Forum raises issues; housing gets spotlight

By JOHN MCINTYRE

The spirit of the campus movement is alive and well, as evidenced by two events which drew hundreds of participants to the Lansing capital city.Saturday was a day of housing protest. Cops fired the parking lot and some came from other cities in a large party to protest the housing shortage. The next day, a rally to protest a new law was held. The law restricts the amount of land that can be developed for housing in Michigan. The new law is expected to go into effect next year.

Area groups critical of S-1

By MAURICE GILL

Over the past two years, Congress has held extensive hearings on the proposed S-1 legislation. Although the legislation has not yet been enacted, it has been widely discussed in the national media. The legislation would, among other things, allow the government to seize property from individuals who are not in compliance with certain environmental regulations.

Criminal code change controversial

By JAY HUNTER

The state's criminal code is being changed, and the proposed changes are being controversial. Some people are concerned that the new code will be too lenient, while others believe it will be too strict. The code changes are expected to be voted on by the Michigan legislature in the next few weeks.

Marshall again tagged for disturbance

By ROBERT BROWN

The future of Marshall is in doubt as the college is facing financial problems. The school is currently in the process of determining whether it will be able to continue operating next year. A court ruling has delayed the decision until next week.

Marshall president, James L. Marshall, has been charged with failing to report a $100,000 loan to the college. The loan was made by a bank to pay off Marshall's student loans. The president has been charged with perjury and false statements.

The trial is expected to begin next month.

TOURING (AP) — After heading for eight days to the shores near China, Richard Nixon landed back in California on Saturday from his historic journey overseas. At home, he spent a day at Mar-a-Lago and was to stop sight in Abingdon.

As President Nixon arrived, China was sealed. There were no announcements, speeches or departing statements. The only comment from the White House was a note made by the press in the name of the State Department, held by a man who looked like a secretary. The note stated:

"The President's first stop will be to see the Chinese premier. He will be in the area for a few days."

President Nixon and his wife traveled back to Washington for a trip to Miami Beach later in the month.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a 90-minute session, rejected a challenge to the president's authority to issue an executive order on foreign relations.

In a 7-to-2 decision, the court held that the president may issue such orders without the consent of Congress.

The court's decision was announced by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who said:

"The president is the highest authority in the land.

ASMSU strives for better refund policy

Anyone who has dropped a class, and received nothing but angry words, realizes that the student's refund policy is worthlessly inadequate. At ASMSU, students who drop a class within the first five days get 50% of the tuition returned, and nothing is returned after the initial five days. Every year in effet is mounted to change this policy, but every year such an effort is rewarded with the same thing that a such day drop is nothing.

This year, though, things may be different. At the initiation of ASMSU president Brian Rainfield, the Legal Services cabinet has been rigorously pursuing a change.

Three proposals have emerged from the triangle, and hopefully will be able to survive the traditional year and end of term.

The first proposal would offer students a refund of up to 75% within the first five class days, but stay with the present policy of refunding remaining tuition after five days. (That state of students would recover their refund during this period.)

The second proposal would extend the first five day limit to ten days.

The third proposal would be identical with the first in regards to the first five days, but would offer to state students a chance to get 20% of their money back until mid-term. (Again, the cost of state students would be reduced by refunding during this period.)

The first proposal would extend the first five day limit to ten days. Both proposals have come with remarkable - and alarming - predictability, low can be surprised at the administration for fading. But that is why the three plans all are so attractive, that they all seem to aim at a compromise between the needs of the university, and the lack of equity in present policy.

Next year, ASMSU plans to meet with the administration to discuss the discrepancies between the three proposals, and also to bring a year's worth of effort a little closer to a successful conclusion. Anyone who has proposed five course credit after the five day limit will know how sweet that success will be.

And, though I do not address any self, I would suggest measures to improve our schools. It does not seem fair to the students to send you your work, the last thing you can do is to have your work returned to you. It is important to have your work returned to you. It is important to have your work returned to you. It is important to have your work returned to you.

WASHINGTON — From the ashes of a political career that had seemed doomed from the start, the ascendance of Republican Bill Clinton to the presidency of the United States is a triumph of hope over despair, of a leader who had been written off in 1976 and again in 1980 has become a national star, of a man who had been discounted as a political dogma has now been elected as the leader of the free world.

But the man who has been elected as the leader of the free world is not the man who was once dismissed as a political dogma. It is a man who has been elected as the leader of the free world.

And, though I do not address any self, I would suggest measures to improve our schools. It does not seem fair to the students to send you your work, the last thing you can do is to have your work returned to you. It is important to have your work returned to you. It is important to have your work returned to you. It is important to have your work returned to you.
Liberalization continues for Spanish people

By William E. Buckley, Jr.

