MSU budget slash dealt down to minimum

By ROBERT BROOKES

the "most serious budget cut ever," according to Dr. John G. Oakes, provost and vice-president for academic affairs.

The cuts for the current fiscal year, which began July 1, were presented by Oakes at a budget press conference Thursday morning. He said the cuts were the result of a $7.2 million general fund reduction, which he attributed to a loss of $4.5 million in state appropriations for the coming year.

The cuts were also due to a loss of $2.5 million in federal and other non-state funds, which includes a $1.2 million reduction in federal research grants and a $1.3 million reduction in non-state funds, Oakes said.

The cuts, which amounted to more than 10 percent of the university's operating budget, were spread across all areas of the university, including instruction, research, student services, and support services.

The cuts were the result of a "very difficult" process, Oakes said, that involved "a lot of hard work and a lot of effort."

The cuts were announced "with a heavy heart," Oakes said, "but we have to do it." He said the cuts were necessary to "balance the books" and to "make sure we have enough money to operate." He added that the cuts were "the result of a very difficult decision."

The Michigans Greatest Lake shoreline family to rule on SWU status

The question of whether the Student Workers Union has the right to negotiate a new contract with the University on the 30th birthday of the Michigan shoreline family is due to be decided by a panel of experts in separate hearings next week. The panel will decide whether the SWU has the necessary base support to be recognized as a bargaining unit. The decision will be announced by the Michigan shoreline family Office of Labor Relations at a later date. The decision could have far-reaching implications for other unions seeking to represent Michigan shoreline family employees.

Economic woes plague state universities

BY MICHIE RUBEN

State News Staff Writer

MSU's President, Dr. Raymond E. Reed, expressed concern that the state budget cuts could have serious implications for the state's higher education system. Reed noted that the university has made significant cuts in recent years, but that further reductions could have a profound impact on the quality of education. Reed also emphasized the importance of maintaining adequate support for research and the state's economic development. The university is currently engaging in a campaign to increase funding, with a goal of raising $100 million in the next fiscal year. Reed appealed to state legislators and public officials to recognize the critical role of higher education in the state's economy and to support the university's efforts.

The WSU, which has been facing similar budgetary pressures, has expressed its support for the MSU campaign. The WSU, which serves the state's western region, is also facing cuts and has expressed concern about its ability to maintain its programs.

Mutually the more human we can make it, the less we need thed barrel the world will ask for a slightly more, a time, considering great natural resources already included in schools was passed Wedneday by the House Conservation, Environment and Forestry Committee. The bill, which authorizes a $2.5 million appropriation for state parks, was passed by a 51-10 vote, with only three Republicans voting against it. The bill now moves to the Senate, where it is expected to pass.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Herb Alkurf, a member of the committee. Alkurf said the bill is crucial to maintaining the state's parks and natural areas, which are important for recreation and tourism. The bill would provide funding for the state parks and natural areas, including the purchase of additional land and the improvement of existing facilities.

The bill is supported by the Michigan Shoreline Association and other environmental groups. The association's executive director, Bill Hall, said the bill is critical to protecting the state's natural resources. Hall said the bill would provide much-needed funding for the state's parks and natural areas, allowing them to be maintained and improved for the benefit of all Michiganians.

The bill is opposed by the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, which argues that the funding should be used for other priorities. The chamber's President, Bob Smith, said the bill is not a high priority for the state and that the funding would be better used for other purposes. Smith said the chamber is concerned about the state's economic development and that the funding should be used to support that effort.

The bill is expected to pass the Senate and be signed into law by Governor Whitmer, who has indicated her support for the bill. The bill is expected to become law by the end of the year.

MSU allocations seem lower than Wayne and U-M

BY ROBERT CLARK

State News Staff Writer

The University of Michigan has announced that it will allocate $2 million more to the State University than to the two other universities in the state, according to the university's budget plans. The university has also allocated $1 million more to the State University than to Wayne State University.

The university's decision is based on its assessment of the state's economic conditions and the needs of each institution. The university has noted that the state's economy is experiencing hardship, and that it is necessary to support the State University in order to maintain its operational integrity. The university has also noted that the State University plays a critical role in the state's economy, providing education and research opportunities to thousands of students and faculty members.

The State University has expressed its appreciation for the university's decision, and has indicated its commitment to continue to provide high-quality education and research opportunities to its students and faculty members.

Drug act will help consumers

One of the critical weaknesses of the generic drug substitution law passed by the Senate was the absence of provisions for mandatory substitution upon request by the consumer. In other words, a landmark piece of legislation, however, and plowed the floor for later legislation. Lynn Jondahl, D. -East Lansing, deserves credit as a pioneer in the area of generic drug legislation.

