PLO to take part in debate despite American objections

NEW YORK (AP) - The UN Security Council voted Monday for the first time to let Palestinians participate in an open debate on the Middle East. But it was not done without debate as the Middle East.

Earlier three pipe bombs were found in United Nations Library building, that's it all. It's a lot of work to do it, said UN's spokesman.

African summit leaders split over Angola issue

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) - The 26 leaders meeting in South Africa over the weekend failed to agree whether to support the Western-backed government of Angola or back the rebels of UNITA. The leaders agreed to send their foreign ministers to consult with each other for three months before resuming talks because an agreement had not been reached.

New 'Grading the Pros' due soon

By FRANCIS BROWN

Hey, that's not a bad idea, said the student. "The only way to find out if a student is good is to".

Millet signs legislation to change primary laws

LANDING (UPI) - Gov. Millet has signed house legislation that modifies the rules governing Michigan's primary election.

The measure enacted Monday, eliminates the primary runoff system in which the candidate with the most votes in the primary election is selected. Instead, the candidate who wins the primary election but loses the runoff is selected.

The law also eliminated the requirement that candidates must be registered to vote in the primary election in order to be included on the ballot. It also changed the way in which a runoff election is determined.
Frencll cabinet adds women

Doctors slowing down as insurance rates rise

Chicago: The Illinois Medical Society warned Tuesday that the current pace of health insurance rate increases is unsustainable and threatens the health care of all Illinoisans.

The society, which represents more than 10,000 physicians, said it has documented a trend of double-digit increases in health insurance costs in recent years. The group cited data from the National Business Group on Health, which showed that the average annual increase in health insurance premiums for large employers in 2023 was 11.5%.

"These increases are not sustainable," said Dr. John H. W. Doe, president of the Illinois Medical Society. "We need to find a way to slow the rate of increase and make health care more affordable for all."
The Michigan State Board of Recreation and Environmental Quality has approved a $10,000 grant for the University of Michigan's Institute for Environmental Policy Research to study the feasibility of using solar energy in residential buildings.

The project is intended to assess the potential for using solar energy in Michigan's residential sector, with the ultimate goal of developing recommendations for policy makers and stakeholders.

The grant is part of a broader initiative to promote the use of renewable energy sources in Michigan, and it is hoped that the research will help to inform future decisions about the state's energy policy.

The project team, led by Michigan State University Professor of Environmental Policy Research, will work closely with local communities to gather information about the current state of solar energy in the state and to identify potential barriers to its widespread adoption.

The research will be completed by the end of 2023, and the findings will be disseminated through a series of reports and publications.

The project is funded by a grant from the Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes, and Energy, and it is expected to have a significant impact on the state's energy policy.

In addition to the grant from the state, the project team has also received support from a number of other organizations, including the Michigan Energy Research Institute and the Michigan Solar Energy Association.

The project is expected to lead to increased awareness of the potential benefits of solar energy in Michigan, and to the development of new policies and programs to support its adoption.

The project is also expected to have a positive impact on the state's economy, by creating new jobs in the renewable energy sector and by stimulating economic growth in local communities.
Don't let Concorde land here

A decision is expected in early February on whether to allow the Concordes to carry passengers on short journeys between Paris and New York. This week, the spectacle enlivened by the arrival of President Ford and his entourage, was marred by the news that Concorde was unlikely to land at Dulles International Airport in Virginia. The decision, which the centre for the project on the continent, was portrayed as a potential threat to transatlantic travel. Dulles, by contrast, was seen as a major aviation hub with a long history of innovation. The decision could have far-reaching consequences for the future of the supersonic transport industry and the wider aviation market.

Winter election follies

There was probably nothing more memorably whimsical than the election committee's decision to ban the use of the word "follies" on all election materials. The full committee, which was expected to rule on the matter, appeared to be preparing for a serious attempt to eliminate the word from the English language. The word, which has been used to describe a wide range of activities, from political campaigns to social events, was deemed to be too frivolous and insubstantial for use in official election materials. The committee's decision was met with a mix of criticism and support, with some arguing that it was an unnecessary and overlyzealous attempt to impose order on a chaotic system, while others welcomed the move as a necessary step towards greater transparency and accountability.

Viewpoint: Nonreturnables

Bottle bill report full of holes

In a recent report, the Committee on Consumer Affairs, chaired by John Smith, has called for the introduction of a bottle bill system in the United States. The report, which was supported by a majority of the committee members, argued that such a system would help to reduce littering and protect the environment. However, the report was criticized by some who argued that it was based on flawed assumptions and overlooks key factors such as the cost of implementation and the potential for abuse. Many also argued that the report failed to address the issue of nonreturnables, which are a significant problem in the country. The report was widely criticized as being biased and lacking in credibility. The Committee's recommendations were ultimately rejected by the state legislature, which chose to focus on other priorities.

Keeping her foot in the door

Regrettably, the "Kick the Ball Off" campaign, which was intended to bring attention to a pressing national issue, has been marred by a series of controversies. The campaign, which was launched last year, aimed to draw attention to the need for more effective health care reform. However, the campaign has been criticized for its use ofruntime tactics and for the refusal of some participants to engage in the political process. The campaign's failure to achieve its goals has been widely attributed to a lack of coordination and a failure to understand the complexity of the issue. The campaign's organizers have vowed to continue to fight for their cause, but it remains to be seen whether their efforts will be successful.
Local popularity growing for Stratton-Nelson Band

The Stratton Brothers, Pat and Kerri, cracked the left by Gary Rozanski and the right by Mark Nelson, concentrate over their music as a

Students play at dragons, dungeons in Simulation Society weekly meets

Kerry Kosinski

String quartet to play Beethoven

The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.

String quartet to play Beethoven: The formal Saturday String Society will begin the 1977-78 season at the Michigan Union on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The Society, which has been in existence for five years, has performed throughout the state and has seen a membership increase from 20 to 30 at the beginning of the season. The group is composed of five members, all of whom have been members of the Michigan Union band during the past five years.

The group will perform a variety of classical pieces, including works by Mozart, Beethoven, and other composers. The repertoire is designed to provide a challenging and enjoyable experience for both the audience and the performers.
Weight reducers try large dose of bread

By DAVID A. CASTLE

State News Staff Writer
If you’ve been feeling a little guilty about that next slice of bread, then you might need to add a good dose of bread to your diet to feel better. A recent study involving bread consumption found that those who eat bread regularly have lower blood pressure. This study was based on the hypothesis that bread consumption could help reduce blood pressure, as previous research has shown a positive correlation between bread intake and blood pressure. The study involved a group of individuals who were randomly assigned to either a bread or a no-bread group. After six months, the bread group showed a significant decrease in blood pressure compared to the no-bread group. The results of this study suggest that bread consumption may be beneficial for managing blood pressure. However, further research is needed to determine the optimal amount of bread intake for blood pressure management.
Skater makes Olympics

By MIKE JENNINGS
State News Sports Writer

Alf Sarvara will join the Wolverines this fall as a member of the national men's synchronized skating team. He is the first U.S. skater in history to make the national synchronized skating team.

"I'm so excited," said Sarvara after the results were announced. "I've been working so hard for this moment."

Sarvara, who hails from Detroit, has been skating since he was four years old. He has been a member of the national team for the past two seasons.

"It's been a long time coming," said his father, Mike Sarvara. "We're so proud of him."

Sarvara will be joined on the team by fellow American skaters, including former U.S. national champion, Joel Robinson.

"We're looking forward to competing together," said Robinson. "It's going to be great."