Committee reveals CIA assassination plots

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. officials revealed at least eight schemes to kill Fidel Castro and nine to smear and discredit him, setting forth an astonishing accounting of covert actions that provoked a presidential rebuke Thursday.

The government also revealed efforts to frame Castro for the murder of American agents in the Western Hemisphere and to engineer the overthrow of the Cuban government.

"I am appalled that our government would participate in such activities," President Reagan said in a statement."The American people have a right to know what has happened in the past.

The CIA's activities were described by the committee as "a series of misadventures, some of which were disastrous and had serious consequences for the United States and our friends and allies in the region.

The committee's report is a painful reminder of how our government can fail to act in the national interest.

The committee concluded that there was no evidence that the CIA had been involved in any attempt to assassinate Castro.

The committee also found that there was no evidence that the CIA had been involved in any attempt to overthrow the Cuban government.

The committee's report is a sobering reminder of how our government can fail to act in the national interest.

The committee has called for a thorough investigation of these matters.

Protesters invade placement offices in opposition to CIA recruiters

By MICHIL BURDEN

University administration leaders are in a quandary as the fall term begins. They face the same problem that many other campuses nationwide are facing: how to prevent potential CIA recruiters from setting up offices on campus.

The administration at Michigan State University, which is expected to begin classes the first week in September, has already set up a reserve list of students who have requested that CIA recruiters not be allowed on campus. This reserve list is a part of the university's general policy of allowing students to refuse the services of any employer on campus.

The administration has also set up a reserve list of students who have requested that CIA recruiters not be allowed on campus. This reserve list is a part of the university's general policy of allowing students to refuse the services of any employer on campus.

Challenge for CD funds

Thanks to the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act, East Lansing stands to receive over $1,000,000 in federal grants. Having received the first installment, next year should see over $100,000, the city is currently making plans for the 1975 money, which will amount to over $300,000.

East Lansing neighborhoods are already submitting proposals for the 1975 funds to the Community Development Committee, which gathers the suggestions and passes them on to the city council for final approval. With some University cooperation, the bleak marred by housing conditions can be a part of the CD abatement.

In the past year, the money has been used to aid or augment the funding of a number of community projects. The year, a number of small projects have been proposed which should, if approved, lead to an improvement in the East Lansing community.

A proposal has been forwarded which would alleviate the flooding and drainage problem in the Benny Chander and Baby drainage area which was held fast in last spring's flood.

A plan has been reserved for the city to continue its acquisition of park land, further expand its home planning and advance street cleaning programs.

The students in married housing have submitted plans for community centers and, added park land in their neighborhood. Therein, however, a bitch in the proposals of the married students that any plans the city council approves must also be included by the MSC Board of Tracton. Any delay by the trustees could effectively be the neighborhood from receiving the federal grants. It is hoped that the board of trustees will act swiftly if the city council approves the married students' proposals. These suggestions are part of the East Lansing community and considered such when requests for grants are sent to Washington; they should be included when such requests bear financial fruit.

A mockery of detente

When the Nobel award recipients meet in Stockholm to accept their prizes, the winner of the Peace prize will be absent.

Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov has been denied entry into Sweden to attend the ceremonies on the grounds that his personal secrets should not be allowed outside the USSR.

Such reasoning on the part of the Soviet government seems to call the intelligence of the world community into question, and only thinly masks a blanket disregard for the principles of the Nobel Peace foundation.

Sakharov has not worked on the nuclear weapons projects since his security clearance was denied a years ago in the sixties. The fundamental reason behind barring Sakharov's travel plans is that he is a dissident, and a wholesale crackdown on the dissident movement has been the policy of the USSR for years.

The Helsinki agreement, ratified by the USSSR, made provision for the free movement of people and ideas. It would be an outrage if Sakharov were denied his right to dissent action against Sakharov, did not live up to the spirit of detente, and thereby jeopardizes hopes for world peace.

The New Statesman

President Ford has been sponsored with unalliance when it comes to some matters concerning our own interests. A phenomenon in the political realm, demonstration or newspaper writer, it is more likely that Ford will stand or fall by his actions at home rather than those abroad.

Of course, the most of the majority of the world's nations are not admitting the existence of a Soviet "genius" in the field of physics, yet Sakharov's work is considered so significant that his principles, and as everyone knows, the principles of human rights are closely tied to physicist Sakharov, has never been so well known before.

We wonder if these conditions, which are in our government, will lead to an open and honest moving spirit of the country, or at least a legal, open, and honest moving spirit of the country, or at least a legal, open, and honest moving spirit of the country.

"We," those who oppose the proposed law do not claim to be the chosen ones in the USA or to be the protectors of the nation's interests. We are a group of people who just want to be heard, and the more people who come forward, the more strength we will have.

The National News printed two advertisements in the paper today which caused a stir and created a storm for the whole press.

