Fugitive AIM leader arrested

ELBERT CERRO, Capt. (AP) — Daniel Barks, fugitive AIM activist, was arrested here today on a charge of obstructing the mailing of a mail-in ballot for the 1975 Utah constitutional convention.

The 25-year-old AIM leader was arrested Saturday in Salt Lake City after being served with a writ of habeas corpus in federal court.

The writ of habeas corpus ordered him to appear in federal court on Monday, July 15, at 10 a.m.

The 26-year-old AIM leader was arrested Saturday in Salt Lake City after being served with a writ of habeas corpus in federal court.

The writ of habeas corpus ordered him to appear in federal court on Monday, July 15, at 10 a.m.

The AIM leader is being held in the federal jail in Salt Lake City on charges of obstruction of the mails.

The charges came after Barks, who has been identified as a key figure in the AIM movement, was arrested last month in connection with a plot to bomb a military base in Utah.

The plot was uncovered by federal agents who were investigating Barks' activities.

Barks is believed to have been involved in a series of bombings in the U.S. and Canada in recent years.

He is also wanted by the FBI on charges of conspiracy to commit murder.

Barks was arrested on June 26 in Salt Lake City after a search of his home revealed evidence of his involvement in the plot.

He was charged with five counts of attempted murder.

The charges carry a maximum sentence of life in prison without parole.

Barks had been living in Canada for several years before returning to the U.S. last year.

He is a native of Massachusetts and has a history of criminal activity.

Barks is expected to be transferred to Salt Lake City later this week for trial.
Busing sparks Detroit protests

Detroit (17th) — A massing of hundreds in clear view of the state Capitol and the State Police building below it was organized by the NAACP to protest the busing of black children to white schools and white children to black schools. The crowd, which included many state senators and members of Congress, held a large, white, American flag and shouted slogans as they formed in a line in front of the Capitol building.

City action for housing too slow

During the past week, members of the Lansing City Council should have been doing some- thing about the local housing situation. On Tuesday, the council took a final action, but the action was not enough. On Wednesday, President Bush announced his plans for housing policy—his plan would be more effective. The city of Lansing has not responded to the council's action.

The problem is not new. Lansing has long been known as a city with many housing problems. In recent years, the city's housing situation has worsened. The city has a large population of low-income residents, many of whom live in substandard housing. The city also has a large number of vacant properties, which is a major problem for the city's economy.

The council's action was a step in the right direction, but it was not enough. The city needs a comprehensive plan for housing that addresses the needs of all residents. This plan should include strategies for increasing affordable housing, improving existing housing, and reducing vacancy rates. The city also needs to work with the state and federal government to secure funding for these efforts.

The council's action does not go far enough. Lansing needs to take action now to address the housing crisis.

MERC stall uncalled for

After three days of foot dragging, it's about time Michigan Employment Relations Commissions (MERC) made a decision regarding the Student Worker's Union's (SWU) petition for certification as the bargaining agent for part-time student employees. That decision should be handed down early this week.

The stale may well be an attempt on the part of MERC to help the University administration. Was the foot dragging long enough, administrators may have hoped student workers would lose interest in unionization and the main activities in college would remain unaffected. Leaving off less motivated student workers to make decisions is fair, but stalls should be kept as a drastic decision of vital concern to student workers.

Get mad at Big Oil

To hear Gerald Ford tell it, you might think there are no companies with one step away from the public interest. But there are.

Big Oil is one such company. The public needs to know how much they are making and that they will not pay for the damages they are causing. Big Oil's revulsion about clean energy is indicative of the damage they want to do against the public interest.

Big Oil's backhandedness is what I call "the tactic of the good". When you ask what is the best offense we can do on the issue of clean energy, it is to get them to fight energy policy made by the government.

Cuff and Lott's revulsion about clean energy is indicative of the damage they want to do against the public interest.

Viewpoint... on the multi-dimensional conflict in Lebanon

Preconditions for lasting peace

NABIT ADUBRIG

The Arab-Israeli conflict is the most visible manifestation of the universal problem of coexistence, and it is a problem that affects and is affected by other problems in the region. In the words of Nabi Adubrig, "It is a problem of coexistence that affects the whole region, not just the Arab-Israeli conflict."

Adubrig, a well-known Lebanese political thinker, argues that the conflict in Lebanon is not just about Israel and its neighbors, but it is part of a larger regional conflict that involves various actors and interests.

He points out that Lebanon is a multi-ethnic society, with a complex mixture of religious and political groups. The conflict in Lebanon is not just about politics, but it is also about religion, culture, and identity.

