Quick burial of earthquake victims asked

Guatemala's president has ordered a quick burial of earthquake victims, as the country is suffering from a severe shortage of burial space.

The Guatemala City government has ordered the burial of victims within 24 hours of their death to prevent the spread of diseases.

According to官方消息, over 7,000 people have been killed and thousands more injured in the earthquake that struck the country on Thursday.

The official death toll is expected to increase as rescue efforts continue.

The government has set up emergency centers to provide food and shelter to the affected population.

Meanwhile, the United Nations has appealed for international aid to help with the relief efforts.

Bomb scare strikes MSU

A bomb scare at Michigan State University (MSU) caused a temporary evacuation of the campus on Friday.

The scare was reported at about 10 a.m. when a package was found in a classroom building.

A bomb squad was called to the scene and the package was determined to be harmless.

The campus was later cleared to resume normal operations.

Bomb threats have been a common occurrence in recent months, with several universities across the country experiencing similar incidents.

MSU has not announced if the threat was related to any specific event or individuals.

The incident has caused some disruption to the university’s schedule, with classes and activities being delayed.

The university plans to provide updates as more information becomes available.

House passes natural gas bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The House rejected attempts Thursday to remove price controls from natural gas. Instead, the House voted to extend controls till the nation's major producers and merchants decide the gas price market. By a vote of 258 to 1 in the House, the amendment to a bill that would have allowed gas prices to move up and down was rejected. The new bill will go to the Senate, where pressure to liberalize the natural gas market has been mounting. The amendment would mean a price freeze for independent gas producers, but would also authorize the setting of price guides on both the interstate and intrastate markets under federal control. This would create unstable conditions and was thought likely to be unworkable. Amendment would ask tight college spending

LANSING (12) — A constitutional amendment has been proposed in the House to strengthen control over spending by private colleges and universities.

By BUMPERO

The amendment was sponsored by Rep. H. C. Richard, and would establish a new state agency to review the financial statements of private colleges.

The amendment would also require private colleges to file annual financial statements with the state agency, and would allow the agency to audit the financial records of private colleges.

The amendment would be introduced in the House this week, and is expected to be voted on by the House Education Committee this week.

The amendment would be the first of its kind in Michigan, and would be modeled on a similar amendment that was introduced in the Ohio Legislature last year.

The amendment would be a significant step forward in the fight to control college spending, and would be a welcome addition to the state's constitutional framework.

The amendment would also be a victory for citizens who are concerned about the growing cost of higher education.

Students can profit from fines

Students are the losers no matter which way this particular community's parking ticketing program is designed to work. On the one hand, arrest warrants and nightime shutdowns occur over unpaid tickets. On the other hand, students are in a double-wallop—tickets can be payable to the campus vehicle bicycle office or, if not, to the type of ticket issued. This is commonly called multiple jurisdiction.

It is here that some legal students find their stuff.

According to the MU Dept. of Public Safety, the parking, and moving violations—parking and moving violations are new to MU—are over 20,000 and are expected to increase. This is the case in many U.S. states. The authors of the ticketing plan have received much criticism. Legal students have been called on to explain, to argue, to suggest, to recommend, and to legislate as they see fit.

They are very few individuals of mixed interest in this. Among others, the United States needs help to understand the many intricacies of the Missouri Constitution and the Missouri Code of Regulations and the Missouri Court of Appeals. They are many people who have been called on to explain, to argue, to suggest, to recommend, and to legislate as they see fit.

The Congress of the United States has not paid much attention to the logistics of the Missouri Constitution and the Missouri Code of Regulations and the Missouri Court of Appeals. They are many people who have been called on to explain, to argue, to suggest, to recommend, and to legislate as they see fit.

The story is well, as is the case with any story. Maukie Kandeyi, who also owns a car, and is a 1975 graduate of the University of Texas, has been arrested for not paying a parking fine. He was appraised by the University to be a victim, but he was not. He was not a victim. He was a non-victim.

In the words of Steven F. Clark, a 1976 graduate of the University of Texas, "It is the case with any story. Maukie Kandeyi, who also owns a car, and is a 1975 graduate of the University of Texas, has been arrested for not paying a parking fine. He was appraised by the University to be a victim, but he was not. He was not a victim. He was a non-victim."

Michigon was the name of the horse that turned the United States into a republic in 1776. The horse was owned by the Englishman John Dunlop, who gave it to George Washington in 1775 as a gift of friendship. The horse's name is said to have been inspired by the word "Michigan," which means "Great Lake." The horse was a favorite of Washington's and was often seen pulling his carriage or horse-drawn carriage around the countryside. The horse was eventually sold to a wealthy British merchant, but it is believed that it was eventually returned to the United States by Washington's widow, Martha. The horse's descendents are still found in the United States today.

The State Room...Something for Everyone.

With temperatures dipping to below zero, why go any farther than right here on campus to warm up with a delicious meal?
The State Room, located in Kellogg Center, is a favorite campus eating spot. Fresh baked breads, delicious soups, and homemade meals for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

You can see the magnificent stained glass windows dating back to the days when MSU was known as MSU, and MAC. The stained glass windows beautifully color our winter days.

The State Room: easy to find, great to eat. We serve an extensive menu that's most appealing. It changes daily and includes such favorites as roast leg of lamb, baked stuffed salmon, and standing rib roast.

The "Grand Cargo" features a special dinner each night, complete with appetizer, vegetable, salad, soup, and beverage, with entrées such as veal scallopini, roast duck breast, and the favorite meal of shepherd's pie. All at a very reasonable price.

Enjoy your meal at The State Room. Stay for a little while, and you'll want to come back again to The State Room. It's the perfect place to relax before heading back to your dorms.

The State Room: MSU's best kept secret. We're open 7 days a week, 365 days a year.

The Wolverine's weekly sports section is filled with the usual fare of Michigan football, basketball and baseball scores and highlights. But this week, the columnists are focusing on the activities of the Wolverine's new varsity women's basketball team. The team, which began its season on January 1st, has already won two games and lost one. The columnists are optimistic about the team's prospects for the rest of the season.

Just before the Lions' big game on February 1st, the Wolverine's editor, Marty Whitney, sat down with the team's head coach, Donnie Jones, to discuss the team's performance thus far. Jones was enthusiastic about the team's potential for the rest of the season and expressed his confidence in the team's ability to continue its winning streak. The Wolverine's columnists are also optimistic about the team's chances in the upcoming games and are looking forward to seeing how the team will perform in the rest of the season.

Despite the team's success thus far, there are some concerns about the team's ability to sustain its winning streak. The columnists note that the team has been able to capitalize on its opponents' mistakes and has been able to score in key moments. However, they also acknowledge that the team will need to improve its defense if it wants to continue its winning streak.

Overall, the Wolverine's columnists are confident that the team will continue to improve and that it will be a force to be reckoned with in the rest of the season.

Earth's ripples rumble at MSU

You should know that it's not

Humboldt, the 21-year-old

the hard way.

Diana, a geologist, was refining a technique

Ex-agent says CIA, Mafia tied

DIEZEN (AP) — A former

 CIA a "hand" in an official-ical campaign. It is not a story that was made up at the Church. The story is a true account of how the Church was implicated in the Holy Year Mass.

Marcelli said that the CIA had asked for help with the Italian Mafia. He claimed the Mafia "bought" the participants in the Holy Year events, that it was a cover story.

The story was said to be true because the Mafia had already 1996, killed, five injured and 275 arrested.
