first pitch before the game began.

Johnson later recalled that he was "afraid of the weather" but that he was "happy to be here." Kennedy was also present, and he later said that he was "excited" to be at the game.
