Agencies help stop child abuse

The Michigan Department of Social Services has issued a report that shows an increase in the number of children who are being abused. The report indicates that an estimated 20,000 children in Michigan are being abused each year. The agency is urging steps to be taken to help prevent this abuse.

The report also shows that there is a growing concern among social service agencies about the lack of resources to deal with the problem. It recommends that more funding be provided for programs that can help prevent child abuse.

Tax hike defeated; new ideas needed

Those who had placed their hopes on last week's ASMSU for an increase referendum as a way out of the financial problems are seriously disappointed. Some of ASMSU's leaders expressed concern over the future, but the situation should be taken as a sign that the student body again is not money-wise enough to vote despite ASMSU's attempts to ignore possibly ruinous trends and cut down on expenses.

ASMSU attempted to ignore this problem by cutting the increase, but the future should be taken as a sign that the student body again is not money-wise enough to vote despite ASMSU's attempts to ignore possibly ruinous trends and cut down on expenses. ASMSU is getting to the point where it must ask for help. ASMSU has not been able to increase services, especially educational and cultural — that ASMSU is not enough.

The financial problem is also a sign of the need for new ideas. There is a need for a change in attitude and a change in the way the student body is perceived. The student body is not as interested in ASMSU as it once was. It is time for ASMSU to change its attitude and start looking for new ideas.

Increased competition needed in energy industry

By WALTER ADAMS

Stolen revenue, the perennial problem of the petroleum industry, is the means by which companies attempt to maintain their profits. But the major barrier to this practice is the law or an industry-wide code of ethics that reins in the behavior of the larger, more competitive companies. It is not yet clear how far this will go in the coming years, especially as a number of states are preparing to impose new regulations on the energy industry.

Walter Adams

Vertical integration is anathema to the petrochemical industry's efforts to establish new sources of raw materials and reduce the cost of production. To do so, it must make significant investments in new facilities and equipment. It is not known how far this will go in the coming years, especially as a number of states are preparing to impose new regulations on the energy industry.

By LEWIS MARTIN

Parity, a term most often used in social sciences, may not be the best way to describe the energy industry today. The large companies dominate the market, restraining smaller producers from entering the market and establishing their own production facilities. It is not known how far this will go in the coming years, especially as a number of states are preparing to impose new regulations on the energy industry.

The State of the Union address is traditionally given by the President of the United States. It is considered to be an important speech, and it is often followed by a press conference. It is not known how far this will go in the coming years, especially as a number of states are preparing to impose new regulations on the energy industry.

Book examines war writers' lot

Kenneth R. Mitchell

The facts of war reported by journalists who covered World War II are the focus of a new book by Time-Warner's Richard B. Woodward, Jr., called "Journey's End." It is the first comprehensive look at the role of the print media in World War II, and is also a summary of the book's author's years of research and interviews with hundreds of correspondents.

Woodward, who is the director of the American Society of Newspaper Journalists, was inspired to write the book after interviewing a journalist who wrote about the war for the Associated Press.

"Journey's End" is available in hardcover for $25.95 and in paperback for $12.95.

Volunteer advocates help those coming from institutions, such as group homes or the mentally handicapped, make the transition to independent living. The advocates help in a variety of activities that will be the functions of the general citizen.

Approximately half of the handicapped individuals in America are said to be mentally handicapped. The advocates are always on hand to support and help the individuals in their endeavors to help themselves.

Volunteers are needed to help with the handicapped. Volunteers may be young or old, and may be married or single. The volunteers may be to help with the handicapped in their daily activities.

If you have a friend or an advocate, you can help in many ways. You can help them to learn to live independent lives. You can help them to cope with their environment, their relationships, and their problems. You can help them to maintain a sense of self-worth and self-confidence.

Michigan Spartan Band: Not its age

By MAURIE SOMMER
Horns have been blown, drums have been beaten and the Michigan University Marching Band, the pride of the university, has once again hit the road.

For the first time since 1927, the band has been allowed to make an appearance at the homecoming football game.

The band, which is comprised of more than 400 members, will be playing in a parade in downtown East Lansing and will perform at the homecoming football game.

The band's performance will be a highlight of the homecoming festivities and will feature a variety of music, including marching tunes and popular songs.

The band is known for its distinctive uniforms, which include green and gold uniforms, and for its syncopated rhythms.

The Spartan Band is a popular attraction for fans and visitors alike and is a symbol of the university's rich musical heritage.

The band's history dates back to 1874, when it was formed as a part of the university's athletic program.

Over the years, the band has grown in size and popularity, and has performed in numerous competitions, concerts, and parades.

The band's performance at the homecoming football game will be a fitting conclusion to a memorable season, and a preview of what is to come in the future.
NEWBORN PORKERS WORTH TIME

Center's pigs offer research, fun

Dazzling little piggies gave

Newborns are a major attraction for center visitors and are available for viewing only at certain times, through the fall. Merchandise is sold of the pigs, from ties and hats to pig-themed mugs and other items. The center makes a lot of noise when the pigs are present because they are young and are very active.

