No press at jury selection

WASHINGTON (AP) - The judge in the trial of a prominent New York trial lawyer and ex-congressman has again rejected the press from jury selection, saying there is no public interest in knowing how much prospective panels of jurors know about the accused former House Majority Leader James A. Wright Jr.

The judge also rejected the request to have a new person handle the problem of select jury and the case of the missing man who reportedly improperly impregnated an aide.

The order, the second on the day of the trial, U.S. District Court Judge Oliver G. Wallop, followed a hearing in which the defense argued that information about the accused former House Majority Leader James A. Wright Jr.

In the wake of a second order rejecting requests by the defense to have a new person handle the problem of selecting the jury and the case of the missing man who reportedly improperly impregnated an aide, the judge said he would refuse to allow the press to cover the trial.

The judge said he would allow the case of the missing man to go to a new person, but he said he would refuse to allow the press to cover the trial.

Wright began the trial by saying he would not allow the press to cover the trial.

He has to hope the jury selection done by today.

Peppers, dental x-rays recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Food and Drug Administration has recalled two dental x-ray films because they might contain traces of lead.

The agency announced that General Electric Co., Medical Systems Division, Milwaukee, Wis., has been contacted to request that the x-ray films be returned so the manufacturer can investigate the possibility that they contain traces of lead.

The recall is the result of a previous national survey of an agent.

The recall involves 28,376 units of the x-ray films, which have been distributed to dentists since March 21, 1976.

The Agency's investigation also found that General Electric Co., Medical Systems Division, Milwaukee, Wis., has been contacted to request that the x-ray films be returned so the manufacturer can investigate the possibility that they contain traces of lead.

Economy edges slightly up

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government and Wednesday that its index of leading economic indicators edged upward slightly last week as the nation began feeling the effects of the economy's recovery.

The Commerce Dept. said in its index, which is designed to predict turning points in the business cycle, showed a gain of 0.1 percent from the week before.

The gains were a result of the recovery in the manufacturing sector and the rise in the number of job openings.

Will budget cuts hurt aid?

By CAROLINE SNYDER

The Student Senate is appealing to the administration to reverse the proposed budget cuts that would reduce financial aid to students.

The office of Student Financial and Probationary Services plans to cut $2 million in budget this year, which will affect student financial aid distribution.

The Office of Student Financial and Probationary Services has received $1.4 million in state funds this year for financial aid purposes.

The Senate voted on Tuesday to ask the administration to reverse the proposed budget cuts, which will affect financial aid to students.

The Senate's primary concern is the reduction of financial aid to students, as the proposed budget cuts would result in a $2 million reduction in state funds for financial aid.

Slaying the athletic aid dragon

The recent NCAA investigation of MSU's athletic program has revealed the university's attempt to meet the demands of student-athletes by providing them with financial aid. However, the truth remains that these programs often fail to meet the needs of the student-athletes, and instead, put them in a position of debt.

Several factors contribute to this problem. First, the NCAA's regulations are too strict, forcing universities to limit their ability to provide financial aid. Second, many student-athletes are forced to take on loans and scholarships in order to pay for their tuition and living expenses. This can lead to a high level of stress and financial burden, and often results in poor academic performance.

In order to address this issue, universities need to work more closely with the NCAA to create a system that better supports student-athletes. This may involve creating more opportunities for scholarships and loans, as well as developing programs that provide additional support for student-athletes.

In conclusion, the NCAA's investigation of MSU's athletic program highlights the need for universities to better meet the needs of their student-athletes. By working together, we can create a system that supports and empowers these individuals, rather than placing them in a position of debt.

Angola: the power of a myth

News reports coming out of Angola are recent and have been seriously lacking in recent political analysis. This is perhaps because we are expecting a great deal of importance out of Angola and are coming to the wrong conclusions about the situation in that African nation.

Most of the coverage on Angola recently has done little more than report the war or depict the mainstream growing in the country.

All too often, the MPLA has been branded with pernicious political conclusions, while the other factions are praised as "pro-wrestles."

These conclusions are in fact exaggerated and largely mythical.

The myth (spearheaded by Henry Kissinger) that Angola has become an "anti-American" country and that the MPLA is part of a "revolutionary" cause, is based on the idea that Angola has become a "hotbed of terrorism." The MPLA has not been active in Angola since the war has been going on for several years.

Programmatically, there are serious differences between the MPLA and the other factions. They are all independent movements born out of the country's struggle for freedom.

You might think that by now that Angola would be a democracy for the sake of humanity in Africa, it is now.

However, when the War is over, Angola's new government will be under the control of the MPLA.

The MPLA's policies are both socialist and democratic. They are committed to the welfare of all Angolans, and they are working to build a strong and prosperous Angola.

