Engineer's council report brings up questions about 'U' engineering curricula

By the News

The Berit College of Engineering wants to hire academics to teach the university curriculum courses to ground the group which revolu"nizes students of engineers. The University Department of the American Society for Engineering Education (ASEE) produced the report.

Robert Perrin, President of the Berit College of Engineering, said the university was in the process of teaching some of the professors by the time this report was issued. "We have been trying to teach some of the professors. We have been working with a group of professors who we think are going to teach some of the professors and we have been working with a group of professors who we think are going to teach some of the professors." The university has been working with a group of professors who we think are going to teach some of the professors.

FDA bans Red Dye No. 2

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration on Monday banned Red Dye No. 2, the most widely used color in the United States for the production of foods, drugs and cosmetics.

The decision by Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt was hailed by consumer advocates as an important step toward stricter standards for food ingredients.

"The ban is a victory for consumers," said Dr. Robert Newby, executive director of the Natural Resources Defense Council. "It will help protect people from exposure to a potentially harmful chemical."

Ban cancer sticks from public places

"A custom I considered to be ugly, harmful to the bow, dangerous to the lungs, and in the finding stick thereof, more resembles the horrible Stigmas smoke of the act that is forbidden." — King James I, 1604

And smoking operations have established themselves as a powerful and effective political force, bolstered by recent successes in beating smoking from the hospitals, elevators and public transportation of numerous cities. NEWPOINT: PUBLIC SAFETY PROCEDURES

Night arrests for parking violations unjustified

In the Michigan State University News, East Lansing, Michigan.

In his letter, the author of this article expresses his opinion about the procedures used by the Lansing police department for parking violations. The author believes that the police are overzealous in their approach and that the fines imposed are unjustified.

The letter begins with a quote from the Lansing State Journal, "We're not here to be harassment agents, but to cite and tow in a professional and fair manner." The author agrees with this sentiment and expresses his belief that the police are not always fair in their approach.

The letter goes on to discuss a specific incident where a parking violation was enforced. The author describes how the police officer approached the vehicle and issued a ticket without the driver being aware of the violation. The author believes that this is an example of a "harassment" strategy used by the police department.

The author concludes by expressing his belief that the police should be more fair in their approach to parking violations and that the fines imposed are unjustified.

The letter ends with a call to action for others to speak out against the police department's tactics.

Letter:

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my concern about the parking enforcement policies of the Lansing police department. I believe that the police are using a "harassment" strategy to enforce parking violations, and that this approach is unjustified.

Recently, I witnessed a situation where a parking violation was enforced without the driver being aware of the violation. The police officer approached the vehicle and issued a ticket without the driver being aware of the violation. This is an example of a "harassment" strategy used by the police department.

The police department should be more fair in their approach to parking violations and the fines imposed are unjustified.

Sincerely,

[Signature]