But the loophole served the interests of the economically powerful cereal manufacturers producing

New, and then Jondahl, another bill has passed the Michigan House of Representatives which would strengthen the original legislation and require

Let them be formed

It was a long haul. But when the ASMSU student board finally approved the creation of a minority council at its meeting Tuesday night, after six months of dispute, everyone involved seemed satisfied.

The Office of Black Affairs and the Women's Center, two groups that were most concerned about the creation of the council, were out.

So were conservative members of the board, who just last week demanded the proposal and complained of intimidation.

Satisfying, also, apparently, was the Chicago and North American Indiana University - after an unremarkable five minute show of hands. The unanimity of a Native American spectator with rules of Parliamentary procedure, combined with the unfolding of one board member with rules of courtesy, neatly brought the session to a halt.

Students in general should also be satisfied that the dispute is over, although they're still saying that the whole thing was nothing but a ruse on the ASMSU side. The board should not completely be swayed by the snide allusions to fiscal responsibility that are part of the situation.

But nothing has happened yet.

Let us consider the bill, because it is the basic issue, the substantive questions not being whether the bill will be passed or not. Perhaps not all will be so pleased with the results of the night's work.

The Senate now has full responsibility for seeing the bill through, and it must do so without pharmacies to use generic drugs whenever not necessarily connecting the consumer.

The bill's passage, in spite of raucous lobbying by the Michigan Medical Society and the Michigan Board of Pharmacists, was a veritable campaign for a cure.

It is tailored for an exact fit of what was needed.

But this first victory makes the following battles even more crucial.

The Senate now has full responsibility for seeing the bill through, and it must do so without from its responsibility to the public, the requisites of the parties which gain from promoting the interests of the pharmacies.

To allow the substantial control of a market - drugs, in this case - by the powerful few is untypically political. In the old sense of political.

But the State has been and will remain strong for the best interests of the public.

The weather is cut, now is it for the Senate to sew the shoes.

To the Editor

Supports candidates

Of the major events that occur during four years at MSU, the only one that should be the top of the list. Not only is it the most important event, but the potential positive benefits will far outstrip the others. Never in university community popularity as the political candidates of the Michigan gubernatorial race.

I thought the "billboards" made their appearance here today for the first time in the Lansing area, and promptly put up in several locations (State Avenue and Michigan Avenue) a sense of the American election. But there wasn't anything wrong with this.

I realize that again bearing better fire of the "billboards" today, it is the same old people that hold the same old beliefs.

I must agree with some of the candidates that have been on the airwaves and with the same "billboards" on the airwaves.

Soft spot

I was very surprised to read Mrs. Aho's letter that she had received from the Editor of the "billboards" that had been up on the roads.

I found that she had been in touch with the "billboards" and that she had not been satisfied with the "billboards" that had been up on the roads.

I think that she should consider whether the "billboards" have been up on the roads and whether she has been satisfied with the "billboards".

Nall - no one else

In the East Lansing city council campaign cycle, Gary Thomas was better to the editor of the area's newspaper than John P. Aho. In the previous city council campaign cycle, Gary Thomas was better to the editor of the area's newspaper than John P. Aho.

I thought that the "billboards" were the only ones that I had seen and that they were the only ones that I had seen in the past.

I am a tenant in East Lansing and I am one of the candidates in the East Lansing city council campaign cycle.

I believe that the "billboards" have been up on the roads and that they have been up on the roads in the past.

I think that they should consider whether the "billboards" have been up on the roads and whether they have been satisfied with the "billboards".

Proposal ‘B’ merits approval

By Charles Spooner

The Lansing City Council, in their attempt to resolve the housing crisis in the East Lansing area, have proposed a housing control ordinance for the city. The ordinance, if passed, will allow the city to regulate the rents and conditions of housing in the area.

The proposal includes a rent control system that would limit the increase in rent to a maximum of 10% per year. It also includes a provision for the city to purchase and renovate properties for low-income residents. The proposal also includes provisions for the city to control the supply of housing by limiting the construction of new housing.

The proposal has been met with mixed reviews. Some critics believe that it will lead to a shortage of housing, while others believe that it will help to stabilize the housing market.

The proposal has been supported by many residents who are concerned about the rising cost of housing in the area. They believe that the proposal will help to make housing more affordable for low-income families.

The proposal has been opposed by some developers who believe that it will discourage new housing construction. They argue that the proposal will lead to a decrease in the supply of housing, which will in turn lead to a decrease in the availability of housing.

The proposal has been referred to the Lansing City Council for further discussion. The council will consider the proposal at their next meeting.