Adubrig emphasizes the importance of understanding the historical and cultural dimensions of the conflict, and how they shape the attitudes and behaviors of the people involved.

He concludes that for there to be lasting peace in Lebanon, there must be a comprehensive approach that takes into account the socio-economic, political, and cultural dimensions of the conflict. This approach must be based on dialogue, mutual understanding, and respect for diversity.

Concert series at Campus Theater begins on high note with Coryell

By DAVID DORMANT

Abit Hallman

John came from the Village East Cinema Thursday night. The Michigan State University Nightingale Saturday night's Larry Coryell concert was not a major success. The audience was small and the atmosphere was very casual. Coryell's performance was not as strong as expected.

The concert began with a subdued and somewhat delayed performance. Coryell played with the guitarists of Taste, which gave the concert a certain air of authenticity. Coryell's playing was tight and focused, and his stage presence was impressive. The audience, however, was not as engaged as expected. In fact, there were a few scattered cheers and claps, but the overall atmosphere was underwhelming.

After the Taste performance, Coryell played a series of solo pieces. His playing was impressive, with干净的 lines and a strong sense of rhythm. Coryell's style was reminiscent of the late 1960s and early 1970s, with a focus on improvisation and exploration.

The highlight of the concert was Coryell's final set, which featured a number of his own compositions. Coryell played with a lot of energy and enthusiasm, and the audience responded well. The concert ended with a rousing encore, which was met with loud applause and cheers.

Overall, the Coryell concert was a good event for fans of jazz and improvisational music. However, it was not as successful as the Taste performance, and the audience was not as engaged as expected. Despite this, Coryell's playing was impressive, and the concert was a good introduction to his style and music.
Acting Company performs; laughing viewers approve

By MARTY SIMMONS
West Michigan Review

A comedy with the flavor of a circus, presented in a studio setting and performed by the Acting Company, proved to be an exercise in non-sequiturs and "outrageous" humor.

The play, "Arms and the Man," was presented by the Acting Company in George Bernard Shaw's version. The play is a comedy of manners, and the company performed it with verve and finesse.

The play concerns a young suitor, Harry Lorry, who is interested in the beautiful lady, Constance, but is thwarted by her father, Major drill sergeant, who is eager to agree to the marriage only if the suitor can produce a gun. The suitor does, and the play ends with a happy resolution.

The performance was well-received by the audience, who laughed at the witty dialogue and the absurd situations. The actors were well-cast, and the production was professionally staged.

The play is a classic and has been performed many times. The Acting Company's production was refreshingly different, with a fresh take on the material. The company's commitment to quality and professionalism was evident throughout the performance.

The play is a must-see for anyone who enjoys humor and good acting. It is a classic that has stood the test of time, and the Acting Company's production is a worthy addition to the canon of great theatrical works.

Spartan cagers surprise Illinois, 74-63

By EDWARD B. RINDERS

State News Sports Writer

Dueling high and low, Michigan State took a duel to the wire and then proved too much for Illinois, edging the Illini 74-63.

The Spartans, who lost to the Illini last year 77-61, took the top spot in the Big Ten and maintained their position at No. 1.

The Illini, who entered the game as the No. 5 team in the nation, were upset by the Spartans, who are coming off a three-game winning streak.

The Spartans, who are now 15-5 overall and 4-1 in the Big Ten, led for most of the game and increased their lead over the Illini, who are now 11-8 overall and 2-3 in the Big Ten.

The game started with a bang as the Spartans took the lead early on, and the Illini never recovered.

The Spartans, who led 29-19 at halftime, built their lead to 34-23 in the first half.

The Illini, who were down 34-23 at halftime, fought back in the second half, but the Spartans held on for the win.

The win was a big boost for the Spartans, who are now in contention for the Big Ten title.

A little change of scenery can make a world of difference.

The Spartans, who were coming off a tough loss to Illinois, were able to come back and win 74-63 against the Illini.

The Illini, who were coming off a win against Michigan, were not able to keep up with the Spartans.

Otterbacher pays visit to MSU

By E.J. HILDEBRAND
State News Staff Writer

Thursday night as State Sen. John Otterbacher, D-Grand Rapids, visited MSU, expressing support for the team's recent 1-0 loss to Illinois. The 35-year-old state senator is also a former football player at Michigan State University. "We're proud of our team and their performance," he said. Otterbacher is also known for his support of women's rights and has been a vocal advocate for gender equality in sports. He has been involved in several initiatives to increase female participation in sports, including the formation of a women's soccer league in his district. Otterbacher is a strong supporter of the women's soccer team at Michigan State University and has been instrumental in their recent successes.