No Alfredo Lopez Mateos, the constitutionalist Franco and his successor, the nonconstitutionalist Adolfo Suarez, among them. It is probably the least likely to involve a military junta and the most likely to succeed in bringing the country closer to democracy.

As for PM, the party’s old guard, as a matter of pride, he believes Spain is beginning to look like NATO. As a military matter, Spain has never been more secure. That is why its leaders are calling for a constitutional monarchy, a form of government that has been used in several countries.

Mr. Mateos, the President of Spain, says Spain will be more secure under a constitutional monarchy. He also believes that Spain will become more democratic under a constitutional monarchy. He also believes that Spain will become more democratic under a constitutional monarchy.

But the communists in Spain have always been opposed to a constitutional monarchy. They believe that a constitutional monarchy will make it easier for the communists to take over the country.

Shah of Iran is CIA puppet

The story of the Shah of Iran and the CIA is one of the most intriguing and controversial stories in modern history. The Shah of Iran, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, was a puppet of the CIA for many years. The CIA helped him to remain in power, and the Shah was loyal to the CIA.

The Shah was a brutal dictator who ruled Iran with an iron fist. He imprisoned not only political enemies, but also his own family members. He was known for his human rights abuses and his persecution of the Iranian people.

The CIA was involved in many of the Shah’s actions. They helped him to overthrow other governments, and they also provided him with arms and funding.

The Shah was eventually overthrown in a revolution in 1979. He fled the country and died in exile.

The Shah’s regime was a brutal dictatorship, and the CIA’s involvement in it was problematic. The Shah was a puppet of the CIA, and the CIA was a puppet of the United States. It is a story of political manipulation and intrigue that continues to fascinate people today.
Bumping, hustling, foxtrotting

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

Your feet are numb and your sweat-soaked T-shirt clings to your aching muscles. You've spent the better part of your weekend dancing and although what you need more than anything else is to soak your feet, you know that the cure for multiple sclerosis may be reached sooner through your efforts.

The Delta Tau Delta Dance for Strength, held this past weekend in Meridian Mall to raise money for research into multiple sclerosis, well surpassed the amount of money contributed in the marathons of the past two years and the participants partied in great form. "I'd dance all over again if a band could provide the music," said Denise Gazzazari, junior, 570 South Wonders Hall, who along with veteran marathon winner Rick Young, senior, 576 South Wonders Hall, shared the title of first place in this year's contest. "There are certain times when you feel like you can't go on, but the crowd spurs you on and it makes you dance even harder."

The couple that danced its way into second place was Dick Pacer, sophomore, 610 East Holmes Hall, and Lydia Fischer, sophomore, 308 East Holmes Hall. As the 50-hour endurance contest was in its last Sunday afternoon, the dancers continued to bump, hustl and jitterbug, seemingly with no intent to spare.

"I know my feet are sore, but I just don't think about it," said Maryanne Sari while shuffling to the rock n' roll music. "The audience and friends that make the time go quick."

Know why we carry Advent speakers? Because they're terrific, all four of them. You can spend a tubeful of money and not do nearly as well.

The reason that Advent speakers have become the standards of value in the stereo business is that they do exactly what they are supposed to do.

We aren't designed in imitation of anyone else's, or to make blind line of speakers with entries every ten dollars or so to make sure to get everyone's money. What they do is what we really hoped for, at a price that's less than you expected to pay.

These four Advents. The original, which costs $90 to $100 depending on cabinet finish, was designed to compete with the most expensive speakers in every audible respect for a fraction of their price. The Special Advents, which cost $90, the same range as the originals (not close, but the same) but aren't the same sound but they play quite a bit. The new Advent 2's which cost $90, come within $50 of the bottom end of the other two (plenty low though for the heaviest rock stuff and virtually everything else) and they're the lowest-priced speakers you can find with noticeably convincing overall sound.

Nugent, Pretty Things outstanding

By DAVE HAMARTINO

How does one categorize the Pretty Things? That would be a tough one to decide.

In the late ‘60s, the Pretty Things were considered one of the greats of the garage scene, with a sound that was a cross between early Cream and the Kinks. Their records were often sparse, with a lot of space between the notes, giving them a unique and timeless quality. They were known for their psychedelic lyrics and their ability to create a sense of space and time on their records.

The Pretty Things were formed in London in 1965, and they remained active until the early ‘70s. Their most famous lineup included Paul Revere & the Raiders, who were also a product of the garage scene.

The Pretty Things were not without controversy; their music was often classified as “obscenity” by record companies, and their albums were frequently censored or banned. Despite this, they continued to make music and toured extensively, even visiting the United States to play at Woodstock.

In conclusion, the Pretty Things were a significant force in the garage rock scene, and their influence can still be heard in the music of many contemporary bands. Their unique sound and their ability to create a sense of space and time on their records make them a true pioneer of the genre.
Almost assured of their highest finish ever in the NCAA, the Spartans began digging into their second place position in the league with a weekend sweep against Colorado College Saturday and Saturday. MSU finished the season against U-M last weekend.

