A severe earthquake, with an estimated magnitude of 7.5 on the Richter scale, struck the Angolan capital of Luanda on September 26, 1994. The earthquake, which occurred at a depth of 15 kilometers, caused significant damage and loss of life. The epicenter of the earthquake was located near the town of Luanda, approximately 15 kilometers from the city center.

The earthquake was felt across a wide area, including the surrounding provinces of Cuando Kubango, Malanje, and Cuando Cubango. Casualties and damage were reported throughout the region, with some areas experiencing severe destruction.

The earthquake caused numerous buildings to collapse, including many in the city of Luanda. The National University of Angolana, one of the largest universities in the country, was reported to have been severely damaged. Several hospitals and clinics were also affected, with some medical facilities reporting a backlog of patients seeking treatment.

The livelihood of many Angolans was disrupted by the earthquake, with widespread destruction to homes and infrastructure. The government and international organizations were working to provide aid and relief to affected populations.

The earthquake also triggered aftershocks, which continued for several days following the initial event. The aftershocks caused additional panic and fear among the population, with many residents choosing to evacuate their homes temporarily.

The earthquake was a significant event in Angolan history, highlighting the fragility of the country's infrastructure and the need for improved earthquake preparedness and response mechanisms.

Few seek ASMSU office despite nearing deadline

The ASMSU (American Student Movement of Southern University) elections were approaching, and despite the looming deadline, few students were expressing interest in seeking office. The elections were an opportunity for students to influence campus policies and represent their interests.

Advertising will reappear in future student directory

In a letter to the editor, ASMSU President [Name] announced that advertising would return to the student directory in the future. The decision was made after discussions with the university administration and a review of student feedback.

Skater invited to give speech

LANSING, Mich. — Skater Tony Jackson, known for his freestyle skating skills, was invited to speak at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. The event was organized as part of the university's annual celebration of diversity and inclusion.

Tony Jackson's visit was part of a series of guest speakers invited to challenge students to think critically about issues of race, gender, and identity. The event was well-attended, with students and faculty discussing the importance of diversity and inclusion in higher education.

Jackson's speech focused on his personal journey as a skater and the importance of perseverance and resilience in the face of adversity. His experiences as a skater provided a unique perspective on resilience and the value of pursuing one's passions.

MSU diver aims for Olympics

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

When John Manchester, swimming coach at Michigan State University, was asked what the MSU swimming team was doing in their swim meet held in the recently renovated MSU Aquatic Center, he replied, "We're working towards the Olympics." The MSU swimming team has been preparing for the 1978 Olympics, and Manchester is confident that his team will be among the top competitors in the world.

Manchester's optimism is based on the team's recent success. In the 1977-78 season, the team won the Big Ten Conference championship for the first time in 30 years. Manchester attributed the team's success to the hard work of his athletes and the support of the university.

The team's focus on the Olympics is evident in their training regimen. Manchester said that the team spends up to 15 hours a week in the pool, and that they compete in meets throughout the year to prepare for the Olympics.

In addition to the team's efforts, Manchester has also been instrumental in developing the MSU Aquatic Center. The center includes a 50-meter Olympic pool, a diving well, and a fitness center. Manchester said that the center will be a major asset in the team's bid for the Olympics.

Although Manchester is confident about the team's chances, he said that the road to the Olympics is long and difficult. He said that the team will continue to work hard and to believe in themselves as they prepare for the biggest event in their careers.