The MPLA's commitment to social justice and democracy is evident in its policies on education, health care, and economic development. They have made significant strides in improving the quality of education, providing access to medical care, and promoting economic growth.

The MPLA's democratic principles are reflected in its approach to governance. They have established a democratic system of government, with a strong emphasis on the rule of law and the protection of human rights.

In conclusion, Angola is a country with a rich history and a bright future. Despite the challenges it has faced, the MPLA has demonstrated a commitment to the welfare of all Angolans and to the construction of a democratic and prosperous society. We should support their efforts to create a better future for Angola.

Knowing poetry like...an old friend

Certainly, there is an atmosphere of the end. The boss, architects on Wall Street, those who had been working there, are leaving. For some, it has been the beginning of a new life, perhaps a new career. For others, it has been a difficult time, with many forced to leave their jobs. People are either preparing to leave or are already leaving. It is a time of change and transition. Some are looking towards the future, while others are reminiscing about the past. It is a time of uncertainty and anticipation.

Elsie, is one of those who is leaving. She has been working in the office for several years and has built up a network of contacts. She is leaving to start a new job in another city. She is feeling excited and a little nervous about the future. It is a time of change and transition. Some are looking towards the future, while others are reminiscing about the past. It is a time of uncertainty and anticipation.

Peace Corps program matures, MSU volunteers strengthen output

It was 1961, and the Peace Corps program was just two years old when James Peace, a young man from Kentucky, decided to enlist and serve as a volunteer in the fledgling organization.

"I had been in the Peace Corps for about five months when I was assigned to a small village in Ghana called Obzien, where we were trying to introduce farming techniques and improve crop yields," Peace said.

"The work was difficult, but it was also rewarding. I learned a lot about the local culture and the people of Ghana. It was an eye-opening experience." Peace, now 26, has spent the last six years working with the Peace Corps, serving in several different countries and countries around the world.

"I've been fortunate to have had the opportunity to work with a diverse range of people and to see the impact that volunteers can have on communities," he said. "It's truly a unique and rewarding experience." Peace is currently serving in Costa Rica, where he is working on a project to improve access to clean water for rural communities.

"I'm excited to see where the future will take me," he said. "I plan to continue serving with the Peace Corps for as long as I can, and I hope to make a positive impact on the lives of those I serve."

MSU gymnasts meet Indiana

De ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

It's quite a challenge, but Coach Lisa Fsaltin believes the Spartans' women's gymnastics team will be in excellent shape when they meet Indiana at the University of Michigan this Saturday. "The Spartans will have a better team than we do," said Coach, who has been in charge of the Michigan team since 1981.

The Spartans, who are currently ranked 12th in the nation, have won six of their first seven meets this season. They have already won the Big Ten title and are currently leading the Big Ten standings. Coach is hoping for a strong showing against Indiana, who is currently ranked 10th in the nation.

The Spartans will be led by senior captain Jenison Harrell, who has been a key member of the team throughout her career. Harrell is expected to perform well in the floor exercise, where she has been known to excel. Coach is also looking for strong performances from juniors Sarah Smith and Amy Brown, who are both expected to contribute to the team's success.

The meet will be held at the University of Michigan's Crisler Center and is expected to draw a large crowd. "We're excited to be back on our home turf," said Coach, who is looking forward to seeing the Spartans perform in front of their home crowd.

In other news, the Michigan State University women's basketball team is off to a strong start this season, winning their first three games. The team is led by junior guard Kari Hall, who has been averaging 12.5 points per game. Coach Kevin Cooney is hoping for a strong performance from his team in their upcoming game against Indiana. "We're looking forward to seeing how we stack up against Indiana," said Coach, who is excited to see how his team performs against a tough conference opponent.

In local news, the Michigan State University football team has been practicing hard for their upcoming game against the University of Michigan. The Spartans are currently ranked 12th in the nation and are hoping to pull off a victory in their upcoming game.

Coach is looking forward to seeing how his team performs against the Wolverines and is hoping for a strong showing against their in-state rivals. "We're excited to be back on our home turf," said Coach, who is looking forward to seeing how his team performs in front of their home crowd.

The Harman Kardon $100 Challenge

We've got $100 waiting for you. Bring in any commercially available receiver, regardless of price (except for another Harman Kardon product). If that receiver surpasses the square wave response of the HK 430 or 730 at 20Hz and 20,000Hz, we'll give you the $100. Why are we making this challenge? Square wave response is profoundly useful because it is a precise measurement of musical quality. It can be said that an instrument which fails to produce an excellent square wave response is limited in musical authenticity.

so come on in and match your receiver's square wave response against the 430 and 730. If it's better you get $100—cash. If not, listen to the 430 and 730. You'll find that in all but absolute power levels; they're the sonic equivalents of any individual component system. The implication of a comparison with conventional receivers is obvious.

This offer good noon 'til 9 p.m.