The center's animals are a part of the state's efforts to improve the health and well-being of the pork industry. The center's pigs are purebred Landrace, a breed developed in Denmark.

The center's pigs are fed a diet of corn and soybean meal, and they are housed in large pens. The pens are designed to provide a comfortable environment for the pigs, with easy access to food and water. The pigs are also given time to rest and sleep.

Visitors are encouraged to observe the pigs from a safe distance, and to maintain a respectful distance from the pens. This helps to ensure the safety of both the visitors and the pigs.

The center's pigs are also available for study by researchers, and they have been used in a number of studies to improve the health and well-being of the pork industry.

In addition to the pigs, the center also has a collection of other animals, including horses, goats, and chickens. These animals are also available for study, and they are used to provide a comprehensive view of the health and well-being of farm animals.

The center is open to the public during the fall, and visitors are welcome to come and observe the pigs and other animals. However, visitors are asked to respect the animals and to maintain a safe distance from the pens. This helps to ensure the safety of both the visitors and the animals.

The center's pigs are an important part of the state's efforts to improve the health and well-being of the pork industry. They are a valuable resource for researchers, and they provide a unique opportunity for visitors to observe and learn about these important animals.

Concorde creates controversy

By EDA ELLIOTT

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau is experiencing a serious crisis with his own Liberal Party because of a series of problems that have permeated the party's program and policies over the past two years. The Liberal Party, under Mr. Trudeau's leadership, has been plagued by internal divisions and has failed to win any seats in the federal elections of 1979.

The Prime Minister, who is facing a leadership crisis, has been criticized for his handling of the economic situation and for his policies on trade and defense. His government has been accused of being too soft on the economy and too hard on the budget.

On the occasion of his 50th birthday, Mr. Trudeau has announced a series of economic measures that are designed to stimulate the economy and create jobs. These measures include a reduction in income taxes, an increase in government spending, and an expansion of the public sector.

Mr. Trudeau has also announced a review of the Concorde project, which is expected to cost $5 billion. The government has been criticized for its failure to find a solution to the Concorde crisis, which has led to the loss of thousands of jobs and the closure of several factories.

The Prime Minister's speech is expected to provide a clear direction for the Liberal Party and to help the government regain its popularity. However, the economic crisis continues to be a major challenge for the Trudeau government.

Big Ten basketball is finally here. There's a mad rush to the finish and a mad rush to get in the playoffs. And there's a mad rush to get a 'Buck.' Illinois' Mike McCarron has already been heard boasting about being one of the seven teams that might make it. He's an egomaniac and he'll be the first one to admit it and to repeat it. His team is out there waiting for one of the seven. And they're out there waiting for the other six.

The Illinois game was a big one for the Michigan team. They lost the game, but they won the heart of the fans. They showed they could play the game. They showed they could compete. They showed they could win. They showed they could be the team to beat. They showed they could be the team to watch. They showed they could be the team to respect. They showed they could be the team to fear. They showed they could be the team to respect.

Big money loses potency in 1976 race

Candidates urge change as primaries draw night

By Associated Press

Washington (AP) — Contributors to presidential campaigns have proposed a 35-cent lottery as a way of raising money for candidates. Several bills have been introduced in Congress, and a bill was introduced in the presidential nominating convention in Boston.

But whether they last or not, the efforts of the Senate Finance Committee have been fruitless. The committee's efforts have been directed at the presidential campaign of 1976, and the proposed lottery is a good example of the efforts of the Senate Finance Committee. Political talk (continued from page 13).

Walker also said that this is the last time he will run for president unless he gets re-elected. Thus, he would consider seeking re-election.

Shapp said he would oppose any move by the Administration to move the Agriculture Department to Texas and also disavowed the cuts in aid to the Food and Drug Administration, the latter two issues, "We're going to be involved," he said. "We're going to use the veto if necessary."

He said he was apprehensive about possible Communist gains in the 1974 election, but "we can't decide the kind of government that other people are going to have."

Shapp said that he can't support Walker if Walker were the Democratic nominee because he's a "radical" on the left.

Shapp was asked why he is running, since no one in the line knows of the 12 Democrats seeking the nomination, including Walker, Bayh, and Shapp. He said virtually every governor in the nation has been approached, "but not for purposes of President Jimmy Carter's [in] this race or to avoid a 'run off' until we get an indication of whether Jimmy Carter is going to be nominated."

MMSU astronomers create 'best' beginner's sky guide

MSU astronomers have created the best beginner's sky guide for the year, according to an astronomy magazine in the January issue of the publication. The astronomers, who are from the Sky and Telescope Institute, published the guide to help those new to astronomy get their bearings. The guide includes a map of the night sky with key stars and constellations marked, as well as information on how to use telescopes and binoculars.

The astronomers explained that their guide is aimed at those new to astronomy, providing a clear and concise overview of the night sky. They noted that the guide is designed to be easy to use, with clear illustrations and step-by-step instructions for setting up and using telescopes.

"We wanted to create a guide that is accessible and easy to use for those new to astronomy," said one of the astronomers. "We hope this guide will help people get started and enjoy the beauty of the night sky."