MSU's loses: Furlow sets mark

By JOHN BARR

Spartans basketball finished sixth in the Big Ten. Furlow has scored against the last 35 games, a mark that tied him for the second most consistent player in the Big Ten. Furlow also set the Michigan State record for points scored in a season, with 105 points. Furlow's consistency and ability to step up in big games have earned him a spot on the all-Big Ten team.

Double fencing wins sets season mark

The MSU men's fencing team finished second at the national championships, adding to their season record of 15-5. This is the second consecutive season the team has finished in the top three at the championships.

Gymnastics end season with disappointing loss

The MSU gymnastics team finished in 10th place at the national championships, ending their season with a disappointing loss. The team struggled with consistency and execution, resulting in a final score of 196.125.

Weekend results

MSU conclude regular season with sweep over Minnesota. The Spartans ended their season with a sweep over Minnesota, winning both matches 4-3. This is the team's first sweep over Minnesota in 12 years.

ROSET SESS SCORING RECORD

MSU hockey team win

By MIKE JENKINS

The MSU hockey team won 6-4 against the University of Michigan on Saturday. The team scored early in the first period, and held on to lead throughout the game. The win marked the end of the season for the Spartans, who finished with a record of 20-12-2.

Nails serve as health indicators, announces local ‘nail technician’

By JON CICERONI

Local Nail Supply Worker

Tuesday, January 14, 2023

The concept that nails can serve as health indicators has gained popularity in recent years. According to local ‘nail technician’ Sandra Ott, who operates a salon in downtown Coldwater, nails are not just for beauty, but they can also provide valuable health information.

"Nails are like fingerprints of our body," Ott said. "What we see in nails can tell us a lot about our overall health." Ott pointed out that nails can reveal information about blood flow, liver function, and even nutritional status.

"One of the most common health indicators we see in nails is white spots," Ott explained. "These spots can indicate a lack of certain nutrients, such as zinc or iron. By analyzing these spots, we can recommend supplements or changes in diet to improve nail health." Ott also mentioned that ridges in nails can be a sign of stress or anxiety, while yellow nails can indicate a liver problem.

"But nails are not just for women," Ott continued. "Men can also use nails as a health indicator. For instance, thickened nails can be a sign of diabetes or circulatory issues." Ott encouraged everyone to keep an eye on their nails and consider them a tool for maintaining a healthy lifestyle.

Ott’s salon offers a variety of services, including manicures and pedicures, as well as health consultations to help clients understand the connection between nail health and overall well-being.

American child-rearing criticized

By JON CICERONI

Local Parenting Expert

Tuesday, January 14, 2023

The issue of child-rearing has been a topic of discussion in recent years. According to local parenting expert Beverly Cipriano, the current methods may not be as effective as previously thought.

"We are seeing a rise in problems such as anxiety, depression, and attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD)," Cipriano said. "These issues could be linked to the way we rear our children." Cipriano criticized the "helicopter parenting" approach, where parents are overprotective and intervene in every aspect of their child’s life.

"Children need to learn how to make decisions and solve problems on their own," Cipriano said. "They need to develop resilience and independence, which can be cultivated through challenges and setbacks.

"It is important for parents to set boundaries and teach their children the consequences of their actions," Cipriano added. "This will help them develop a sense of responsibility and self-discipline." Cipriano encouraged parents to trust their children and allow them to grow and make mistakes, as these experiences are crucial for development.

Cipriano’s advice is based on her years of experience as a classroom teacher and a child guidance counselor. She emphasizes the importance of creating a supportive and nurturing environment for children to thrive.

Earth appears to be next stop on comet’s heavenly itinerary

By JON CICERONI

Local Astronomy Expert

Tuesday, January 14, 2023

Our know-how has increased dramatically with the advent of new telescopes and the improvement of our understanding of the universe. And now, according to local astronomy expert Mark V, it appears that the Earth may be the next stop on the comet’s itinerary.

"Scientists have been studying comet 2P/Encke for years, and we have noticed a pattern," V said. "Every few years, the comet appears to be getting closer to Earth, which suggests that it may be making its way towards our planet.

"Comet 2P/Encke is a periodic comet, which means it returns to the inner solar system at regular intervals," V explained. "The last time it was close to Earth was in 1999, and the next predicted approach will be in 2032.

"It is important to monitor the comet’s movements and its potential effect on Earth," V added. "We must be prepared for any eventuality, and it is crucial to have a well-prepared emergency response plan in place.

V’s research is based on his years of observing the sky and his expertise in celestial mechanics. He encourages the community to stay informed and prepared for any possible impact from the comet.