Control relates to other issues

By E. B. Brooke

The Lansing City Council's recent decision to implement a housing control ordinance has raised concerns about the potential impact on other areas of the community. The ordinance, which limits the rent increase to 10% per year, has been seen as a step towards controlling the rising cost of housing in the area. However, some critics argue that the ordinance could have unintended consequences.

One concern is that the ordinance could lead to a shortage of housing, as developers may be discouraged from building new housing. This could result in a decrease in the supply of housing, which could in turn lead to an increase in the cost of housing.

Another concern is that the ordinance could have a negative impact on the rental market. Some critics argue that the ordinance could lead to a decrease in the number of rental units available, which could in turn lead to an increase in the cost of rental housing.

The ordinance has also raised concerns about the potential impact on the economy. Some critics argue that the ordinance could lead to a decrease in the number of businesses that are willing to invest in the area, which could in turn lead to a decrease in the economic growth.

The ordinance has been referred to the Lansing City Council for further discussion. The council will consider the proposal at their next meeting.

This B is confusing. It hurts the people it is supposed to help.

It hurts renters.

Perhaps the mistakes in Amendment B are innocent mistakes. But, unfortunately, those mistakes certainly won't keep them from hurting renters.

Property owners in Lansing's November 4 ballot is a serious threat. Simply stated, it can make it hard for you to find a place to live.

Here's why:

1. Change Amendment B would cause many rental properties to be withdrawn from the market. Thus, B would create a massive shortage of rental housing — a shortage that would happen quickly.

2. Because it is overly generous, it takes away the rental property owner's very ability to provide rental housing and to meet all the many requirements of this and other housing laws.

Here's how:

When you need the thousands of words in this bill you find that the property owner's controls are not controlled. But his rents are.

That may sound great.

But think about it: you aren't being treated.

Five minus five is still zero.

The property owner's heating bill has to be paid, his mortgage bill can be paid by any amount, (See Table of typical costs in N/A) but whether his total bills get up by 3%, 15%, 30% or even 50% he can take rents by no more than 3%.

But five per cent minus five per cent is still zero, aren't you (I am computing it?)

And 3% minus 3% or 15% is considerably less than zero.

Simply stated, it would make it legal to take something without paying for it.

(There is also a much simpler way of stating it.)

People aren't stupid.

Obviously any person who owns something will protect his right of ownership.

He can't get out.

And, unfortunately, many will. Any person with any will — who needs grief?

1. Some apartments simply won' be offered for rent. The units would not be rent-controlled and troublesome to the owners.

2. Rental single-family houses would become impossible for the past — just as they would be to sell to private owners.

3. Some apartments would be converted to other uses.

4. And some apartments would simply walk down in rents and down in quality until at last they were abandoned because of excessive losses — losses that would virtually be guaranteed by Charter Amendment B.

The Frightening Outlook

There are now 6,302 rental units in East Lansing.

How many fewer will there be next term? How many fewer next year? And how many the year after that?

Where will the housing come from for East Lansing's swelling population of renters?

Will they live in new apartment buildings? Small changes! B clearly disregards any new building.

How about public housing? No chance. East Lansing doesn't run the public housing now or ever will.

Will the presently come to the rescue? Not unless the legislature cares. And the legislature isn't interested in spending additional millions.

So where does that leave you as a voter? Well, hopefully, not too many general miles from East Lansing.

"B" is bummer. No mistake. B is a bad bill.

Why? Because it OVERLOOKS some vital facts. And because it makes some mistakes taken conclusions.

"B" is overly severe. It puts just too far. And in the process it practically guarantees that private rental housing will not be withdrawn from the market.

"B" isn't the answer for East Lansing renters. It can't do more than it can do for you.

That's why so many renters are against this "B."

Should you vote? Yes! Vote "No" on B on November 4.

Citizens for Better Housing.

Independent oil alliance against company curbs

BROOKLYN (AP) - Independent oil operators say breaking up major oil companies would not save the nation's energy crisis. At a meeting of American Association of Independent Operators Tuesday in a policy statement, independent operators said they would favor production, refining, transportation and marketing segments of the industry.

It was the first such action in the history of the trade group that represents 1,450 independents from 31 states. Previous proposals have been defeated in record weeks in the U.S. Senate by votes of 50 to 32, 49 to 31 and 48 to 31.

If we do not demand a resolution of John Kennedy's murder this year, it will stand in the way of a free election in 1976. It will doom a third century of democratic government in this country.

Lansing council hopefuls address issues

Though many saw the new downtown area as a success, the city's future was uncertain. A recent report warned that the city's infrastructure was aging, and the council was under pressure to address these issues.

"We need to put our resources into community revitalization," said one hopeful. "We can't afford to do nothing while the city continues to decay." Another added, "We need to address the housing crisis in our city."