Awareness

Awareness of Americanism is losing its importance in the process of Americanization. The picture of the nation is becoming more and more one of a nation which is not American, a nation which is not a nation.

On Wednesday, December 7, the New York Times published an article entitled "The Role of the Jewish People in the United States." The article, written by Richard W. Neuman, a historian at the University of California, Berkeley, describes the history of the Jewish people in America and the community's role in shaping the nation.

"The Jewish people have always been aware of their own identity," Neuman writes. "But this awareness has been tempered by the desire to blend in with the majority. This has been particularly true of the American Jews, who have been part of the American culture for over a century."

The article goes on to discuss the contributions of Jews to American society, including their role in the arts, sciences, and politics. It also examines the challenges faced by Jews in America, including discrimination and prejudice.

Neuman concludes his article by saying, "The Jewish people are a vital part of the American community. They have played a significant role in shaping the nation, and their contributions will continue to be felt for years to come."

Theater has been abundant in the East Lansing area over the past several weeks with a number of groups performing their shows for something for the entertainment purposes of the community. One of the newest additions to the local scene has been the "In the Fords," a group devoted to presenting original plays for the benefit of the community. The group has established itself in East Lansing and is currently performing at the community center as part of its ongoing efforts to provide entertainment for the community.

One of the surprises of the evening was the production of "The Ten Commandments," which was directed by Mr. and Mrs. William Ford. The production was attended by a large audience of about 300 people who were enthusiastic about the performance. The acting was excellent and the production was well rehearsed. The script was well written and the acting was outstanding. The production was well received by the audience, who gave it a standing ovation. The evening was a success and the group has plans to continue its work in the future.

The group also plans to present a new production each month, which will be announced in advance. The group is interested in receiving suggestions for new productions, and is open to new members who are interested in participating in the group's activities. The group is located in East Lansing and is interested in receiving information about its activities. The group can be contacted at the following address:

Spartan icans face Minnesota

by EDMUND L. BORDINI
State News Sports Writer

For the third week in a row, the Michigan State University's basketball team continues to be known as "The Winningest Team in the Nation." The reason is simple: everyone else has not lived up to the Spartan standard.

The Spartans are relatively experienced because they have had the luxury of playing in the NCAA tourney the past two years and have a lot of talent coming back. The team is led by several experienced players, including Mike Borski, who has been a consistent scorer the past two years.

The team has a lot of depth and can count on a variety of players to step up in a pinch. The Spartans have one of the best defenses in the nation and can score with anyone.

The team has four starters back: Dave Lich, Tom Sosinski, Bob Allen and Mark Reynolds. The team has had a lot of success in recent years and has a good chance of repeating as national champions.

Former Spanish dictator dies

The last of the world's great fascist dictators, Francisco Franco, died Sunday in Madrid, ending a 36-year reign that began in 1939, when he imposed a brutal, rightist dictatorship on Spain.

Franco, whose death was expected for some time, was 83 years old. His days were numbered even before Spain's Nationalist triumph, which began the Spanish Civil War in 1936, turned Spain into a one-party state and lasted more than 40 years. Franco was imprisoned and eventually released under the 1975 constitution.

Franco's death leaves Spain with no clear successor and a legacy of conflict and division. He was succeeded by his hands-off son, Gen. Francisco Franco, who had been appointed to succeed his father in 1975.

The Spanish government announced that Franco's body would be taken to Spain's National Pantheon in Madrid for a state funeral attended by dignitaries from around the world. The burial is expected to be held in the coming days.

The government also announced that a national mourning period would be observed, and that schools and universities would be closed for three days. The funeral is expected to be attended by representatives of the Vatican, the United Nations, and other international organizations.

Franco's death is expected to have a significant impact on Spain's political landscape, where his legacy has long been a divisive issue. He has been both praised and condemned for his role in Spanish history, and his death is likely to fuel debates about Spain's past and present.

The world's leaders have already begun offering condolences to the Spanish government. US President Joe Biden, UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson, and French President Emmanuel Macron were among those who paid tribute to Franco.

The Spanish government has not announced any specific plans for the state funeral, but it is expected to be a massive event attended by thousands of people. The location of the funeral is not yet known.

Franco's death is also expected to have implications for Spain's relations with other countries, particularly in Europe. The government has said it will continue to work with other countries on matters of mutual interest, including security and trade.

The Spanish government has also said it will continue to implement its economic reforms, which were put in place during Franco's rule. These reforms have been praised by some, while others have criticized them as wasteful and inefficient.

Franco's death is also expected to have implications for Spain's political parties, which have been divided over his legacy. The center-right Popular Party, which supported Franco's dictatorship, is likely to dominate the political landscape in the coming years.

The Spanish government has said it will continue to work with the EU on matters of mutual interest, including security and trade. The government has also said it will continue to implement its economic reforms, which were put in place during Franco's rule. These reforms have been praised by some, while others have criticized them as wasteful and inefficient.
