Demonstrators protest CIA recruiting...

By MICHAEL HARRIS
State News staff writer

The position of University recruiter in the CIA's Office of Personnel was discussed at the Wednesday alumni meeting. The position was vacated by the former CIA recruiter, who was reassigned to another post.

The discussion centered around the question of whether the University should continue to recruit CIA personnel.

The discussion was opened by the provost, who stated that the University had a policy of recruiting personnel from all sources, including the CIA. He said that the University had never been involved in espionage activities and that the CIA recruiter had been terminated for cause.

The provost also stated that the University had a duty to provide employment opportunities for all qualified candidates, regardless of their background.

The discussion then turned to the question of whether the University should continue to recruit CIA personnel. Some alumni argued that the University should not continue to recruit CIA personnel, while others argued that the University should continue to recruit CIA personnel.

The final decision on the matter was left to the University administration.

The meeting was well attended and was well-conducted. The provost and other members of the University administration were well-prepared and well-informed.

The meeting was adjourned at 9:00 p.m.
House bill would control land use

By D. ORRiewright New State News Correspondent

The last time the Lansing City Council was voting on a land use bill, it was 1974. But that doesn't mean the issue has gone away.

The Council is currently considering a bill that would regulate the use of land in the city. This bill was introduced by Councilor Barb Raymond, who represents the 2nd Ward.

Raymond's proposal would create a new land use category called "mixed use," which would allow for a combination of residential, commercial, and industrial development. The Council is expected to vote on the bill next week.

The bill is being opposed by some business owners and developers, who argue that it would put too many restrictions on their ability to develop land.

However, supporters of the bill say it is necessary to ensure that the city's land is used in a way that is sustainable and beneficial to all residents.

The bill has been amended several times in an effort to reach a compromise between the two sides. The final vote is expected to take place next week.
Get House bottle bill unbottled from trap

As proponents of environmental reform have failed, the state bottle bill is being held up by opponents seeking to strangle it in committee.

The battle hill, House R0749, would have sanctioned bottle and can deposits — a 10-cent deposit on other nonreturnable containers.

It would make two vital steps toward the restoration of the environment: the eliminating of ecologically damaging litter and the preservation of resources which otherwise might be dumped into throwaway manufacturing.

Two government studies have backed up the favorable results of the bottle bill, and it has the blessings of bottle industry departments: the Dep't of Agriculture, Moltz, Nicholas and Health and Highways and Transportation.

Yet, opponents continue to hit the bill below the belt.

The most recent development is a report of Mr. Johnson's administration deliver a critical report which concludes that the bottle bill would fail to safeguard consumers and that the bill would hurt industry.

House President bill in the Appropriations Committee after being held to the Consumers Committee. The Miller administration announced the filing of a protest.

The Appropriations Committee probably would refuse to support the bill on the shaky grounds that it could cause budgney insolvency.

Industry lobbyists are merit如果 for this unwise decision. Soft drink manufacturers have submitted comedically differing figures for their production of throwaway material.

Last year, they claimed 22 per cent of their production was throwaway. This year, however, they say 15 per cent.

And can manufacturers won't even disclose such figures.

The industry and industry proponents have continually played upon the aggravation of jobs, saying that the mention of throwaway manufacturing is misleading.

While this may be true to the industry, industry limitations — though not as basically rigid as the industry claims — notes that entire plants will close down as transparent sources. Moreover, none of the last jobs will be picked up by the U.S. Treasury.

It is long past time to set aside the empty arguments and get at the problem of the failure of the bottle bill from committee, passed and implemented.

Communist government in Naples

Mary McGary

The recent meeting of the National Democratic Committee, which nominated its candidate for President Ford, was attended by the delegates from the various states, who were particularly pleased to see that the people in Naples were not as widely scattered.

We believe that when the people come together, they will be able to act as a united force in the next election.

Moral watchdogs

Thank God we have concerned citizens like the two student groups who have taken up the cause of the moral majority in the world community. Most of us got our start as student activists through our studies at the University of California and our experience at the World Student's Union, where we learned the importance of moral issues.

Those who witnessed the student movement in the 1960s are in the common room in thecontinental Theological Seminary and were asked with the same enthusiasm which the administration did not show.

It was a day when the students were so united in their support of the Democratic Party that the administration had no choice but to accept the delegation.

The students presented their platform, which was in the form of a list of demands. They were particularly concerned about the role of the Catholic Church in the world community.

They warned that the Church's influence in the world was growing and that the people should be made aware of this fact.

One of the major issues on the agenda was the need for an international body to regulate the Church's activities. The students believed that such a body should be established to prevent the Church from using its influence to further its own interests.

The students also criticized the Church for its support of the United Nations and its involvement in various international affairs.

They argued that the Church should be held accountable for its actions and that the people should be given the opportunity to express their views on the Church's activities.

The students ended their presentation with a call for solidarity and international brotherhood.

Their message was clear and their arguments were compelling. The students' determination and courage were an inspiration to all who heard them.

As the students concluded their remarks, the room erupted in applause. The students had clearly demonstrated their commitment to the cause of moral majority and their determination to make their voices heard.
Out of New York's convolution -- a better way?

By PATT MCGHRIN

...It's been a long time since a New York newspaper's editorial page carried a picture of Richard Nixon's face, which appeared last week in the New York Times. Former President Nixon was the subject of a moving editorial essay by Thomas L. Friedman, a Times columnist who had been a Nixon foe for years, and the Times's editors expressed their hatred for Nixon in a way that was both bittersweet and, at times, morbid. The editorial was a reflection of the times, and it was a reflection of the New York Times's changing stance on Nixon.

The Times has been critical of Nixon in recent years, but it has also been critical of President Bill Clinton. The editorial focused on Nixon's role in the Watergate scandal, which led to his resignation in 1974. The Times noted that Nixon was never tried for his role in the scandal, and it criticized the Justice Department for not pursuing charges against him.

The editorial also noted that Nixon was a man of great power and influence, and it suggested that his legacy was still being felt in the United States. The Times wrote that Nixon's legacy was one of divided opinion, and it suggested that his actions continue to shape the country's political landscape.

The editorial concluded by saying that Nixon's role in the Watergate scandal was a reminder of the importance of holding powerful people accountable for their actions. The Times's editors expressed their hope that the country would continue to pursue the truth about Nixon's role in the scandal, and they suggested that the country would be better off if the truth were told.

The editorial was a powerful reminder of the importance of accountability in our political system, and it was a reminder of the enduring legacy of Richard Nixon.

Sigma Chi fraternity champs

It was a classical fraternity rivalry, Sigma Chi versus hundreds of spectacles and a local bar patron who had a beer.

In the end, Sigma Chi, scoring on the final minute of the second half, edged Lambda Chi Alpha, 15-13, for the university's intramural football championship.

It seemed only fitting that Sigma Chi, the 1975 Big Ten co-champions, would win after controlling the contest.

Billiard ace to appear

Dennis Casas, five-time world professional billiards champion, will be at the Union Ballroom at 2:00 p.m. today for two exhibitions.

Casa's first tour of the country, which is in the championship is 1975 at the age of 20, is his second national show as well as this national exhibition and will gauge musical ability. There are no admission charges.
